Democrats to Raise Deficit by Making States Pay Pro Rata Share.

Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., treasurer of the Republican National Committee, announced last night there is a deficit in the treasury of the national committee of $21,143.86. The committee received $2,420,421.19 and spent $2,441,565.05. There were 34,205 contributors to the Republican fund.

Mr. Bliss in his final report stated that expert accountants have been inspecting the books for the last five weeks, and their report shows that there were no corporation contributions. The sum received by Mr. Bliss does not include the funds raised and expended by the auxiliary organizations that aided the Republican National Committee. Among these organizations are the Republican Campaign Publicity Committee, headed by George W. Perkins, which is said to have spent more than $400,000; the Congressional Committee, the Hughes Alliance, the National Business Men's Federation and the Women's Branch of the Hughes Alliance.

Whitney Heads List.

The itemized statement of the treasurer showed the contributions ranged from 10 cents to $30,000. Harry Payne Whitney gave the last named amount and headed the list of contributors. Among the large contributors who subscribed during the last few days of the campaign and whose names were not included in the previous lists were Daniel C. Reid, $25,000; E. T. Stotesbury, $20,000; Joseph E. Widener, $15,000; B. M. Duke, $5,000; F. M. Babcock, $5,000; Arthur C. James, $2,500; Robert Goelet, $2,500, and Stuart Prosser, $2,500.

Mr. Bliss declined to furnish details of the amount of money spent in the various States. This information will be made public, he said, when the final report is filed in Albany and Washington on Monday.

Mr. Bliss said he had not yet formulated plans to wipe out the deficit, but was confident it would be subscribed.

Vance C. McCormick, Democratic national chairman, who is in town closing up the Democratic headquarters in the Forty-second Street Building, said yesterday that arrangements for wiping out the $300,000 Democratic deficit have been completed. It has been determined, he said, to make each State responsible for so much. The State committee in each State will be asked to take charge of the collecting of the sum apportioned to that individual State.

Popular Method Too Slow.

"Popular subscriptions," said the chairman, "are all right, and the Democrats expect to raise the needed amount by this method, but it is a slow method, and it takes a good many subscriptions to make up the money we need. I have decided to have each State committee handle the amount apportioned to its State."

A report that one of the reasons for the big Democratic deficit was because Henry Ford had failed to spend as much money for advertising as the leaders had expected was denied last night by Chairman McCormick. Mr. Ford spent considerable money in advertising in behalf of President Wilson, but he did it individually and not through the Democratic National Committee.

The Democratic committee spent much more than it had expected in the last week of the campaign in advertising, but so far as could be learned, Mr. Ford had nothing to do with this and did not promise to foot the bill.

MOVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE.

Customs Officers Consider Placing Employees on List.

Just before the end of the fourth annual conference of customs officers, which has been in session in the Custom House since last Monday, it was decided to appoint a committee of five to learn the views of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo about placing under civil service collectors of customs, appraisers, assistant appraisers, surveyors and naval officers, all of whom are now Presidential appointees.

The five are Edmund Billings, Collector of Boston; John K. Sague, Collector of New York; Justus S. Wardell, Surveyor of San Francisco; Norman L. Hamilton, Collector of Norfolk, and Zach Lamar Cobb, Collector of El Paso.

If, after talking with Mr. McAdoo the committee of five advises that the customs officials begin an active campaign to obtain legislation which will put them under civil service a committee of ten will be appointed by Frank M. Halstead, chairman of the conference. Ninety-two Government employees in the customs service are now appointed; 6,500 are under civil service.

The 1917 conference will be held in San Francisco.

Stielow Hearing Postponed.

Stuart M. Kohn, chief counsel in the fight to save Charles F. Stielow from the electric chair, received a telegram yesterday from Governor Whitman's legal secretary, Owen L. Potter, announcing that the hearing before the Governor, which had been set for November 28, had been postponed until November 29.

Good Flounder Fishing at Freeport.

There is good flounder fishing at Freeport. Any number of good sized flounders may be caught with the incoming tide alongside of the meadows in line with the channel leading from Sportsmen's Channel to Baldwin Harbor. Sandworms for bait seem to be more enticing than bloodworms, but of course either kind may be used.

A recent catch of mine was 18 flounders inside of two hours, using sandworms for bait. DUCKBOAT.

Blackfish Taken in Gale.

Summing up the week's fishing on the Taurus, Harry C. Graff, purser, said last night: "This week's catch of codfish were taken off the Jersey coast. The best catch was hooked on Wednesday by C. L. Sandes of 29 Tompkins place, Brooklyn, 3 codfish, George Murray had 3 cod, William Hartl 1 cod and 1 pollock.

