Musky Name Matter of Choice.

In Sunday's paper an article from Maskinonge, Quebec, states that I take issue with Kit Clarke as to the spelling of the great pike. It was in defining the meaning of the word or its derivation that I desired to explain.

Do not misapprehend me. I do not for a moment state that maskinonge is any more correct than maskalonge or muskellunge. It seems to me it is largely a matter of choice or the sections of the country.

Perhaps it is rather unfortunate that there should be so many variations. As I have found the best fishing in regions where the term "maskinonge" is so extensively used I have always fallen into that method of spelling, though I often have used the other spellings, such as muskellunge.

After all, "lunge" is perhaps most expressive and easily spoken. The fish is noted for its vicious, bulldoglike shakes and lunges of the head and body, and therefore this latter part of its name is very appropriate. Ordinarily I always use that word in talking of the fish. NATURE FACTOR.

Get Your Dinner Cards Early.

The dinner of the Rod and Gun contributors of THE SUN will be held next Monday night in the New Grand Hotel, Broadway and Thirty-first street, at 7 o'clock.

The big dining room of the New Grand Hotel has been turned over to the Rod and Gun contributors of THE SUN on that night. The room has a certain capacity. All those contributors who desire cards of admission to the dinner must send for them at once to A. M. Stoddart, THE SUN, in order to have a place. When the capacity of the room is reached no more dinner cards will be issued. Dinner cards for contributors can be had upon application in person or by mail. The cost is $1.25.

Dinner Programme Closes To-day.

The dinner programme, which will be distributed on the night of the contribs dinner, will be sent to the printer to-day. All those who expect to have their names printed in that programme must send their dinner acceptances and checks today or be omitted from the printed list of diners.

Moving Pictures for Contribs' Dinner.

The contribs' dinner, at the New Grand Hotel, Broadway and Thirty-first street, on Monday night next, will have moving pictures showing the work of the Conservation Commission, the care for the fish, forest and game interests of the Empire State. Warwick C. Carpenter not only will show interesting and unusual pictures but will add a snappy talk as the views are shown.

"Put Me Down."

Though election frenzy now is o'er,
Postmortem fruit it surely bears:
So, Professor's gentle dinner hint
Made "Yours Truly" wonder with a grunt;
It held both the din at the contribs' dinner.

For, since the ladies of the West
Has shown that "votes" has stood the test
A loving, yet suffragette-ing wife
Has proved through very gracious strife,
That I should win, to be a winner,
And swell the din at the contribs' dinner.

In a wily sort of mock submission,
I sought an affirmative permission;
And, though I preened on being foxy,
She fingered a loaded shotgun boxy;
And so the sin left me a sinner,
Still to win, to be a winner,
And add the din at the contribs' dinner.

Well, I'm no longer bed in doubt,
I've put my love, the enemy to rout:
I hurled the slogan, "Equal Right,"
Till she buckled with a "Go," and "Good Night."
That put the spike into the spinner,
Took the sin from off the sinner,
Let me win, and be a winner,
So I could "Hike" at the contribs' dinner.
Newark, N. J., Nov. 23. D'LEAT.

Regular Fellows From Newark Coming.

You can count on me. I'll be there. The Professor's suggestion is one of the best I've heard in a long time. Just imagine what a time we'll have, sweet fishermen and sailors jabbering away on his pet subject. The Tower of Babel won't be in it for confusion. And we'll all get better acquainted. And perhaps we'll be a little more charitable when we criticise the other fellow's articles in the future.

Fishermen (notice I didn't write "anglers") and hunters are all regular fellows. I've found out since they've acquainted and I expect to see a big, happy family next Monday night.

We're getting together a bunch from this city. Just let you know we're on the map and are here. CELMOH.

Pickerel Grows to Fit Size of Home.

I have just read the letter from P. A. F. Walbridge, Where and What Is a Pickerel, and have also read the many letters on the same subject in the Rod and Gun column during the past two months.

All of these widely differing statements as to the size of this fish are correct, and the reason is that the pickerel grows to fit the size of his home. The same fish will only about half the size in a pond or small lake that he will be in one of the great lakes or the St. Lawrence, and if he lives in a brook he is smaller yet.

I caught a three-pound pickerel in a brook fishing for trout only a few inches long which could not have weighed a pound. A fish of this age in one of the great lakes would have weighed three pounds at least, more likely four.

