

Successful Cultivation

A Kansas farmer averaged nine bushels of wheat to the acre. His neighbor just across the road, using the same kind and grade of seed, averaged forty-four bushels. The increased yield due to difference in methods of cultivation.

Methods have much to do with success along any line. Can you hope to get ahead faster as long as you handle your financial affairs as you have in the past? Why not try our check account plan—others have found it the better method for cultivating success.

Corn picking in March sounds funny, but that's what they are doing the last few days, Herbert Fitch having 30 acres in the field yet, putting several men to work, while many of the other farmers also have patches of five and ten acres yet in the field, which they are picking now.—Hudsonite.

Rev. Bergsaker went to Canton last Thursday where in the evening he delivered a lecture to the students of Augustana College. He reports the college in a flourishing condition with about 280 students.—Dell Rapids Tribune.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Swift of Esteline, are the proud parents of a baby girl which put in its appearance Monday. Mrs. Swift is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Lehner.—Brookings Register.

Erick Selom, who has been suffering for an extended time with rheumatism, was taken to a sanitarium at Shakopee, Minn., Thursday morning for treatment. He was accompanied by his son Enander and Dr. R. M. Wildish.

Mrs. E. Madden and children, who had been visiting relatives and friends here for several days, returned to her home at Canton Thursday noon. She was accompanied by Miss Cora Madden.—Worthing Enterprise.

Electric Lighting is Practicable For The Farm Home.

There are a number of electric lighting outfits on the market which are suited to the farm home, according to Dr. B. B. Brackett, of the State College Electrical Engineering Department. He says, "In most cases these outfits are designed to operate any number of lights up to ten or twelve for the very small plants and any number of lights up to fifty or sixty for the moderate size plants. All the typical outfits of this class consist of the following parts:—a gasoline engine, a small dynamo, a storage battery, a switch board, wires for distributing the current, the lighting fixtures and the lights."

Dr. Brackett cautions prospective purchasers of farm electric lighting outfits against using too small storage batteries. He states that in general the storage battery should be of such size that when once well charged it will supply all the current needed by the lamps for one week or more. Then the engine and dynamo should be large enough to fully recharge the battery in six or seven hours. Only under unusual conditions will it be convenient to use an outfit that requires the engine to run more than six or seven hours per week. So small a battery can be used that it needs recharging each day, or at other frequent intervals. Then, too, the dynamo might be so small that it could not completely charge the battery in seven hours time. Any of these conditions would make it necessary to run the engine too much, unless the power is also needed for other purposes, and is large enough to drive the dynamo and other work at the same time.

Dr. Brackett states: "The parts of a complete lighting outfit are not always made by the same company and whether the size of whole equipments and the relative proportions of the parts are suited to the purchaser's interests cannot always be determined by one unfamiliar with electrical apparatus. Many times the batteries and dynamos are rated in technical terms which means nothing to the layman."

Another Strong Point in Bluebell Cream Separators

ON many separators when the neck bearing gets out of adjustment it is necessary to have an expert from the factory come and make the adjustment.

On others it is necessary to purchase a new neck bearing, and oftentimes a new bowl and spindle go with it. The neck bearing on the Bluebell cream separator requires no adjustment, adapts itself automatically to all the strains of starting and stopping, and can be handled by one of the family just as well as by a factory expert. Even in the hands of a careless operator, it is practically impossible for this neck bearing to cause trouble. If you have owned and run almost any other make of cream separator for any length of time, you will appreciate the trouble that is eliminated by the neck bearing in the Bluebell cream separator. On this bearing depends much of the efficiency of a separator. Come in and learn more about the Bluebell.
