IS HENDERSON BRINGING "SOOTHING SYRUP" TOO?

Editor's Note:—The author of this article is an Englishman—a London journalist for the past 25 years—who for reasons of personal modesty chooses to remain unnamed here. He is personally and intimately acquainted with Henderson and practically all of the great national figures in British labor circles. The Bulletin hopes to secure from his pen sketches of the personages who are playing leading roles in the great drama of present day British industrial life.

It is announced that Arthur Henderson, secretary of the British Labor party, is expected in the United States early in October; and arrangements are being made for an extensive lecturing tour by the visitor. Mr. Henderson (or to give him his proper title, the Right Honorable Arthur Henderson, M. P.), is here at the direct invitation of the New York Labor party.

Speaking for ourselves, we shall be pleased to hear what the secretary of the British Labor party has to say, but, should it include advice of any description, it will have to undergo a very careful examination.

To be perfectly frank, we are at a loss to understand the precise reason of this visit from the ex-member of the British cabinet. We are suspicious (and we have reason to be suspicious) when an associate of the British governing class presumes to address us. Is labor so contented, so satisfied with conditions in England that Henderson can be spared to come and lecture us?

Labor's Status in Britain.

It has often been said that labor over the water is better organized than on this side. So it is, from the capitalist's point of view (as we shall see later), but signs are not wanting that it is breaking, if it has not already broken down, and taken a new lease of life on lines very much against those approved by Henderson. For the term of the war almost every labor leader was "on the leash." They were "let off" at such times as they could serve the government. Labor in England has been "sold" again and again by its leaders, so much so that the members of the old gang are discredited wherever they go. Of course, under a coalition government they are safe, and hold fast to their jobs of $10,000 a year, with pickings.

What we, in this country, have to watch is not only that our own leaders do not "sell us out," but also that no outsiders get behind the counter and help them to fake the scales. To come here Henderson must obtain a passport. We presume he already has that in hand, but how comes it he can get his permit to travel, when many others are refused it?

We warn Henderson if he is coming here to administer "soothing syrup," he'd far better leave his grip unpacked. The flapdoodle he gave to the working class in Great Britain during the war won't do for us here, although it may please some of the wire-pullers. We know what we're out for; we know how to get it, and we're going to get it.

By the bye, Henderson's visit reminds us of another—that of Mr. Gompers, and as we believe the particulars leading up to his visit o'er the ferring pond have never before been published, we may as well bring them to the notice of our readers. In our opinion, Gompers' visit "over there" and Henderson's visit "over here" seem to be first cousins.

Part of a General Plan.

Early in 1918 W. A. Appleton, secretary of the British Federation of Trades Unions, was in this country—on what mission we are not aware. This much, however, we do know: He had a talk with Gompers, with the result that "papa" was invited to visit England, with a view "to strengthening and encouraging patriotic trade unionists." Now, what we should like to know is who "happened" to be in England recently and gave Henderson an invitation to come here? We plead guilty to being darned inquisitive.

But to return to Compers (and we can't help coupling Henderson with Gompers)—

The tactics of these old-time politicians are so subtle.

"Papa's" reception in England was like the curate's egg, "good in parts." There were strikes all over the country. The workers were "coughing" very badly, and serious developments were hourly expected, so what was more natural, there being a great American "physician" in the country, than that Doctor Gompers should appear on the scene with his celebrated "cough drops"? These he administered to the men sweating at the lathe and in the mill. He talked to them of their patriotic duty; of the boys in the trenches on 25 cents a day, who were not striking for more wages, and implored them to carry on until after the enemy had been whacked; then all their grievances would be remedied by a sympathetic government.

Dope Worked as Expected.

