...TEAL.

...UTIFUL LAND.

BY PARRY CORNWALL.

There is a happy immortal,
The beautiful of lands,
Beside the ancient portal
A sentry grimly stands.
He only can unlock it,
And open with the door;
And mortals who pass through it,
Are mortal never more.

That glorious land is Heaven,
And death the sentry grim;
The Lord thereto has given
The keys keep to him.
And, trembling, sighing
And sorrowful for sin,
Do knock the late to dying,
And freely enter in.

Though dark and drear the passage,
That leadeth to the gate
Yet gaze boldly with the messenger,
To meet that watch and wait!
And at the time appointed,
A messenger come down,
And leads the Lord's anointed
From the cross to glory's crown.

Their sights are lost in seeing,
They try based in their ears,
Their journey homeward winging,
They leave to earth their fears.
Death the an angel smooth,
"We welcome thee," they cry;
Their face with glory beautiful—
"Tis life for them to die.

ALL RIGHT.

BY THE REV. EUSTACE B. CONKER, M. A.

"All right! shouted our guard; and at the words the horses pricked up their ears, the coachman smacked his whip, and in a few seconds we were rapidly whirling through the rattling streets, out into the pleasant country, among green meadows and waving corn fields.

"All right, is it?" said a stout elderly gentleman on the box, with a grave yet kindly expression of countenance, "are you quite sure of that?"

"Never fear, sir," answered the coachman; "trust Bob Miles for that."

"All right for the journey I daresay," responded the elderly gentleman, in the same quiet, deliberate tone as before; "but I was thinking of a longer journey, for which it will not do to trust Bob Miles or any one else; is it all right for eternity?"

The coachman made no reply, but flourished the long lash of his whip into a knot, and then busied himself in getting it out again. Perhaps he was thinking of the elderly gentleman's startling question. At all events it set me thinking. Was it all right with my fellow-passengers?

Next to me sat a portly man with a well-fed face. His dress was of the best material, but cut more for his own comfort than for fashion; and he had altogether the look of a prosperous wholesale tradesman or merchant. "Was it quite right," I wondered, with him? Was his business as prosperous as his appearance seemed to indicate? And if so, were there no burdensome gains—no wages withheld from those to whom they were due—no sums wasted in luxury and self-indulgence that might have been given to the poor or to the service of God? How many whose accounts are all right as they appear in their ledger and bank-book, will find them all wrong when they are called for at the Great Audit?

On the other side was an old soldier with one arm and a Waterloo medal. He had served his country nobly. Had he remembered to serve his God? Could he say with St. Paul, 'I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith?' Would it be his "all right" with him when he had to encounter the last enemy.

By his side sat a handsome, merry looking lad, on his way for his mid-summer holidays. Was it 'all right' with him? Had he yielded the heart in its youth and freshness to the Lord who died for him? Had he learned that our whole earthly life is but schooling for another world, and when his old school-time is over, will there be any glad welcome and happy home in store for him in eternity?

A young man sat beside us, on whose pale, thin cheeks consumption was fixing its fatal grip. He was going to the neighbour set its mark. He was going for health, but it boring water-place in search of what alone was beyond the power of medicine. What an shattered frame 'all right' again.

I gave no answer could be given, I wondered, to the coachman's question.

And our cheerful, active, obliging guard, the trusty Bob Miles—was it 'all right' with him? Did he ever reflect, as he passed and repassed the same mile-stones day after day, that the journey of life cannot be traveled more than once, and that every stage was bringing him nearer to eternity?

How many scores—nay, thousands of times every day are these words uttered, "All right," when, if the voice of truth could make itself heard, its warning voice would be, "All wrong!"

"All right!" cries the omnibus conductor, as the door closes upon the unfast man returning from his business, his purse and pocket-book stored with what he has wrung by force from starving debtors, and won by fraud from unwary purchasers. And behind him the well dressed pickpocket slips in, to ease him of his ill-gotten gains; and, as the vehicle stops again, and the suspected thief makes off with his booty, the conductor again cries, "All right!"

