AMUSEMENTS.

Shook & Collier's "Lights o' London" at Powers's—Coming Attractions.

Melodrama with its noise, explosions and supernumeraries, seems indeed, at the present time to delight and be the fashion with a goodly number of the lovers of the drama, like plagues and panics, the by-gone popularities in the histrionic world, seem to pass regularly through transitory oblivion, and awaken again popular successes. For two or three years past, melodrama with gorgeous and costly accessories in the way of scenery and properties, has been first in the line of theatrical successes. That this is true is evinced in the reproduction of the same plays in the same cities year after year, for as soon as a play begins to weaken in its drawing power, it is promptly shelved. The "Lights o' London" is now on its third engagement in this city, and the house that greeted it at Powers's last night was fully as large as that which witnessed it on its first presentation. The cast in many instances is the same as that which appeared here last year. Some of the parts were as well played while others were not, but as a whole the presentation of last evening, barring the scenery in one instance, was much smoother than the one of last year. The part of Harold Armytage, enacted by a young man named James Neill, though in name there is only an "O" and an "I" difference between him and James O'Neill, the famous melodramatic actor, the whole breach of the alphabet with two or three foreign ones thrown in would not bring him within the outlines of an imitation of the latter. At best Mr. Neill was earnest, and is deserving of credit for honest purpose, as Miss Otolenqui (what nationality pray?) as Bess Marks labored with conspicuous effort, while Mr. Huebner, as Clifford Armytage, at times displayed an opposite disposition. The part of Marks was well played by Mr. Ryder, who appeared in the same role last season. Mr. Harwood as Mrs. Jarvis, the comedy characters of the play, were highly amusing, and formed a bright frame work about the more sombre situations in the piece. Mr. Harwood's impersonation was noticeable for much improvement, particularly for easiness and a general toning down. Mr. Julian Mitchell (a brother of the great favorite here, Maggie) won for his personation of Seth Pieson, more marks of approval than any other actor in the cast, though it was marred here and there on account of his broad dialect and a slight hoarseness in his speech. His acting in the scene with his daughter in the fifth act was very strong and evoked such applause that the curtain was rung up to allow him to bow his acknowledgements. The theatre will doubtless be well filled again to-night when the engagement closes.

Barley Campbell's greatest drama, Siberia, will be presented in this city for the first time to-morrow night, the engagement lasting the balance of the week. The company closed a very successful engagement in Chicago last Saturday night, a guarantee that the company is first-class. The Toronto Globe said the following in reference to the play:

The scenery and mounting of the play are both wonderfully effective, while as to dramatic strength, few if any plays of the present decade will compare with it. And to these is added literary excellence of a very high type. The construction of the plot is at once judicious and original. To captivate public favor a story or a play must deal with live current issues, and to outlive in its success a few years at most, it must take strong grounds against real rather than imaginary evils. In selecting a theme for this play the author has selected nihilism, the persecution of Jews in Russia and the corrupt and despotic sway of the Russian nobility. The dialogue though sparkling with excellent passages, is always bright and interesting. None of the characters weary the audience with long speeches, and yet there is many a touch of deep pathos and many a high, heroic resolve tersely expressed in short, crisp sentences. The interest never flags from the rise of the curtain till its fall, and every act closes with a strikingly brilliant and effective picture.

AMICE COMING.

Mr. Gran, advance of Mlle. Aimee, was in the city last night arranging for the famous French lady's appearances at Redmond's next Monday and Tuesday evenings.

A Wayward Girl.

A girl about sixteen years of age, Miss E. Rogers, was brought before Judge Holmes yesterday at the instance of her mother, who desires, if possible, to save her from a wayward life. She said that her daughter persisted in leading a gay life, and that it was impossible to control her. State Agent Howell recommended that she be sent to the industrial school at Adrian until twenty-one years of age, if not sooner discharged. The young lady took the sentence very coolly and did not seem concerned as to where she went.

HEARTLESS BURGLARS.

Rev. Dr. Graves's Narrow Escape From Their Inroads.

