TOWN TALK.

Business on the railroads is slowly improving. The iron moulders give a dance at Arbuter hall Jan. 21.

The telephone company are about to issue new number cards.

The charter amendments are prepared and in shape to be sent to Lansing.

The literary and musical entertainment of the Amos M. E. church netted $10 to the society.

Travel to New Orleans is not very brisk. People don't feel rich enough to travel this winter.

Report of Board of Health yesterday: Henry Brooks, No. 274 Grandville avenue, diphtheria.

Mrs. L. Immen will give an entertainment for the benefit of the Monumental Fountain February 3.

A snow-whitened horse, tied to a post on Canal street, was taken to a livery barn last night by the police.

D. P. Clay has given the Newargo Odd Fellows free use of his hall in that village for their annual ball.

On account of the inclement weather of last evening the lecture announced to occur at the Y. M. C. A. rooms was not given.

What has become of that scheme suggested by a merchant some time ago regarding the establishment of an exposition in this city?

Patrolmen Cogswell and Sears were off duty last night. The first because of a sprained foot and the latter of a bilious attack.

The anniversary exercises of the Y. M. C. A. will be held at the Park Congregational church to-morrow evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Sam Richards, driver of car No. 50 on the Beeds Lake line, had his cash box and its contents, about $18, stolen from his car late Thursday night.

There were few people on the streets last evening. The police said it was too stormy for anybody to be stirring, and that it was monotonously dull.

The case of Antoinette Lang, who is now serving a sentence in the Detroit House of Correction, for shoplifting, is to be taken to the Supreme Court.

Nearly all of the trains were late last night. The D. G. H. & M. and C. & W. Michigan trains being over four hours late, and the Michigan Central three.

Neither snow storms, snow banks, nor howling blizzards that prevailed last night, prevented those who enjoy the raptures of the rinks from putting in an appearance.

During the meeting of the State Funeral Directors Association, held at East Saginaw this week, Mr. Allen Durfee, of this city, was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane.

The snow storm commenced yesterday afternoon and continued to fall until long in the night, hails from the east, and according to precedents is liable to stay for some time.

At last the Prosecuting Attorney has issued a warrant for the arrest of Deputy Sheriff Boyland and his brother Edward. The respondents will appear in the Police Court this morning.

Nathan Roy, a young lad accused of petty larceny, had hearing before Justice Westfall yesterday. The case was adjourned till to-day for the purpose of consultation with the State Agent.

Mr. Samuel Gray, father of Ionis M. Gray, of this city, who recently died intestate at Indianapolis, had property valued at $500,000. It will be divided among the widow, three sons and four daughters.

Mark Sloman, agent of Geo. H. Parker, of Detroit, purchased of Perkins & Hess, of this city, on Wednesday, 12,000 sheep pelts. This is the largest lot of pelts ever disposed of at one sale to one party in this State.

Two Cyprians attempted to gain entrance to a hop in Holland hall Thursday evening, and afterward to dare the dangers of the deceitful "rollers" at the rink. In both cases they were kindly asked to "take a walk," which they did.

Opponent, that toothsome Southern dish, bids fair to become popular in this city. A well-known restaurateur on Monroe street has a round dozen of the juicy rodents on hand, and "brothers of de Lime Kiln Club" are all invited.

The proceeds of the charity ball went for the benefit of St. Mark's home. Would it not be a praiseworthy move to get up a ball for the benefit of the poor in general of the city, placing the tickets at $1. Will some gentleman give the idea a starter?

J. K. Johnston went to Fort Wayne a few days ago, where he found Matoon, who managed the Division Street Roller Rink last fall. Matoon is managing a rink in that city, and Mr. Johnston frightened him into paying part of an $80 board bill which he owed him.

The police are watching the trains very closely, word having been received that a gang of toughs and confidence men in Detroit have designs on the city. Grand Rapids has more than its share of fakers and toughs, and it is hoped that the police will give the expected visitors such a welcome as will make them take the back track.

Relying on the report at Police Headquarters THE TELEGRAM of yesterday stated that a child of Michael Maher broke its neck by falling into the cellar. The child fell into the cellar, but did not die from the injuries received, though its chances of living are very dubious, at least this was the report last night at headquarters.

On the third page of this issue will be found the conclusion of the narrative relating the thrilling experience with an earthquake which a member of THE TELEGRAM staff formerly passed through. It may be interesting to readers to know that the vessel which played such an important part in the narrative was the U. S. S. "Monongahela."

