of employes. These were chosen on a civil service basis, instead of distributing jobs to friends and relatives of legislators.

The laws passed by the North Dakota legislature naturally separate themselves into four main groups—the bills carrying out the industrial program, the bills amending methods of taxation, bills for labor reforms and miscellaneous measures, principally for the purpose of making the state's business more economical and efficient.

Industrial Bills.

The basis of all the industrial bills is a constitutional amendment, adopted by the people of North Dakota at the 1918 general election and ratified by the legislature, giving the state authority to engage in any line of business for the benefit of its citizens.

To carry out the purposes of this amendment, the legislature enacted the industrial commission bill, creating an industrial commission to be composed of the governor, commissioner of agriculture and labor, and attorney general, to have general charge of all business in which the state may engage.

The mill and elevator bill provides that the state shall construct a system of terminal elevators and flour mills, operating under the name of the "North Dakota Mill & Elevator association." Another bill provides for the issuance of $5,000,000 in state bonds to finance the system. The industrial commission is given authority to buy, store and sell any farm products, which would include authority to operate packing plants, cold storage warehouses, etc., if considered advisable.

The bank bill is intended to carry out the league pledge of "rural credits at cost," to help in the operation of the mill and elevator act, and to aid in the financing of all state industries. The "Bank of North Dakota" is created, with $2,000,000 capital supplied by the state, to be the depositary of all public funds and to act as reserve bank for any of North Dakota's 761 state banks which may ever to come under the system, which most of them probably will do. The bank is empowered to sell state bonds up to $10,000,000, lending the money thus obtained, at cost, to farmers on first mortgages on real estate at the cost of handling the business. It may also lend money up to 90 per cent on the value of grain in state terminal elevators. It may rediscount paper guaranteed by the banks which use it for a reserve, thus greatly increasing the lending power of the local banks.

The "home builders" bill provides a plan by which tenant farmers or city workers may obtain possession of farm homes to cost not more than $10,000, or city homes to cost not more than $5,000, upon paying 20 per cent of the purchase price, completing payments over long terms. Homes are to be secured by the state on the wholesale plan to lessen the cost.

Linked with the same building bill is the soldiers' relief bill. This provides a bonus of $25 for each North Dakota soldier or sailor for each month spent in the war service of the United States or the allies, the money to be used either as first payment on a city or farm home under the home builders act, or on the soldier's education.

The legislature has also made preliminary provisions for the development of the lignite coal of North Dakota, providing for experimental work, on a commercial scale, to demonstrate the possibilities of making briquets, with gas as a by-product, from the raw lignite, and also for surveying the coal deposits, so that the next legislature may have information necessary to make state development on a large scale possible if it is desired.

To make the industrial program workable the legislature also passed laws dealing with the railroads and other utilities. The railroad rate act, based upon the Minnesota rate act, which has been upheld by the United States supreme court, ends the discrimination against North Dakota and in favor of the Twin Cities, so that in future shipments can be made within the state of North Dakota, for similar distances, for as advantageous rates as prevail in Minnesota or on interstate North Dakota-Minnesota shipments. This will enable the state elevator system to handle grain and flour in competition with the millers of the Twin Cities and will also encourage the building up of industries and jobbing business within North Dakota. The legislature also passed a new public utility act, allowing for the fixing of rates in future on the basis of the money actually invested in a public utility, excluding unearned increment from the valuation.

Tax Legislation.

The whole theory of a number of bills, amending the taxation system, is to place the heavy burden of taxation on profiteers, both corporations and owners of idle land, rather than upon industry.

The reclassification bill provides for the assessment of all lands, city buildings used for profit, and public utilities, including flour mills and elevators, as 100 per cent. City buildings used as homes by their owners, and all personal property, are assessed at 50 per cent. Farm buildings and improvements and $1,000 worth of farm equipment and machinery are exempt.

Linked with the law is the income tax law, which exempts $1,000 for single men and $2,000 for married men and those with dependents, and then starts with a small tax, one-fourth of 1 per cent on earned incomes and one-half of 1 per cent on unearned incomes, as compared with 6 per cent under the federal law. Thus the income tax law rests lightly upon possessors of small incomes. Those who have paid personal property taxes may produce their tax receipts as a setoff against that much of income taxes. For larger incomes, especially those derived from stocks and bonds, the tax becomes much larger. There is a 3 per cent tax on net incomes of corporations. The law is calculated to raise $1,000,000 a year, all of which will come from persons easily able to pay it and will relieve others of that much taxation.

