Nature never made you so, and Education never did. Custom shall not."

"I am a servant girl however."

"Obstinate child—you shall be one no longer, if now. You will soon be my wife."

I was very happy, and we sat that evening, as lovers sit, and talked, as lovers talk; but I was firm to my determination, and made him promise not only not to speak to Mr. Sherburn about me, as he had intended to do the next morning, but to wait silently until I had returned to New York and obtained a situation from which he could more honorably take me. Yet I was as happy as a queen in knowing that he had loved me in this lowly station and humble guise, and when I went down to my room that night, it was with wet eyes but a thankful heart.

We left St. Louis in three days. Mr. Chester and Mr. Denning were to remain a week longer; but I knew that between them there was neither confidence or love, on one side at least, and feared nothing. We returned to New York in the same order in which we had left it, without further incidents, and after I had been at home several days I went out dressed, to make calls, to account to my acquaintances for my absence, and met Frank Chester who had just arrived. He glanced at my dress and manner with evident surprise.

"You see," said I, when the first greeting was over, "that I was right about a situation. I am companion to Miss Mary Dalrymple, and you will not marry a servant girl, now."

"What do I care!" he cried, "if only you will marry me, Mary. My darling, you are lovelier to others, but not more beloved or lovely to me in that elegant dress, than in your old bonnet; if you are mine, the rest is nothing."

"It sounds better at least," I persisted, "when you come to see me, to ask for Miss Dalrymple's companion, than for Mrs. Sherburn's nursery girl."

"So Harry Denning and I will call together on mistress and maid," said he, with a smile.

"No!" I cried; with burning indignation; "Harry Denning will never call on me but once more."

He stopped and looked at me in mute surprise. I drew a card from my card case, and gave it to him. He turned very pale, as he read the name. "Mary!" he said.

"Yes, Mary," I answered, with tears in my eyes, "only not Mary Dean, but Mary Dalrymple. Dear Frank, forgive me, and let me tell you all."

I did tell him all, drawing him away to a quieter street, where I could repeat the tale of my folly and its sweet punishment to no listening ears but his; and then, having received full ablution, took him home to my grandmother, and telling her the sequel of my adventure, introduced him as her future grandson, to her great delight. The dear old lady had always been rather distrustful of the first pretender to that position, but she loves Frank as dearly as she does me, and has forgiven me all my former follies, for the sake of the success of my last and greatest.

That same day Harry Denning came to see me. Yes, my own identical Harry, my fiance, and my horror; elegant, perfumed, slender, fascinating, handsome, courteous, tender, the same as ever; but yet not the same. For now with me shadows had become realities, and idle dreams were deep truths. For the sake of my own vanity and his, I did not tell him the reason of my sudden disenchantment, which was naturally a great shock to him, as he expected to take up the broken thread of our attachment exactly where it left off when he (as I too, though he didn't know it,) took that fatal journey. He mourned my decision and change of sentiments with becoming sorrow, and considered himself very ill-used. I believe he thinks, like every one else but Emma Sherburn, that I spent the dreary time of his absence in L——; and met there Frank Chester; who stopped on his way back to make some inquiries about the Dean family. He pities me, I doubt not, and believes that I must often have bitterly regretted my rash refusal of so much beauty and elegance.

I am the happiest woman in the world, I verily believe. An heiress not married for her wealth, a belle not married for beauty, rank, or position, for nothing, if not for love. Not that I despise wealth, for I am very glad that by its means I can help my husband on in his profession, and spare him the toil and struggle, by which he would have supported the poor girl he meant to marry. Although no merit of mine, it is a constant joy to me to know, that I could smooth his path in becoming what he is already called, one of the first men in his profession; that I could thus do a little for him who did so much for me, and loves me so entirely.

Of course I went to Emma Sherburn immediately, and told her the whole story; she was delighted.

"Oh, how romantic! how delicious!" she cried, clapping her hands. "To think that your hair-brained scrape should end so well, after all. How astonished Mr. Sherburn will be! My! how it will take him down after his scolding me for allowing it!"

"Did he?"

"Did he?" Of course he did. He told me I might thank myself for any accident that happened, or discovery that was made. He said if it should come out, the story would be all over town, and I should have myself to thank for encouraging such romantic folly."