The Hastings Bazaar of this week has the following concerning a young lady whose fame is not limited by the boundaries of the state: At the Jefferson street rink Thursday evening last Miss Ellie Garnsey, of Grand Rapids was the attraction. Miss Garnsey is an elegant skater and executed many difficult feats. To the great regret of the audience she was obliged, by illness, to leave the floor before the exhibition was completed.

Col. Massmore's Injury.

Col. Massmore still wears an arm in a sling owing to the railroad accident in which he participated during the campaign. In explanation of the suit which he has brought against the Travelers' Insurance Company, of Hartford, he told a TELEGRAM reporter yesterday, that upon his sending in a claim to the company for nine weeks' premiums, due him to that date, he received a check in reply for five weeks' premiums, with a "payment in full" clause embodied in it. Of course he accepted no such tender and began suit for $300 damages. "Just think of it," said the Colonel, "to be treated like that after spending hundreds of dollars with them for accident policies. It's outrageous."

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

SEVERAL CLERGYMEN'S VIEWS.

Interviews With Bishop Gillespie and Other Representative Divines on the Subject.

Mention was made in the dispatches a day or two ago, that Representative Ford, of this city, had introduced a bill into the House at Lansing providing for the re-establishment of capital punishment in this state. In considering this matter a great many questions arise particularly as to the necessity of such a law on our statute books. Equally as much can be said in favor of capital punishment as against it, and its establishment or non-establishment depends of course on the inclination to some extent of public opinion. At the announcement of there being an effort made in the Legislature to enact such a law a TELEGRAM reporter was detailed yesterday to talk with some of the clergy in the city and get their views upon capital punishment. The reporter first proceeded to the residence of Bishop Gillespie, on Fountain street, where he was ushered in to the Rev. gentleman's study with a courteous greeting. In response to the question what he thought of having capital punishment re-established in Michigan, Bishop Gillespie replied: "I am hardly prepared to give an opinion, I am not posted as to the construction of the bill, and have not seen any mention of it in the newspapers. I think, however, that where no question can arise a man ought to be hanged. For instance in the case of Daniel Goggins, who murdered his wife in St. Marks home two years ago, there could have been no question raised."

"Considering the moral aspect of hanging, how do you regard it, Bishop?" "Yes, morally I consider it just under the Old Testament."

The reporter told the Bishop that the present bill provided for leaving the condemnation of a man to be hanged with the jury; that unless they recommend it the Court is to sentence under the existing laws, to which he answered: "I have not thought of the aspect of leaving it with the jury," he answered; "people generally regard hanging with such horror that it would be doubtful if a jury recommend it. Ordinarily the criminal has two ideas, one of escape and one of pardon. Imprisonment does not have the horror to him, that hanging would as he anticipates either leniency or escape."

The reporter then called at the residence of Rev. Dr. Graves on Bostwick street, but after vigorously ringing the door bell several times without any response, he concluded that that gentleman was not at home and so continued his wandering through the drifting snow to the home of Rev. J. E. Gilbert, D.D., on South Prospect street, but was told that he was out making calls. Going two blocks further south the reporter came to the residence of Rev. Charles Fluhrer, whom he found comfortably seated in his study considering "Old Age, or Life's Remembrances and Decline," the subject of his discourse at the Universalist church to-morrow evening. When asked to say something about the "hanging" question he said, "I have always regarded capital punishment as barbarous. My objection to imprisonment for life is, that it doesn't amount to that, practically, and ceases to be a terror to the criminal. I would prefer to see the pardoning power taken from the Governor and invested in some other authority. The great terror of punishment is the conviction of its certainty. As it is now, imprisonment for life doesn't mean so. Pardons are too numerous. Put this power into the hands of some higher court or some competent board it would guard it better so that it would become a terror and the end reached without re-establishing capital punishment. The law is not, or rather the executioners of it are not, severe enough with criminals."

The TELEGRAM scribe then called upon Rev. Henry Powers at Park Place, who gave his opinion to the question about as follows: "I have some decided views on this question which are the result of study and consideration years ago and I see no cause to change the conclusion arrived at then. I am not in favor of the death penalty as a punishment of crimes. I think people ought to take care of their criminals. I think it is a sign of weakness to send people to another world, morally and economically. Morally it is bad policy to take life unless the very life of the state depends upon it. What is wanted in punishment of crime is certainty. It is the certainty of punishment that deters a man from crime. The history of capital punishment proves that it is the most certain that we have. The tender-heartedness of men will stand in the way of making it certain. In the criminal court the chances are that the penalties will not always be inflicted. I prefer to have a penalty that can be inflicted."