Other tax laws provide a tax upon outstanding stocks and bonds of corporations above the [illegible] $10,000, a tax on oil, designed [illegible] to penalize substitute gasoline [illegible] oils which fail to meet state standards, and a tax upon motor vehicles. The latter tax will be spent on good roads, every dollar raised by the state being matched with a dollar provided by the federal government.

Labor Legislation.

The North Dakota legislature has enacted the most advanced program of labor legislation ever put into effect by any legislature. Among the most important of [illegible] measures are:

A workmen's compensation act, providing state insurance for all injured workmen and their dependents.

A coal mining code protecting coal miners against dangerous conditions, establishing an eight hour day and prohibiting the employment of children underground.

A minimum wage law for women and a law establishing 8½ hours as the maximum work week for women or minors, with a maximum of 8½ hours work in any one day.

An anti-injunction law to prohibit employers from using the courts to coerce workmen in labor troubles, except to the extent of protecting property from destruction.

A full crew bill, insuring the safety of the traveling public.

A law providing for the use of the union label on state printing.

Miscellaneous Legislation.

Under this head may be listed the state fire insurance bill and the state bill for bonding of public officials. These provide for the state taking over these terms of insurance, charging the same rates that are now charged by private companies until a sufficient reserve is built up, when rates will be lowered.

The state hail insurance bill makes a flat levy of 3 cents per acre on all tillable land in the state, whether it is cultivated or not. The remainder of the money necessary to pay hail losses will be raised by a pro rata acreage levy on all cropped land. Owners who do not want state insurance can withdraw after paying the first 3-cent assessment.

Amendments to the state grain grading and inspection act provide that grain dealers must hereafter pay for any valuable dockage taken with grain. The amended bill also authorizes the state grain department to fix a fair margin or profit for the handling of grain by elevators, after an investigation to show the investment and cost of operation of typical elevators in the state.

The North Dakota legislature was the first in the Union to pass a concurrent resolution indorsing not only the league of nations, but also all of President Wilson's famous "14 points."

The North Dakota legislature has submitted to the voters for approval at the 1920 election a constitutional amendment providing for full woman suffrage.

"Graft" in public printing has been cut out by passage of a bill providing one paper, instead of three, in each county to do public printing, this paper to be designated by the voters. Until the next general election official papers will be designated by state officers.

To further economy and efficiency the state penal and charitable institutions are all to be under control of a single board. This board also is given authority to investigate the "school book trust" and to report upon the desirability of state printing of school books.

The state tax commission is reduced from three members to one member and the office of state immigration commissioner is created, to spread information about the advantages that North Dakota offers to homeseekers.

TO TEACH USE OF ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

(By United Press.)

London, Feb. 20.—(By Mail.)—Schools to teach use of artificial arms and legs to thousands of mutilated war heroes are springing up all over England.

The pensions ministry pioneered in this work when it established a school at Charterhouse military hospital.

The government also is encouraging private experimentation to develop new types of arms of still greater usefulness.

"More types are being developed daily," says Sir Charles Hendersdine, director of the artificial limb department of the pensions ministry.

"Our biggest difficulty is persuading men to persevere in learning how to use artificial legs and arms. They are at first uncomfortable and cumbersome. This soon discourages the ordinary man, who begins to feel he had better get along without the appliance."

A month's training, however, usually convinces the experimenting soldier the appliance enables him to do many things he couldn't without it, Sir Charles says.

Very many men find the man-made legs and arms enable them to perform their prewar tasks which at first seemed impossible without the natural number of sound members.

Metal Mine Workers' Union.

Chas. Abrahamson is now located in Wyoming, having taken a lease on a coal mine, and is reported doing well.

John Garden (Scotty), who was severely injured at the Garfield smelter some time ago and nearly lost both his feet by amputation on account of this accident, is now reported on the way to recovery.

Angus McPhee, who has been in the hospital in Rochester, Minn., is slowly recovering from the treatment he received in the 11 months at the Murray hospital after breaking his leg.

Byron, Drew, Dunn and a few of the boys who went to Seattle, have permanently located on a health farm near there.

The benefit dance which the Metal Mine Workers had made arrangements to hold for the men on strike in the shipyards on Puget sound, was called off, as the strike is over and the men returning to work.

The coming city election was talked over at the meeting last night and while no decided action was taken, it was the opinion of all present that the Metal Mine Workers should take an active part on the political field as well as on the economic to fight the profiteers.

Thomas Campbell, in a long letter to the M. M. W. U., from Salt Lake, describes the strike at the Garfield smelter and conditions at Bingham and also notes being in perfect health.
