NEW HAVEN INCOME DECLINES.

Increased Cost of Operating Affects Whole System.

Earnings of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad for the month of June show a moderate increase in gross operating revenues but a falling off in railway operating income because of a large increase in operating expenses. Gross totalled $7,408,054, compared with $7,080,327 in the corresponding month last year, while operating income was $1,819,613, compared with $2,130,884. After all deductions and additions net corporate income was $300,920, as against $828,916 last year.

For the first half of the current year gross operating revenues were $41,149,677, compared with $38,489,037 in the same time in 1916; railway operating income $10,319,296, compared with $10,193,342, and net corporate income $1,671,398, compared with $1,008,887. The separately operated lines of the New Haven system, as a rule, made poor exhibits in net corporate income for June, Ontario and Western, for instance, showing a decrease of more than $17,000 and Central New England more than $55,000. The New England Steamship Company presented a substantial gain.

The trolley companies made a particularly poor exhibit, the Connecticut company putting net corporate income at $132,011, against $206,507 last year, and the Rhode Island company net corporate income at $5,399, against $91,950. Increased cost of operating rather than reduced business was the reason.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND COMMENT

Pessimism Giving Way Before Optimism Among Majority of Financiers.

STILL BELIEVE IN CAUTION

Good Time for Investment Buying, but Hazardous for Speculation.

If it were possible to assume the world's war would run its course in the next two weeks and that peace suddenly should come to the troubled nations one might look into the immediate future of the financial markets with some sort of certainty regarding conditions and developments. But there is no warrant for the assumption war is to end in the next two weeks, or in the next two months. There is no certainty war will not run on for many months, possibly for years, and in consequence our financial markets and all other markets must rest on the basis of uncertainty, although they may have their passing swings, both up and down, particularly the stock market, which is more suceptible perhaps than any other market to day to day happenings, rumors and economic changes.

The idea that the stock market is on rock bottom and that the next important move will be in the direction of higher prices is firmly rooted in various Wall Street circles, but that a long sustained bull speculation is in the making is not entertained in the best informed quarters.

The general situation in respect of money and business is sound. The general situation in respect of war and politics is mixed. It is a situation, both as regards business and war, filled with uncertainties and abnormal conditions which must be taken into account by the business man, the speculator and the investor. Business is sound and the earning power of corporations is heavy, but notwithstanding the soundness of industry the world of money and business is surrounded with uncertainties born of the participation of the United States in the war.

Financiers More Optimistic.

The greater number of men in the financial district are beginning to believe taxation and price fixation will work out along lines which will not be destructive of our industrial activities. They are beginning to believe that after this tiresome period of talk and wrangling in Congress we will have legislation which will require a minimum of sacrifice on the part of the corporation and the individual in order that the country may win the war. They are disposed to be more optimistic, perhaps, because for so long a period they have been pessimistic.

With all their confidence, however, they are not making commitments in volume for the future for their own account, nor are they encouraging others to enter long time engagements. They believe that caution should be exercised as it never before was exercised, and that it will pay better in the end to watch and wait rather than to plunge at once into the various fields of the country's activities.

A superficial glance at underlying factors in the world of money and business would suggest that nothing could develop to upset the strength of those underlying factors. A superficial glance at the present market value of securities and a study of technical market conditions should suggest the time had arrived for great expansion in speculation and investment operations. And a longer time view of our markets as based upon the tremendous resources of the country would suggest that eventually prices for securities would rise far above current levels. Doubtless in the end we will see higher prices, but even though that prospect is bright there is no surety one may find success in operations for the immediate future or for the period of the war which may be based upon a superficial examination of underlying factors.

Passing Market Movements.

In the stock market are found, however, many reasons for the belief that a liquidated position exists and that with favorable crop reports and easy money a better price level may be brought about. Furthermore, if we were sure legislation and price fixing policies might be effected along liberal lines so that business would not be seriously interfered with we would say that a very important temporary upward swing might be witnessed. Upward swings, however, must have something in addition to the backing of the professional element in the stock market. They must be backed by public buying, of which there is not the slightest indication in any department of the securities markets.

It is said in the financial district that every effort will be made to carry the market into an active advancing affair before the next Liberty Loan announcement, so that the loan may be run off with the same enthusiasm as marked the course of the first instalment of the Government financing. The second instalment of the loan, it is now understood, will be offered around November 1. Efforts are to be made to make it even more popular than in the case of the first loan, but if it is to be heavily oversubscribed it is difficult to see how a wild speculation in stocks will help.

Public Out of Market.

The public has been out of the market for months, and now the public is to be urged to save its income in order to be prepared to provide the Government with more money. It is right that efforts should be made to induce the public to save, and it is probable the public will save, for it is learning the advantage of saving and the wisdom of having funds invested in the soundest security in the world. If, however, the public is to concentrate its attention and its funds upon Government financing it will not be in a position to contribute much assistance to the strength of the stock market who demand that unbridled speculation for higher prices be instituted at once.

The small man who has the idea in mind of joining a bull speculation, basing his operations upon borrowed money, may be buying into trouble. But the man who joins in an investment movement in the outright purchase of Government bonds or the mortgage issues of high grade railroad and industrial companies will be buying into a profit.

U.S. MAY END SHIPYARD STRIKE

Intervention Expected With Taking Over of Vessels of Ways.

Government intervention in the shipbuilding strike in the port of New York is expected to end the labor troubles that have been in progress for five weeks. Since the official announcement that the Government had taken over the 700 ships now in course of construction the deadlock between the Marine Trades Council and the Metal Trades Association, which brought about the strike of 8,000 men in this port alone, labor leaders look to the Government to settle the entire controversy.

Strikers representing the International Association of Machinists, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and the Brotherhood of Blacksmiths issued a statement yesterday predicting an early agreement.