While a four pound pickerel in one of our nearby lakes is a big fish, in the great lakes ten pounders are not uncommon, and they have been caught as large as twenty. But what a difference between the active, snappy mustang of the ponds and the big, lugging truck horse of the larger bodies of water. Now, Mr. Editor, I'm sure you will believe he is the same fish. FLETCHER WILLIAMS.
New York, Nov. 22.

In THE SUN of November 19 I told of California and Hawaiian angling.

One need but pay a ten minute visit to the wonderful fish market in Honolulu to be convinced that the big game fish are there. Rod and reel fishing, however, was comparatively unknown prior to my visit there last winter and angling accommodations were not what they should have been.

All the drawbacks are now being rapidly done away with. The Hawaii Tuna Club has been organized after the plan of the Catalina Tuna Club and is going strong. Its members are men of real sportsmanship, with the money and the will to do whatever should be done.

A clubhouse has been established in Honolulu and branches or camps will be established at right points on the different islands. Steps are being taken to provide power launches similar to those in use at Catalina.

With properly trained boatmen, such as are to be had in southern California, at the service of the anglers, Hawaii will very shortly become an angling paradise and the Mecca of fishermen the world over.

H. Gooding Field, secretary of the Hawaii Tuna Club, Honolulu, will gladly furnish information to anglers and will go out of his way to make things pleasant for angling visitors. JAMES W. JUMP.

New Wood Reel Prevents Back Lash.

Harris From of 1831 Southern Boulevard, Bronx, has just patented a wood reel that has a push button which when put into operation stops immediately any back lash and does not permit the line to become entangled in any way. The reel is also so fastened to the rod that it cannot become loose, turn or shake itself free.

Operation on Blackfish Saves Life.

That story about the blackfish with the gold teeth evidently is doubted by those whom I have heard it discussed with.

Let me tell of the first operation of tapeutomy ever performed on a fish. It happened years ago, when the steamer Al Foster ran to the fishing banks.

In one of the lower tanks of the New York Aquarium were two great blackfish, veritable ocean bulldogs, with immense jaws and mighty shoulders. They were the healthy, perfect fish, exceptionally active and lively. The larger of the two weighed well toward fifteen pounds and was a monster of his kind.

Captures of tautog as huge as this are rare and it is rarer still to save them alive and in good health in confinement. The tautog taken on this voyage was kept in good health but he actually had been saved from death by coming to the Aquarium.

He was taken on the fishing banks by one of the small boats from the steamer, at a depth of 30 fathoms. When he came to the hook it was noticed that the fish seemed nearly dead. He flapped his tail very feebly for a big fellow, and by the time he arrived at the Aquarium it seemed that he would die before morning.

Dr. Tarleton H. Bean had the fish placed in one of the observation tanks at once and soon found that the trouble was caused by a clogging up of the intestines with a mass of crushed crabs.

The fish had gorged itself on crustacea and the shells had formed into a hard and big conglomeration. It was evident that death was a question of only a few hours, and it was decided to adopt heroic measures.

The fish was taken out of the tank and its head covered with wet seaweed to enable him to breathe. It was too feeble to flop around, as in a very few minutes Dr. Bean had completed what probably was the first operation of tapeutomy ever performed on a fish.

The impedimenta mass of shells was removed, and the fish, after careful cleaning and attention to the wound, was replaced in the observation tank. He was much improved in a few hours and lived for years. BLACKFISH.

For Eastern New York—Overcast in the south and rain, changing to snow, in the north portion to-day; much colder; to-morrow fair and colder; west gales.

For New Jersey—Partly overcast and colder to-day; to-morrow fair and colder, western gales.

For Northern New England—Rain, followed by clearing and colder weather to-day; to-morrow fair and colder; southwest and west gales.

For Western New York—Rain, probably turning to snow, and colder to-day; to-morrow snow flurries and colder; west gales.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—The first well defined storm of large area that has been present this time was central over southern Lake Michigan yesterday and embraced all sections east of the plains States. Rain fell in the Mississippi Valley and at almost all points eastward and higher temperatures prevailed throughout the eastern half of the country.

The only freezing weather in that section occurred over northern Lake Superior, northeastern New York and New England.

The pressure was high and temperatures generally lower in the plateau and Rocky Mountain States and it was cooler from the lower Missouri Valley southward.

A little snow fell in South Dakota and Wyoming, but temperatures were not more than twenty-eight degrees below the freezing point in any section.

In this city the day was cloudy and rainy, warmer, wind fresh southeast and increasing, average humidity 84 per cent, barometer, corrected to read to sea level, at 8 A. M., 29.97; 8 P. M., 29.50.