"All right!" and the physician's carriage rolls away from the door of the dying man, whom he has been soothing with false hopes, lulling his conscience into fatal slumber, from which death will awaken it—but too late!

"All right!" and the laced and powdered footman jumps up behind the fashionable equipage, which hurries his thoughtless mistress to the theatre or to the ball-room, to trifle away a few more precious hours of life. What would she give to have one of those hours back again a hundred years hence!

"All right!" and the police-van draws heavily along with its load of guilt and sorrow—one to be treadmilled, another to the convict-ship, another to the gallows.

"All right!" and the pleasure-van rumbles on its way with its load of gay, smartly dressed Sabbath breakers. What care they, as they look upon the sunny sky, and the flowery fields, and the shady hedge-rows, that the Creator Lord, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy!"

"All right!" and the puffing, panting steam engine, with the long train of carriages thundering behind it, speeds dizzily onward like a mighty shuttle, carrying the threads of a thousand human lives and histories. There is the disguised criminal escaping from justice; and the keen officer on the fresh track of some artfully concealed crime; and the heir hastening to enter on his new estate; and the bankrupt going with a heavy heart to meet his creditors; and the surgeon hurrying to his patient; and the mother summoned to see the last of her dying child; and the man of business, hurrying to schemes for heaping up gold; and the man of pleasure intent on amusement and gaiety; and the judge, and the jurymen, and the pleader, on their way to the tribunal where life and death will hang on their words; and the anxious, full of anxious hopes, looking out on the plains and hills of his native land for the last time; and the grey-haired wanderer busy with old memories, going back to lay his bones in the house of his childhood. And of all these, and the hundreds of others travelling with them, how many are there—alas! alas! how few are there—who could answer the question, "Is all right?" Blessed be God, all is right, both for time and eternity!

Reader, you and I have fellow-travelers on this long journey. We may never meet till it is over. When your eye falls on these pages, the hand that wrote them may have been long in the dust. But we shall meet at the great day. We and all mankind stand before the judgment seat of Christ, "that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." Softly ne, therefore, kindly and earnestly, in ask you, "Is all right with your soul?" "What is your prospect at your journey's end?" A happy home and an everlasting mansion, and a blissful rest, and the welcome of brethren, and the hymns and the society of angels, and the smile of your Redeemer, and the love of your Saviour, and the presence of God? Or a dreary prison, and an endless, hopeless wandering amid "the blackness of darkness forever?" One or other of these it must be. Are you living as if you were not to die? Then all is not right. Are you living as you would be afraid to die? Then all is not right. Are you living without Christ? Then, though you have health, wealth, knowledge, friends, youth, all earthly happiness, all is not right with you. No, all is wrong. Hasten to have it set right while yet you may. Believe, and act upon the belief, that "God hath given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." It is for you as well as for me, if you will have it. He waits for you, one who would fain meet meet you among the ransomed ones before the throne of the Lamb. Be warned by God's own Word, who will judge you in the last day. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is the ways of death." (Prov. xvi. 25.) "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. vi. 23.)

CARELESS WORDS.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Nellie Martin, as she came in from school, and threw her books down on the table, "I do think a boarding school is the worst place in the world."

"Why?" replied Mabel Lee, her room-mate, "I thought you liked it ever so much; you said you did, yesterday."

"Well, I thought so, then, but I don't now, for the girls are all the time making unkind remarks about me; and I mean to sit down and write to my mother, and ask her if I may come home."

A slight smile spread over Mabel's countenance, as she rejoined:

"I suppose you never say anything against the other girls, do you?"

"No, indeed, not as they do, I'm sure. Why, if I said one-half as many things about Gertrude Leland as she does about me, I should be ashamed to show my face anywhere."

"Well, Nellie, suppose you and I each take a piece of paper, and write down every slanderous expression that we hear each other use this evening, and at nine o'clock compare our papers."

"Well, I am willing, but I don't believe we shall have anything to write, at any rate I guess your paper will be blank. If you would only try it with the girls in the next room, there would be some fun in it."