"A few porgies were also taken, besides good catches of blackfish, ling and whiting.

"To-day's passengers caught blackfish in good quantities, considering the gale that was blowing."

Tarpon Fishing Regular Sport.

In THE SUN recently I told of the capture of two tarpon from the drawbridge at St. Augustine.

The larger fish was 6 feet 3 inches in length, the smaller 6 feet, and they represented one of the finest evenings of sport that has ever fallen to my rod.

I have caught two smaller fish since then and an even dozen before them, but these two stand out in the summer's sport as the hardest fighting pair that came my way.

So if you and your good friends want to have some "regular" sport in the line of fishing come to Florida. St. Augustine will be glad to see you, and if you want to see the prettiest sight in the world to a fisherman hook you into a tarpon and see him jump, a gleaming thing of silver in the sunlight. Whether you land him or not you will not regret the time spent in the effort to hook him.

But I warn you that once you have landed a silver king your appetite for the catching of smaller fish will have lost its zest and that for real fishing you will be content with nothing less than the gamest and most spectacular fighting fish in the world—the Florida tarpon or silver king.

Cod Taken in Stormy Weather.

Gus Rau reported a catch of 42 cod on the Elmar on Thursday at the Chelsea grounds. Considering the stormy weather, the catch was a very good one. John Olsen was high hook with 9 cod, and incidentally his 21 pounder carried off the pool. William Quigley took second prize with a 18 pounder.

No More Tickets for Contribs' Dinner.

No more tickets will be sold for the contribs' dinner at the New Grand Hotel, Broadway and Thirty-first street, next Monday night. William Shaw, steward, can care for 225 diners on that night in the big dining room. To put in more chairs and more tables would mean to hamper the service, and Mr. Shaw prides himself on smooth service.

No Tickets to Be Sold Monday Night.

Two dozen contributors have asked to reserve seats for them, they are being held, but check should be sent promptly if the reservations are to be taken up. No dinner cards will be sold on the night of the dinner.

The Angler's Toast.

When men meet to drink to those they love most
Let anglers fill cups and stand to a toast;
Touch lip to no glass
To proud dame or lass
Who from gentle sport will tempt you to stray.
But let your cups clink,
Ye anglers, and drink
A health to the fish,
To the biggest fish—
The fish that got away!

You lured him by craft, he fought you at odds,
In fair fight, or foul, he splintered your rods,
Barbed weapon of steel
You've oft made him feel,
But, valiant and strong, he won every fray.
Then fill to the brim
And drink deep to him—
A toast to the fish
To the biggest fish—
The fish that got away!

What others you've killed with cunning and skill,
You've never caught him and never you will.
In brook, lake or sea
The monarch is he.
To anglers stand up and due homage pay.
Let every glass ring,
A toast to the king:
Long life to the fish,
To the biggest fish—
The fish that got away!

NORMAN JEFFERIES.

"Rays," Aren't You Coming?

I accept with pleasure the invitation to attend the contributors' dinner. I wish to mention that the editor "put a bug in my ear" when he enlightened me that he had tallied 150 of the angling fraternity and pen pushers of this honorable column.

It would be well to have a tag for the buttonhole with the gentleman's name on one side and his nom de plume on the other, so I then could easily locate all the boys from Paterson and adjacent territory who are true pluggers and followers of the black bass. Kindly page "Rays." I want to sit beside him and discuss the plug fly contest.

Do Fishermen Need to Be Introduced?

I trust that some arrangement will be made by the committee in charge looking to the introducing of the guests to each other, as I am more than anxious to personally meet men who have written for the column in the past.

Also, I gladly second the suggestion of one of the writers that the editor of the Rod and Gun column be chairman or toastmaster, that we may all know him by sight at least.

CHARLES A. RADZINSKY.

1266 Webster avenue, Nov. 24.

You Get In for This.

May I be permitted to attend the contribs' dinner on Monday night? I have been anticipating sending a few articles to the Rod and Gun column, but busy cares have kept me from getting down to it, and procrastination did the rest.

Have only recently come to this city from the middle West, and it was my good fortune to purchase a copy of the Press shortly after coming here, and when I came across the Rod and Gun column I will say that I became a steady reader of that paper thereafter.

I have been much interested in the articles recently appearing in the column anent the pickerel. Black bass and pickerel fishing has been my forte. One of the best pickerel lakes in Michigan is Duck Lake, situated near White Lake.