His "cough" drops had the desired effect. The men went back to work, and eventually the soldiers and sailors finished up their job satisfactorily; after which they came home, the government taking away their guns, telling them to go home and be good boys. By this time Gompers was with us again, and the workers in England, now reinforced by their kith and kin, found their condition even worse than when they accepted Gomper's "cough drops." Naturally they demanded a permanent cure. They actually, in the presence of a multitude of "physicians," refused now to take any more "cough drops," or "soothing syrup." They demand the nationalization of railways, mines, etc.

Before Gompers left England he was honorably mentioned for his "good work." We give a couple of examples: First, we note he was given what the British capitalist press call "An Informal Levee of the King" which was held at the London county council hall. The occasion was to present a bronze panel to the American Federation of Labor. We need not enter into all the details of the ceremony but to mention that the king and queen were present (perhaps they will soon become president and vice president of the British Labor party). The king looked over the company and not seeing Mr. Gompers present, inquired from Mr. C. W. Bowerman, another of the old gang labor M. P.'s, "By the bye, do you know Mr. Gompers, and does he sometimes come here?" To which Mr. Bowerman with becoming grace replied, "Oh, yes, your majesty, we all know Mr. Gompers. British Labor is proud of him, for he is a native of these isles." Then George, king of England, smiled as he finished up his conversation with the representative of labor, saying, "Mr. Gompers appears to be a very capable man."

Of course he's a capable man! The king knew he'd just finished a pretty stiff job with the miners, and the men in the mills.

Hobnobs With Big Bugs.

Now for a second example. Here is an account culled from one of Lord Northcliffe's papers:

"WELCOME TO MR. GOMPERS."

"Mr. Lloyd George Present at the Carlton Luncheon.

"Mr. Lloyd George was present today at the official welcome on behalf of the British government to Mr. Samuel Gompers and his five comrades of the American Federation of Labor.

"The welcome took the form of a luncheon at the Carlton hotel, and among those present were Mr. G. Barnes, who presided, Mr. Winston Churchill, Lord Reading, General Smuts, Lord Weir, Lord Milner, Lord Robert Cecil, Mr. Massey, Lord Emmott, Sir Joseph McLay, and Mr. Austen Chamberlain."

A nice crew for a stalwart of labor to associate with! Lord Milner of South African fame; Lord Reading, alias Rufus Isaacs, famous as the quick change artist in vaudeville turn, "Marconi and Money"; Winston Churchill, the political adventurer. Oh, what a gang! We hope "papa" was honored. In any case a man is known by the companions he keeps, especially when away from home. Following this official reception, the Daily Mail (another of Lord Northcliffe's papers) came out with a leading article of which the following is an extract:

"A spirit of Bolshevism is growing within labor ranks. Recognized leaders make terms with the government, and are flouted by the shop stewards.

"Whenever serious labor problems have to be dealt with, the advice, assistance, and cooperation of their chosen leaders are sought. Today the decisions of these leaders are all too frequently disregarded by their constituents, and temporary leaders spring up in various localities eager to induce the rank and file to throw over their leaders in London."

What an exposure! The Daily Mail unconsciously gives away the whole game. Here we have the burglar, as represented by the governing class, making love to the cook, whose employer is labor. Gee whiz! Why shouldn't labor be suspicious? We'll go further: Why shouldn't labor fire the cook?

So much for Henderson and Gompers. We shall keep our eye on Henderson when in this country, and hope he's got no "cough drops" or syrup" in his grip.—Spokane Forum.

ASKS PRESIDENT TO USE HIS INFLUENCE

Washington, Sept. 5.—Acting for the steel workers, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, wired President Wilson, asking him to use his influence in arranging a conference with the United States Steel corporation.

Wilson is asked to make his reply before Tuesday, when the presidents of the 24 international unions of the steel industry will meet here to decide their future action. The telegram declares that while the men have refrained from striking, they are "indignant" and that a strike now might endanger the whole structure which Wilson has built up for adjustment of the industrial disputes.

WOMAN FALLS FROM FOURTH STORY WINDOW

(Special United Press Wire.)