"Take care, Nellie, or I shall have to commence immediately."

The evening wore away, and nine o'clock arrived.

As soon as the first stroke of the bell sounded, Nellie pushed aside her books, saying:

"Now, Mabel, let me hear what you have written down, for I guess I have more than you."

"No. I rather think you have more, for I don't think it seems to me your pencil has gone but write all the evening."

And it strikes me that your tongue has done nothing but run, run, all the evening. But I guess, though, we shall not be in bed to-morrow morning, if we stay up to see—one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, branches of the ... against you on my paper."

"Why, I know; let one hear."

"Well, I will, when you opened your ... studying, you said you ... Lane was the crossest teacher ... she gave such long and hard ...

"Yes! I remember that, but it is the expression I have used, is it not?"

"I will see. Then you asked me if I ... my two silent hours this evening; I told you no, not until to-morrow morning; upon that you called Mrs —— an unfeeling creature for requiring us to keep them at all. Soon after that the fire needed some attention. You went to the wood-box for some wood, and accidentally tore your dress on a nail that was sticking on the inside of it. You declared that the next time you had a box sent you from home, you hoped your brother John would have nothing to do with nailing it up; the 'little scamp,' I think, was the epithet you used. You sat down to mend your dress, but could not find your thimble; I reminded you that you lent it to Fanny Williams, and you replied that you wished she had been at the bottom of the Red Sea before she came in here borrowing your things. I could not help smiling then, for I remembered that you borrowed her's a week ago, and lost it, and she was obliged to use your's instead. About eight o'clock Sarah came in to ask you where the history lesson commenced; you told her; but no sooner had she left the room than you exclaimed: 'I hope I shall never be accused of following her example; she had better keep her ears open when the lesson is given out. I believe she always hears with her elbow.' Our lamp went out a few minutes ago. You called the lady with whom we board a 'stingy old woman,' that could not afford to supply us with decent lamp-oil."

"Oh, Mabel! did I really say that? I don't remember it; why, how wicked it was! It was entirely my fault that the lamp did not burn well, for when I sealed my letter, I played with my sealing-wax until I had nearly covered the wick with it. Well, please don't read any more to me, for I am heartily ashamed of myself. In future I will try and keep a strict watch over my tongue, and over my thoughts, too, for I suppose I should not say any such things if I did not think them first."

As Mabel lay in bed that night, thinking over the events of the day, this verse came into her mind: "In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin; but he that refraineth his lips is wise."—Congregationalist.

MOORE & HUCHES

Have associated themselves for the transaction of a

General Land Agency Business

IN THE STATE OF ARKANSAS.

THEY will PAY TAXES on lands, and attend to the recovery of forfeited lands.

They will make personal examinations and surveys of land, in any part of the State, and report ... to parties the character of the soil, timber, quantity of arable land, with any particular tract, and any desirable information in regard thereto; and, as they reside where operations will be brought their land market, they will contract to have timber deadened upon it, and will find purchasers for either the plantations or will lands of those who desire to sell.

Much one land in this State has been reserved from sale for the last five years, having been reported as swamp and overflowed, and which, by an act of the last Congress, was confirmed to the State, and will be subject to entry in a few months. The lists of these lands exhibit a great deal that has become valuable since its reservation, and the undersigned, from long experience as practical surveyors, one of whom has been engaged in the public Surveys of the State for many years, and the other in Railroad and Steamboat building, have thereby thus gained an extensive knowledge of land throughout the State, will be prepared to make good locations for persons desiring to avail themselves of the benefits of Swamp Lands in offered for sale, or subject to entry, either for a stipulated share of the land or commission upon the proceeds of sales.

Persons hunting homes in Arkansas will find at their office, ready for examination, lists of lands with full descriptions of their improvements, quality, locality, &c., so that they can be at once directed to cheap and suitable others.

They will buy and sell Land Warrants, or locate them for holders. Any business in the above line will be promptly attended to.

NEW INVENTION!