A party of three of us fishing this lake caught a pickerel weighing 17 pounds 4 ounces. One of the party, Mr. Duram, who had lived on this lake many years, said that it was the biggest pickerel that to his knowledge had ever been caught in the lake, also to his knowledge he had never known of any muskies having been taken from those waters. Outside of the size and weight of this large fish his fighting qualities were nil.

I have a photograph of the fish, together with about a dozen weighing around 4 to 5 pounds each, which I will have with me at the contribs' dinner, providing any one should wish to see it.

Now I say here that I think many of your salt water fishermen do not get the best there is out of fishing. I was invited recently to go with a party weakfishing off Sandy Hook. I did not take any tackle along, and when arriving at the fishing grounds I was handed a pole somewhat resembling a whittled down broomstick, with a reel about eight inches in diameter and an eight ounce sinker.

After fishing a couple of hours and getting nothing I took off the large sinker and put on a small lead, and soon caught a couple of fish.

On my next trip for weakfish I took my black bass tackle, and then had some real pleasure in catching this truly gamy fish.

Ananias and Sapphira.

Ananias and Sapphira,
Lay the laurel from thy brow
That the hand of fame once gave thee,
Thou art not the greatest now!
On November twenty-seventh,
When the "contribs" meet to tell
Each some wondrous tale of fishing,
All shall hear that they excel.

Ananias and Sapphira,
Hang thy heads in very shame;
Why, thy ancient flights of fancy
To these modern ones are tame!
Didst thou dream of getting glory?
Ah! to best attain that wish,
Though prevarication's adepts,
Thou shouldst first have learned to fish!

Ananias and Sapphira,
May the path of truth be blest,
For it leads not to the portal
That doth bear thy last address;
But the way that's marked perdition,
Such as these shall take the same;
Thou canst learn of them new methods
Down in thy abode of flame.

Ananias and Sapphira,
They shall come with rod and reel
To fish the Stygian river
As they're drifting down to sheol;
And old Charon, listening to them,
Wisely shall soliloquize,
"Ananias and Sapphira,
We're but pikers to these guys!"

New York, Nov. 24. SKIP.

Would Limit Salt Water Catches.

"Syl" in to-day's Rod and Gun column puts up a good argument, it is against the angler in general, but he soon becomes just an ordinary pot fisherman when he slaughters young fish just for the sake of saying he caught 200 or 300 specimens of a certain fish.

There was a question in this column some time ago about what constituted a fair mess or catch. I gave my opinion in answer to that in The Sun at that time.

I wish there was a fine for every one catching over a certain number of salt water fish, as there is a limit to the fresh water catch. But there, what is the good of wasting breath? "Syl" a good sportsman, does not need to be told how many fish he can catch, and the fish hog will not listen to argument anyhow, even if it is in his favor to do so.

These fish hogs and the netters are in a class by themselves and as much different from the angler and sportsman as chalk and cheese. G. M. W.

THE WEATHER FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW

Steamship Arrivals and Departures—Outgoing Foreign Mails.

THE WEATHER.

For eastern New York, fair and colder to-day; to-morrow fair, with slowly rising temperature; strong westerly winds, diminishing.

For New Jersey, fair and colder to-day; to-morrow fair, with slowly rising temperature; strong westerly winds, diminishing.

For northern New England, fair and colder to-day; to-morrow fair; strong westerly winds, diminishing.

For southern New England, fair and colder to-day; to-morrow fair, with slowly rising temperature; strong westerly winds, diminishing.

For western New York, fair and continued cold to-day; to-morrow fair, with rising temperature; diminishing westerly winds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The storm which was centred over southern Lake Michigan on Thursday moved rapidly northeastward and became centred over Quebec and the lower St. Lawrence Valley yesterday. Rain fell in the St. Lawrence Valley, New England and New York and snow flurries in the lake regions, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. There was also a little rain in southern Florida and a little snow in Colorado. Elsewhere the weather was generally fair.

The pressure was high throughout the West from a centre—South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas. Much higher temperature covered New England and the middle Atlantic States, but it was colder in the Northwest and Central valleys and cooler in the Southeastern States. Freezing weather covered all sections from Lake Huron to Washington and southwest into Missouri, Oklahoma and the southwestern border States. A small area of zero and slightly below occurred in northern Wyoming.

In this city the morning was cloudy and warmer, followed by fair and cooler; wind, brisk to high west to northwest; average humidity, 48 per cent.; barometer, corrected to read to sea level, at 8 A. M., 29.81; 8 P. M., 29.66.