San Francisco, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Martha Brewer, aged 4[illegible] years, fell from a window on the fourth floor of the Paisley hotel here and was killed. Her neck was broken and her skull crushed. Relatives said she was subject to fainting spells and that she probably fell while suffering from one of them. She was clad only in her night clothes.

MASKED BANDIT HOLDS UP RAILWAY CONDUCTOR

Armed with an automatic pistol and wearing a mask, an unknown bandit last night held up and robber Paul Best, a Butte electric railway conductor at a lonely point on Porter avenue. The holdup occurred at 10:30 o'clock when there were no passengers on the car. Best was relieved of $22 in cash and his watch. Most of the cash was Best's personal property.

as a means of lowering prices, but in order to assist the stores' underpaid workers obtain justice."

At their meeting tonight the ladies of the league also will take up the project of purchasing direct about five carloads of fruit for canning purposes, which will be distributed direct to the housewives of the city, thus ignoring the local commission profiteers.

Added impetus is expected to be given the league's campaign to organize the wives of all workers in the city. Reports from the league's solicitors on the progress they are making in interviewing all the housewives in their respective districts will be heard and the new members secured since the last meeting formally accepted.

The report that Mayor Stodden is about to name Ben Moyle, who has been employed at Hennessy's and Brophy's stores, as the city market master, has stirred the league members, and it is expected that vehement action toward protesting against such appointment will be taken by the women tonight. The women declare they will stand for no market master who is appointed from any such establishments as Hennessy's or Brophy's, or Lutey's, or similar establishments.

"We do not propose to let the mayor put a man from the very interests the public market was established to defeat, in charge of the market," said one of the women. "If his honor persists in his reported determination to appoint this man from the Hennessy or Brophy stores, we can be convinced that the mayor's intentions really are to permit the profiteering interests to wreck the market. If any such appointment is made, the mayor will hear from the women of the city."

FOOD INSPECTOR VISITS BUTTE BAKERIES

In Addition to Charging Exorbitant Prices for Bread, Some Loaves Are Short in Weight.

Evidence that a number of the bakeries in the city are not only charging exceptionally high prices for their products, but are selling short weight loaves, has been accumulated by Mrs. Margaret Rosza, city food inspector, who has visited many of the bakeries and grocery stores to weigh the loaves on sale. The shore weight bread in most instances, was but a fraction of an ounce under weight, per loaf. The places visited and the weight of the loaves as given by Mrs. Rosza, are as follows:

Manhattan, 205 West Park street, 10 loaves, 10½ pounds; Pallas, 108 West Park street, 9 loaves, 9 pounds, 10 ounces; California, 23 South Dakota street, 10 loaves, 10 pounds 5 ounces; Lutey's, 20 loaves, 19¾ pounds; Heath's 210 South Montana street, 10 loaves, 10½ pounds; Gold Heart Bakery, 300 block, South Montana, 10 loaves, 9 pounds 4 ounces; Barkers, 128 West Park street, 10 loaves, 10 pounds 6 ounces; Hennessy's, 10 loaves, 9 pounds 15 ounces; Bakerite Bakery, 114 North Main street, (no pound loaves made—all 1½-pound loaves), 10 loaves, 15 pounds; Cottage Bakery, 612 West Park street, 9 loaves, 8 pounds 13 ounces; Montana Bakery, 605 West Park street, 20 loaves, 22 pounds 4 ounces; Dahl's, 107 North Montana, 10 loaves, 10 pounds; Streun's, 121 West Broadway, 10 loaves, 9 pounds 14 ounces; French Bakery, 611 East Front street, 10 loaves, 10 pounds 2 ounces; Home Baking company, 10 loaves, 10 pounds 5 ounces; Wheeler's Bakery, 320 East Park, 10 loaves, 10 pounds 8 ounces; Royal Bakery, 22 South Main, 10 loaves, 10 pounds; Sanitary Bakery, 117 East Park, 10 loaves, 9 pounds, 14 ounces.