Horizontal Progressive Power

Cotton Press,

PATENTED MARCH 9th, 1858.

THE Inventor, Rev. J. Loving having constructed one and used it packing forty bales of cotton, is prepared to recommend it to the public as possessing many advantages over any Press heretofore used, some of which is here set forth.

First—GREAT EXPRESS: The device is so simple that it does not require a mechanic to construct it—it does not take more than half the cubic feet of lumber, and any tree that will make good rails will suit as well as the best of timber.

Second—CONVENIENCE: It is placed at the first cost, does with the entire length of the press-box open, and can therefore, be filled for packing much sooner than usual.

Third—SPEED: The horse having to travel only 200 feet against 2,400 feet with the Screw Press.

Fourth—STRENGTH: The Press is so constructed that it can be operated in a house, with no part of the work exposed, except the ends of the levers, and they can be stowed away when not in use. The device overcomes friction at the time the bale is making the greatest resistance, therefore, the wear is quite imperceptible.

Some intelligent gentlemen have expressed the opinion that it would last from 30 to 50 years, with but slight, if any repairs.

I have appointed Mr. A. W. LOVING, of the firm of Bennett & Loving, No. 12 Front Row, Memphis, Tennessee, sole agent, who is provided with a full working model of my Press, and circulars explaining the principles upon which it is constructed. Call and see for yourselves.

The Inventor lives five miles east of Moscow Depot, on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, who will take pleasure in showing and explaining his Press to all gentlemen who may favor him with a call.

Important to Planters & Millers.

FELTON'S IMPROVED

Self-Sharpening Portable Grist Mill.

An Improvement on all Other Patents.

THIS is one of the most valuable inventions of the day. It possessing all the qualifications requisite to make it valuable to the farmer. It is destinedto supply a want that has long been felt by that portion of community. It is so simple in construction, that any person, of ordinary skill can put it and keep it in order. The grinding surfaces are of the most durable character, harder than any tempered steel, and not liable to get out of order. It will grind wheat, corn, oats, buckwheat, drugs and spices, crush and grind corn and cob admirably, or shelled oats and corn, and cob may be well ground together. The small size frame mill, with two-horse power, will grind from five to eight bushels of superior corn meal per hour, and from eight to ten bushels of good feed for stock, and requires but little attention, and may be run by girls without increase of expense. The large size frame mill will grind over twice that amount per hour. The meal is not heated in grinding—a valuable feature. Prices are, for small size $175; large size $200. We have the right to sell the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, and a portion of Texas. A rare chance is here offered for competent and responsible men to engage in the sale of these mills.

County and State rights sold on accommodating terms. All orders, communications, and applications for Rights to be addressed to the undersigned, who will be ready to attend promptly JENNINGS & REYNOLDS,

FELTON'S

SELF-SHARPENING

Portable Grist Mill.

EVERY PLANTER HIS OWN MILLER.

THIS is one of the most valuable inventions of the day, possessing all the qualities necessary to make it of great value to the farmer. It is destined to supply a want long felt by that portion of community, and is designed to supersede every other mill and to supply a great want long felt in every part of the country. It occupies only 3 feet long and 2 feet wide, and is very simple.

The great distinguishing characteristics are, its SIMPLICITY, DURABILITY, UTILITY and SMALL COST, requiring no skill to keep it in order.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL IN THE UNION THAT WILL GRIND CORN AND COB IN THE EAR, WHICH MAKES AN INVALUABLE FEED FOR STOCK.

It is adapted to steam, water or horse power, grinding to perfection wheat, corn, oats, buckwheat, drugs and spices; grinds corn and cob in the ear, five to eight bushels per hour of the finest quality of meal for family use, and one bushel of prime feed for stock, and never heats the meal—a valuable feature.

It contains more good qualities than all other mills combined, and can be used in any place, and by persons in service every intelligent mind of its great value and practicability. We challenge the world for a trial before competent judges, and will guarantee the foregoing. Hundreds of the mills are in use in different parts of the United States and all give entire satisfaction.