Rev. Peter Moerdyke was the next representative of the clergy called upon, who gave the following opinions: "Some years ago I had quite a discussion with my brother on this topic. We discussed the question two months in a religious paper. I advocated the abolition of capital punishment. My brother took strong grounds in favor of it, planting his argument on the scriptures. I thought I based my views on the scriptures. I believe that the history of this whole matter and the experiments made, have within the past fifteen or twenty years changed a great many people's minds on the subject, in this and foreign countries. Human life seems to be growing cheaper in our country all the while, with such a silly fellow as Beagle in the Governor's chair men are encouraged to commit crime. I believe if a man kill his brother man it is best for the safety of society that he be executed. Morally considered, I bow to the side of mercy and am inclined to be sentimental sometimes, as mistakes are made and innocent men executed. I think a man who has killed another has forfeited his right to live."

THE SCIENTISTS.

A Talk About the Locomotive—The Institute's Collection.

The attendance at the Kent Scientific Institute last evening was somewhat limited, owing no doubt to the inclemency of the weather. Notwithstanding this, Secretary C. A. Whittemore, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the locomotive, illustrating the slide and valve motions with mechanical drawings, and the internal economy of the engine on the black-board. He explained how the steam was economized in its use so as to drive the locomotive through the medium of the cylinder, and then by "exhaust" was made to create a draft for the furnace by being conducted in the smoke-stack—a necessity owing to the small grate surface under the boiler. The subject of "traction," or necessity of weight in a locomotive, and the importance of having its centre of gravity directly over the driving wheels, so as to obtain the advantage of leverage and power was also explained. The importance of a proper draft to secure rapid and adequate combustion, and the methods adopted to secure them were given in detail.

The K. S. I. was first organized in the fall of 1874, and the following January the first annual meeting was held. With commendable persistence in spite of much discouragement, the society has continued to gather the elements of a first-class local scientific institute until to-day they have the materials to illustrate a work of real merit and no mean importance. The collections in the departments of natural history, mineralogy and archaeology are various and numerous enough to fill a large museum, while the library has a nucleus upon which to build up a first-class institution. Under the present condition of affairs these valuable data of prehistoric times and natural productions of this section and State are scattered through the building from cellar to attic, and the members sign for the rebuilding of this school edifice, with proper accommodations for an institute that can and will be made an important adjunct to the education of the youth of this city.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Division Superintendent Wattles, of the L. S. & M. S., was in the city yesterday.

Trains on all the roads were generally late yesterday owing to the heavy snow-fall. The Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee Road is talking of placing another large steamer on its line between Grand Haven and Milwaukee.

President H. B. Ledyard, of the Michigan Central, has been confined to his home in Detroit by illness for two weeks past, but is able to attend to duties again.

Colby Station, on the Stanton branch of the Detroit, Lansing & Northern road, was closed Thursday. Hereafter charges on all freight consigned to that point must be prepaid.

A special meeting of the Michigan Passenger Association was held in Detroit yesterday. Messrs. J. H. Carpenter, of the C. & W. M., and C. L. Lockwood, of the G. R. & I., were in attendance from this city.

A new time schedule goes into effect on the Chicago & West Michigan road to-morrow at noon. The principal changes are made upon the Newargo division, and will appear in THE TELEGRAM's railroad column Monday.

Conductor E. W. Bush, of the Michigan Central, was laid up at his home in this city for a few days the past week. He slipped while getting upon his car at Jackson and received some severe wrenches, which necessitated his lay off.

O. F. Conklin, of Ravenna, was in the city yesterday in the interest of the proposed railroad from Muskegon to Grand Rapids. He says the Ravenna route is $10,000 cheaper than the one via Eastmanville or Coopersville. The people out here are wide awake for the road and will do the handsome thing to get it.—Muskegon News.

An official time-table, with the rules and regulations governing employees of the Chicago & West Michigan, has been issued, together with a new and improved railroad map showing the road, its branches and connections. Important changes have been made in the rules and regulations, and the signals printed therein are made to agree with the established code of uniform signals.

Representatives of the freight departments of the Michigan Central, Grand Rapids & Indiana, Chicago & West Michigan, Lake Shore, and Chicago & Grand Trunk, held a meeting in Chicago, Wednesday, for the purpose of taking preliminary steps for the formation of a freight pool. It was unanimously agreed to form pools from all competitive points on the above named roads. The General Freight Agents of the various roads were instructed to prepare statements and arguments upon which percentages can be based and submit them to a future meeting.