Police Headquarters were as still as a Quaker meeting last evening and nothing could be heard save the little grating noise by Clerk Hurley's pen as he kept it busy addressing large wrappers that were to go in the morning's mail to all parts of the country. Superintendent Perry sat quietly in his reclining chair smoking a cigar that was destined to be short-lived at the rapid rate it was being formed into smoke. All of a sudden the telephone sent out a prolonged and determined rattle, such as never before seemed to demand the quick response of the clerk. If the whole force was needed it could not have spoken in stronger terms. The cigar dropped; the quill fell. Superintendent and Clerk were on their feet in an instant and were rushing to the telephone. The message came from the residence of D. D. Coly, 41 Park street, and announced that "burglars were going through the residence of Rev. Dr. Graves." Not a patrolman was at hand. Clerk Hurley offered his services, hurriedly donned his hat and coat, chose his weapons and rushed off with a keen eye for blood. On his way he picked up Officers Connolly and Schober, and on they rushed to the residence of the reverend gentleman. They found the women and men of two houses terrified—no one dared enter the infested residence. The officers soon learned that the main reason for believing the house was being raided, was the fact that the servant girl had repaired to her room, but had found the door fastened. Doctor Graves being away at prayer meeting she rushed to neighbor Cody's and gave the alarm. Up the stairs went Clerk Hurley. Behind him followed the trusty patrolmen. They reached the door, forced it open and, behold! they found the finest place for two or three burglars they had seen in many a day, but nary a burglar, not even a track. When the trio thundered into headquarters after the escape, Clerk Hurley's face fairly burned with rage. "I thought I had struck luck this time," said he, "and would have the satisfaction of running in two or three desperate, daring burglars—but it's just my luck, dog gait it."

Artificial Light.

In these days of progress there is a demand for better means of illumination than ever before. The dazzling brilliancy of the electric light makes our common kerosene lamps as dim as tallow dips in the comparison. This demand has been fully met by the introduction of the Sun Lamps. They are necessarily made of metal because the draft or chimney extends down through the center of the lamp. The wicks are five inches wide and give a light of forty-five candle power, equal to three gas burners. These lamps were brought out at the close of last season, but the price was so high—$6 each—but few were sold. Owing to the enormous demand which has sprung up, they are now produced at a price within the reach of all, and sold for $3 in brass and $3.50 in nickel, complete with ten-inch porcelain shade. To persons troubled with weak eyes or those who desire to preserve their eyesight by means of a good light, the Sun Lamp will prove a blessing.

The New Styles of Hanging Lamps are made of a gold color solid bronze metal, and trimmed with cut glass prisms and decorated shades. The dome-shaped shades look the best, but we imagine the angle of reflection from the cone shape is best for throwing light down. These lamps are also much cheaper than last year. They are now sold at from $5 to $7 each. Fine table lamps are furnished with duplex or two-wick burners, giving double the light of the single wick burners. There are many styles of these lamps on exhibition, including solid bronze and the popular hammered brass. For information received thanks are due Messrs. H. Leonard & Sons, importers, 16 Monroe street.

Radiant Home

BASE BURNER

1884.

As manufacturers of Base-Burning Stoves exclusively, the makers of the RADIANT HOME have been before the public for over seventeen years. There can be but few persons in this country who are not familiar with the high reputation gained by the RADIANT HOME STOVES—a reputation not of hot-house growth, forced by artificial means, decaying as rapidly as it appears, but a steady, vigorous growth, built up on the only true basis, viz: that of genuine merit. It has been their aim and constant study to so improve and perfect the RADIANT HOME STOVES, that they should deservedly rank highest in the market. With this aim constantly in view, as each year's experience indicated something wherein they could improve the working qualities, increase the heating capacity, or render more attractive in ornamentation, they have spared no pains or expense to accomplish this object. As evidence that success has attended their efforts, they point to the ever increasing popularity of the RADIANT HOME STOVES. Their intrinsic merit has proved their best agent and advertiser.

In the 1884 pattern they have made some changes which they think very desirable and materially improved. The changes consist of an entirely new and larger fire pot and grate, which adds largely to the heating capacity, without increased consumption of fuel. The ash pit is made deeper, taking a larger ash-pan. The urn is altogether new, made of spun brass, nickel plated and beautiful in design, greatly adding to the general attractive appearance. They confidently claim, as heretofore, that the RADIANT HOME STOVES, in quality and smoothness of casting, through fitting and mounting, and as powerful heaters, not only have no superiors, but they stand unrivaled.