"But he consented at the same time you did."

"Oh, yes, I know, but he lectured me afterwards for what he laughed at in you. That's the way with men; they tolerate in others, what they won't in their wives.—And he consented, you see, but he threw all the responsibility on my shoulders, in case anything happened. Now, he'll take all the credit of it! Oh, my dear, you don't know! you never will, till you're married! Husbands always do so!"

"My husband never will," I said to myself, and I was right!

SUGAR CANE.—The early planted fields of Sugar Cane in this section do not promise well. Most of the seed was planted when the ground was cold, and the long spell of wet weather which followed, caused the seed to rot. The fields planted late look more promising.

DR. JACKSON will not prescribe without prospect of benefitting his patients. No false promises will be made, or expense incurred, without corresponding prospect of results.

DR. JACKSON does not bear down to build up and use a second patent in any case.

DR. JACKSON procures his medicines from the wilderness of the Far West, analyses and compounds them himself.

DR. JACKSON wishes it distinctly understood that he regards CONSUMPTION AS A CURABLE DISEASE, and is willing that his success in public confidence may be estimated by the success attending his treatment.

DR. JACKSON, although paying special attention to LUNG, LIVER, HEART, and STOMACH DISEASES, also invites to consultation in ALL CHRONIC diseases, incident to the human system. Being now in Cleveland cases every year, he is well prepared to give an opinion as to the curability of any case.

SUCCESSOR TO E. HOWELL

WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Ashtabula, and surrounding country, that he has recently purchased the entire interest of E. Howell in the Daguerrian business in this place, including his Paper-type, recently patented, and that he is prepared to take correct likenesses, in all the different branches of the art, and in the most approved style. Having had several year's experience with the first artists in the country, I am enabled to keep up with all the improvements, and feel safe in saying I will furnish as good pictures, and correct, to the life, as can be obtained anywhere in this section of country. No pictures shall go from my rooms, that are not entirely satisfactory, and warranted. Pictures taken on patent leather, if desired. Lockets and Miniature Pins filled at reasonable rates. Particular attention given, in taking childrens' likenesses. Rooms, first building south of the Bank, Main-street, where I can always be found from 8 o'clock, A. M. to 5 P. M. H. A. MARSH.

Old Pictures copied, and new ones taken in any weather.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Hartford, Trumbull Co. O., March 7th, 1857.

I hereby certify that I have been dealing in the Graffenberg Medicines for the last two years, and say that I have never offered any medicines to the public that have met with the decided approbation of the people like them, particularly the Pills and Catholicon. They will readily perform all and more than is promised for them. Get one of my Family Medicine of the Catholicon the last season, and I hear the best results in every case. J. H. C. JOHNSON, Medical Agt.

Read what Dr. Rudnell says of the Graffenberg Medicines. Dr. R., is a physician of extensive practice, and one of the most successful in the county (Trumbull) in which he resides.

"This certifies that I have used the Graffenberg pills and Marshall's Catholicon, sold here by J. H. C. Johnson, in my practice to my entire satisfaction. They are good medicines.

Hartford, Trumbull Co. O., March 7, 1857. Dr. H. N. RUDNELL.

I am a physician of thirty years practice. My principal study has been diseases of female. They have generally baffled my best efforts. Obtaining the materials composing Marshall's Uterine Catholicon, I was pleased with them, gave them a fair trial, and found myself abundantly successful in my former practice I could only anticipate the symptoms of about half the cases and could not cure one in ten. Now I can cure nine out of ten, and relieve the tenth. I do not hesitate to say, that I consider Marshall's Uterine Catholicon the greatest blessing to females I have met with.

J. H. WILLIAMS, M. D., Charleston.

West Bedford, Coshocton Co., May 14, '57.

Mr. H. B. Kingsley, Sir—I have been selling the medicines of the Graffenberg company for the last few years, and have invariably found them to give good satisfaction; and the pills I have sold to a great many families as regularly as their tea and coffee, and with my trade they have become a staple article. Marshall's Uterine Catholicon is a medicine that has done a great amount of good to female diseases. One lady I sold it to told me she had received more benefit from one bottle than she did from a long course of medical treatment by the most skillful physicians. Yours truly,

JAMES WILSON.
