ODE
ON THE WASHINGTON STREET THEATRE.
BY J. B. SYNNOTT.

"On Washington street, above Front Row, is a building that was originally erected for a church, and which bears upon its front on inscription at time that it is a church. It has long been in use as a theatre, and a note occupied by the Criminal Court as a place for the administration of justice."—Appeal of July 3.

Thespians, old gods of brass and silver content,
With rattan half a cord and poy boot in,
We'd come in at his day behind wall have spent
A hour or two in business, or sin.
Three great professions have had another court
Within the portals of thy narrow gate,
Each heralding the weapons of its forte,
In accents of divotish or cull hate,
Or tristic dards or criminal debate.

At first, a temple to high Heaven's King,
Where pious men unfold a pious life,
Mingling with humble joy and gladness sing,
Fill breasts with love that oft were filled with strife
And thus hand together man and wife,
Proclaim peace on earth, good will to all mankind,
Taught gospel law by academic rules,
Bending the tender heart by force of mind,
Pick up and spit a practice of the schools,"
Which make less Christian men than cunning fools.

The Church removed, (perhaps it was a gain,)
Twice Thespians and Tragedy came in,
Apollo and his concerts train,
Old Momus, with his broad, distended grin,
And Mamelukes, with their sword and hatchets,
All trafficking to win the public smile,
Regardless of the modes of any poet,
Their tinsel swept, presenting and noble,
Or, dancing Shakspeare with a shining lace,
And ruffling Capers with a winning grace.

The stage remains, but Ministry has fled,
With all her gentle inspiration and luck,
Another's stage! now has come in red,
Where Sorrow, from the Pantaff's cup of sack,
Tastes bolder to the lips of the Thespian.
The Bar there fences with its trusting folds,
The jury patient attention to the judge,
The witness blushing at the sticky legal,
The wily advocate off proclaiming "judge,"
Which means to more than Uncle Toby's nudge.

Thus, strange, all gliding, a refugee of last month,
To Parnassus stairs out Bar. May we not guess
That yet, within my nickname'd "room of green,"
Shall roll the magic-speaking muling Fire,
The only actor now that doesn't at one,
The locker-on? Then shall be Fourth Estate
Cast notions in the purgatory of time,
To hight, by their remorse, and self-state,
With equitie the glory of thy glorious name—
Truth is the summit of life's golden game.

MEMPHIS, July 7, 1858.

FATAL ACCIDENT UPON AN EGYPTIAN RAILWAY.—A Cairo correspondent of a London paper gives the following particulars of the railroad accident in that country, by which the nephew of the Viceroy and others lost their lives:

It is a most unfortunate circumstance that his highness, Ahmet Pacha, should happen to be the victim of the first railway we have had here ever since the line was opened. According to report, he very reluctantly allowed himself to be persuaded by his relatives to come down from Cairo to pay his respects to his uncle, the Viceroy, on the occasion of the Beiram festival, and immediately after having gone through the usual ceremonies on the morning of the 14th of May, he hurried to the railway station, accompanied by several distinguished personages, including his highness, Halim Pacha, brother to the Viceroy, and reached that place just in time to catch the train that was to bring him to his untimely death. The train, as usual, started and arrived safely at Kafer Lais, where passengers generally alight to cross the Nile in a steamer, but, as on all occasions when princes are on the line, the ferry is held in readiness to convey them across in the carriages.

The Arab in charge, on pushing the wagons on the ferry, very carelessly omitted to put on the shoppins, and the four wagons, one after the other, dropped into the Nile. It was, it was perceived that the wheels of the first carriage had got over the side of the ferry, the alarm was given, but alas! too late to be of any avail, as Ahmet Pacha, with his suite, with Kifer Boy, Minister of Commerce, and Kurshid Pacha, President of the Council of the transit administration, perished.

Halim Pacha escaped by jumping into the Nile, whence he was rescued by some of the English railway employees, whose indefatigable exertions in trying to save some of their fellow-creatures cannot be too highly praised. The disastrous news was received shortly after the accident occurred, and both the European colony and the whole Arab population could not help manifesting how deeply they felt the sudden loss of the young prince, the hope of Egypt rested. He was the eldest son of the late Ibrahim Pacha, and the eldest living prince of Mehemit Ali's family, consequently successor to the present Viceroy. Under his rule the prosperity of the country would have been almost certain.

JOHN RANDOLPH.—At a special meeting of the New York Historical Society, Mr. GULIAN C. VERPLANK, so well known as a member of Congress many years ago, read a paper of Reminiscences of JOHN RANDOLPH, of Roanoke. As everything relating to the most "brilliant gem of the Old Dominion" must excite a certain degree of attention, we shall extract the concluding portion of the "reminiscences," as reported for the Herald:

"Although Mr. Randolph rambled, there was connection and coherency in his rambling. In Benton's report of his speeches, Randolph appeared much more methodical than he really was, as he was reported in a condensed form, and, therefore, lost much of his brilliancy. In his common conversation he appeared very much as he did in his public speeches. He was fond of quoting the best Latin authors, giving them new force by the originality of their application. His quotations had nothing pedantic about them. He had a habit of practicing his sharp sayings in private conversation, showing, for the purpose of studying their effect, before using them in his public speeches. Randolph quoted largely from Shakspeare and other English authors, and he had a great liking for "Knox's Elegant Extracts," a book which was nearly out of date. Milton he relished mightily, but he found the brilliant couplets of Dryden more to his purpose in satirical and sarcastic debate, and used them freely. He seldom spoke of Sir Walter Scott, whose writings, however, made a deep impression on him. Byron he praised in private frequently, and in Latin he quoted "Ovid's Metamorphoses" frequently.

