MAN IS BRUTALLY ASSAULTED AND ROBBED

E. J. Dowd, Solicitor for Dowd Grocery Company, Bound and Left in an Unconscious Condition.

E. J. Dowd, solicitor for the Dowd Grocery & Market company, was brutally assaulted this forenoon about 11 o'clock this morning by two roughly-dressed strangers, dragged within a lonely, abandoned house on the flat, bound hand and foot, robbed and left unconscious.

When he recovered his senses, the young man wriggled to the door and managed to unfasten the bolt with his bound feet. He then wriggled his way outside and rolled over and over the full distance of four blocks to reach the home of Mrs. Woestenburg, who unfastened his bonds.

The young man bears evidences of the rough treatment to which he was subjected. When seen at the sheriff's office immediately after being brought into town, his clothes were torn and covered with dirt and dead grass, his face was soiled, bloody and bruised, while a huge bump on the forehead showed where the knockout blow had landed. It was a quick, fierce blow from a heavy iron bolt, wielded by a muscular arm, that put young Dowd to sleep, he says.

Dowd, who is only 22 years old, was returning from his route in the neighborhood of Timber Butte. The Dowd grocery and market is situated at 1403 Dewey street. As young Dowd passed an abandoned house near the end of Schley street and on the road paralleling the Milwaukee tracks, only about a block from the crossing where Mrs. Potter was killed a few months ago by a Milwaukee train, he noticed a medium-sized young man, leaning against the front door of the boarded-up house. The man was dressed in blue overalls and jumper and wore a black cap, pulled low over his eyes.

"Howdy kid?" greeted the fellow. "Got a match?" As he spoke the man stepped forward close to Dowd. While the latter was feeling in his pockets for a match, the man suddenly struck Dowd a terrific blow on the head with a short heavy bolt which he seemed to have concealed in his sleeve. Dowd went down and was inconscious for a few minutes. When he came to, he was lying on the floor of the empty house and two men, very similar in dress, size and general appearance, were busily fastening chains about his ankles with baling wire. They then proceeded to force his head back until he thought his neck would break tied it with a piece of old canvas—evidently attempting to gag their victim—and bound his hands with short pieces of old rope.

They then went through his pockets, taking $10.75—two $5 bills and six-bits in silver. The bills belonged to the firm for which Dowd works, while the silver was his own money. The holdups missed two other $5 bills which were tucked in a small pocket beneath Dowd's belt.

After getting the money, one of the men, apparently in a fit of anger at the meager sum realized from the robbery, struck Dowd another heavy blow on the head, which knocked him out for a period which he estimated at 25 minutes.

When he came to again, the men had disappeared. Despite his bleeding head and wrenched and aching limbs, the young man succeeded in getting outside the house. He then reached the nearest neighbor, four blocks away, by the ingenious process of rolling over and over like a barrel.

Astonishment is an inadequate word, says young Dowd, to describe the sensations to be read in the face of Mrs. Woestenberg when her visitor rolled up to the kitchen door. The lady, though at first a trifle shy, soon got busy and untwisted the baling wire and cut the other bonds which held Dowd's limbs in an agonizing grip. He says that he almost swooned when the bonds were loosened. The marks are still visible, deeply cut into the puffed flesh.

The sheriff's office was at once notified, as well as the city police. Officers were on the job in a few minutes and young Dowd was brought into town. He lives with his mother at 320 West Broadway.

At the time of going to press no clew had been unearthed as to the identity of the holdups.

After a man has been married 10 years it isn't love that makes him work 10 hours a day to get money enough to pay the food bills his wife runs up. It is half habit and half fear.—Jackson Square Deal.

Sam Sothern, the celebrated London and New York actor, and a younger brother of the famous E. A. Sothern makes his first screen appearance in Douglas Fairbanks' production "His Majesty the American," the sensational success now playing at the Clemmer theater, Seattle. Sam Sothern is known throughout England as one of the leading speakers on the stage, and in this, his first venture in the movies under Doug's auspices, he has delivered himself of character work which assures his permanency in the rank of the screen stars. Probably one of the reasons for the great success of this production is the fact that every player in the cast is a star in his or her own name. "His Majesty the American" is playing to the greatest business in the history of Seattle film circles.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Militant utterances of labor leaders regarding a steel strike did a good deal in the corn market today to counterbalance the bullish effect of a farmers' movement to hold back grain and livestock for higher prices. The market closed unsettled, at 2c net lower to 4¼c advance, with September at $1.44⅛ and December at $1.21 to $1.21¼. Oats finished 1⅜c to 1¾c down, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 32c decline.

Corn ran up rapidly in value at first, owing to the stimulus which buyers found in announcements that farmers' organizations were taking definite concerted measures to keep rural commodities off the market at present. In particular, September delivery of corn made a steep upturn, which, on some sales, amounted to nearly 9 cents a bushel. New crop months, however, in which most of the trade centered, did not rise to any such spectacular degree. Strength, nevertheless, was evident, and well maintained until after midday, when profit-taking sales took on large proportions.

Oats paralleled the action of corn.

Provisions advanced with hogs and corn, but, like grain, gave way finally, and receded under free selling at the finish.

QUESTION OF THRACE TO COME UP FRIDAY

(Special United Press Wire.)

Washington, Sept. 17.—The question of the disposition of Thrace is expected to come up in the senate Friday, following a two-day senate recess. Representatives of Greece have appeared before the foreign relations committee protesting against the cession of Thrace to Bulgaria, arguing that Thrace is Greek.

The treaty supporters take the stand and point out that taking Thrace from Bulgaria would leave that country without a seaport which, they say, would mean future trouble in the Balkans. It is understood that this was the chief argument the peace conference advanced for the award of the territory to Bulgaria.