"He was particularly fond of Latin law books, and even sometimes referred to Blackstone. He occasionally alluded to Smollet's works, and although he evidently read a good deal of French literature, he seldom quoted French authors with the exception of Moliere. He was very accurately informed in English and American history, and frequently in Congress he displayed his knowledge of historical dates.

"After giving a minute description of Randolph's character and varied accomplishments, the honorable gentleman referred to his grand uncle, who was a young Scotchman, who had acquired a fortune in Virginia, and married a lady of large property in this country—'as all good looking Scotchmen did.' He commented upon his great liberality and action during the Revolution, and his remark that 'Cadmoden was revenged by the battle of Yorktown.'"

☞ An exchange, in puffing a soap, says it is the "best ever used for cleaning a dirty man's face. We have tried it, and therefore we know."

This is hardly as pointed as the bit of Dean Swift's "Stella," who, when a gentleman lamented his inability to keep clean finger-nails, naively suggested that "he was in the habit of scratching himself!"

☞ A loafer left his wife in a great rage, telling her that he would never come back till he was rich enough to come home in a carriage. For once he kept his word, being trundled home in a wheelbarrow.

Cheap Plantation for Sale.

I OFFER my plantation for sale, lying three miles below Memphis, on the Mississippi River, containing Eight Hundred and Nineteen Acres, (819.) This plantation formerly belonged to Dr. Thos. J. Polk, and is generally known by Mr. R. H. Collard. It is now in a high state of cultivation, well adapted to the production of cotton, and is well adapted for a stock farm, and could easily be converted into one of the finest stock farms in the west, being divided into four large fields. The improvements are comfortable, the dwelling is one story of log, and has four large rooms; cabins (comfortable) for twenty or thirty negroes, corn cribs, stables, and all other necessary buildings; a good well of water, and one of the best selections of fruit in the country. This is one of the most commanding and beautiful places for a good home in the country, being high and elevated and surrounded by a beautiful grove. The purchaser will be convenient to both the male and female colleges in Memphis, and can save the expense of boarding his children as well as having the pleasure of their company at home. I have more than I can conveniently attend to, and the only inducement to sell. Any one wishing a bargain in land can not do better in West Tennessee. Call and examine the land as I am determined to sell. I can be found at my residence three miles north of Lodrange, and will take pleasure in showing it to any wishing to purchase. G. H. SNYDER.

THE UNION

Patent Circular Mill!

Cuts from 50,000 to 12,000 feet of Lumber per Day of Twelve Hours!

WE at length enabled to inform our numerous friends and the public generally, that our important improvements, the Union Circular Saw Mill, that we have no hesitation to pronounce it superior to anything of the kind now in use, both in point of economy, having about double the stock of wood and iron work in the same class of mill. Our long experience has taught us that if we would have a first class mill, it must be had by a liberal outlay of labor and material. The guides for carriage are planed, and the rails turned into iron, and that the log can move in a true line upon and without play. The saw shaft is cut up in the best style, 3½ in inches which has been found to be the best for neither vibration or heating of shaft.

The improved Head Blocks we have introduced consist of a single casting, and are decidedly superior to the saving of time with increased efficiency and strength are combined in this superior Saw Mill. We will not for fear of appearing extravagant, say more than that we have not yet hour. If the necessary help to handle a large amount of timber is present, 1500 feet per hour of poplar, pine, walnut, &c., can be sawed and delivered in full capacity of the mill.

In offering these improved circular mills to the trade we do not expect to compete in price with other parts who build circular mills without regard to convenience, style or durability. Still we offer them as low as can possibly be afforded, considering the amount of labor and material used on them.

The following are our lowest cash prices, which include 24 feet carriage and main belt, with engines and boilers of 15 and 22 horse power and all other fixtures complete.

The great distinguishing characteristics are, its simplicity, DURABILITY, UTILITY and SMALL COST, rendering no skill to keep it in order.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL IN THE UNION THAT WILL GRIND CORN AND COB TOGETHER EQUAL WELL, AND AN INVALUABLE FEED FOR STOCK.

It is adapted to steam, water or horse power, grinding to perfection wheat, corn, oats, buckwheat, rye, and spices; grinds with two horse power five to eight bushels per hour of the finest quality of meal for family use, and ten bushels per hour feed for stock, and never heats the meal—a valuable feature.

It machines more good qualities than all other mills combined, and can be made to suit the taste in the minutest every intelligent mind of its great use and practicability. We challenge the world for a trial before competent judges, of any other mill ever invented. Hundreds of the mills are in use in different parts of the United States and all give entire satisfaction.
