THE APPEAL.

A LAY OF THE CRUSADES.

(SEE "MECHANIC," VOL. 2, P. 407-408.)

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
On the battle-field expiring,
By the valiant Jaqueline d'Avenes
Pining, raging, grieved, admiring,
Round him stood his weeping friends,
"Lief," he said, "ye Pleasant knights
"Not a warrior's death deplore,
"While my faltering tongue pronounces,
"O, Richard! 'venge me sort!"

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
Twice the countries for was rescued,
Twice the weary Christian band
(The victory no longer doubted)
Back retarded on the sand,
While holy Priests the dying strove,
And Leonine skilled the balsam pour;
Back to the army's absent review;
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
As, with wine refreshed, a Giant
Buckles on resistless strength,
So the royal Heart of Lion
Rushes from the inglorious tent.
Bounding on his Cyprus steed,
Soiled his armor still with gore;
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
Nine cavaliers the Monarch followed;
The Paynims half for easy prey;
Many a wife and maid hath sorrowed
The frustrate hopes of that dark day.
Thundering again, their horses trampling,
Like lightning o'er the plain they tore,
While murmured from the Christian camp,
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
Twenty thousand Moslems rallied,
At the valorous Saladin;
Thus the troop upon them sallied,
As lusty mowers on a green.
Down they fell beneath the glaive,
Buffeted, that thirsted still for more,
Responsive to the Cyprus brave;
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
As from array a gallant Knight
Stands to meet the Monarch's charge:
"Wherefore, who store, idle dreamer,
"Dost thou lift thy faithless targe?"
"Twas I," replied the Moslem Knight,
"Save Jacques d'Avesnes that wound so sore!"
Nine urbes abouts! from the fight,
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

O, Richard! 'venge me sort!
Already was the sword spirited—
Like a thunderbolt it fell!—
Head, and neck, and chine it cleft,
And spat his Paynim soul to Hell.
Demayed, the infidels retreat;
Yet still the faint sighers here
To return from the distant fleet,
O, Richard! 'venge me sort!

The Mysterious Disappearance of a Lady—No Clue to her Fate.

We have made brief mention of the fact that Mrs. Brennan, the wife of Captain Brennan, of the United States Army, stationed at Key West, Florida, who was on a visit to Staten Island, mysteriously disappeared from her friends, a few days since, while out shopping on Broadway, in New York. The Tribune thus particularizes the mysterious and sorrowful circumstances:

One of those painful and mysterious incidents which occasionally occur in large cities, and by comparison make fiction tame, occurred here about a month since, and as yet the strictest search and the most ample search, excited by the hope of reward on one hand, and impelled on the other by the warmest affection, have been unable to lay hold upon the slightest clue to its solution. The case has been referred to in one or two of our morning contemporaries, but with a want of careful detail, and an absence of names, which failed to attract to it that attention which might possibly lead to some discovery—in hope for which some can render to those concerned a publication of facts at all desirable. We will supply this omission, in the hope that through such means the cause of public safety may be served, and some aid be rendered to afflicted family, who mourn now for one lost as without hope.

Many of our readers will probably remember Col. Crane, of the United States Army, who, for three years since, was in command of the garrison at Old Point Comfort in Virginia, where his health, undermined by previous service in Mexico and elsewhere, gave way and compelled him to seek retirement and rest. He came to the North, and went to reside with a son at Staten Island, where he soon after, about two years since, died. With this son he left a widow and a daughter—the latter, the wife of Capt. Brennan, of the United States Army, now stationed at Key West. Mrs. Brennan has one child, who resided with her at her brother's at Staten Island.

On the 20th of July, Mrs. Crane, with her son and daughter, Mrs. Brennan came, to town, and after they parted to go upon their several errands or visits, it was understood they should meet again on the boat at four o'clock. The mother and son were punctual to that appointment, but the daughter was not. The two former waited and waited, but in vain. Of course, that the third, Mrs. Brennan, was accidentally left behind, or necessarily delayed by some engagement, and that she would take the next boat at half-past five o'clock; but the best arrived at the island without her; nor did she appear to her now watchful friends when the last boat by which she could reach home on that day arrived at eight o'clock.

So unaccountable an absence naturally created great alarm; that anxiety grew into alarm and then into despair, when they learned, the next day, that she actually left the house of a friend the afternoon before to go to the 4 o'clock boat, but that she was afterward seen to pass Canal street towards the 5½ o'clock boat, since which time the most diligent search by her friends and by the police has completely failed to discover even the slightest trace of her. It is natural to suggest any of the many causes which may have induced her to disappear, or compelled her to disappear, so utterly without leaving a sign behind her; on this point the imagination may be left unaided. But this only should be stated, that there is nothing, we are assured, in the relations of Mrs. Brennan to her friends, nothing in her worldly circumstances, nothing in her character, nothing in her state of mind or state of health, that admits for a moment the possibility of a secret departure or prolonged absence to be voluntary acts on her part.—She was happy in a retired and pleasant home, where as aged mother and young child required her constant and affectionate care, and varying cheerfulness and untiring devotion which she gave to these daily duties forbid the supposition that she could have consciously and deliberately abandoned them. We are left, then, to the wildest conjecture as to what can have happened to a lady, unassuming, modest, in the sad and sober garb of mourning weeds, but not unattractive, and in the prime of womanhood, on so public a thoroughfare as Broadway, in the broad daylight of a summer afternoon. We doubt if the police of London or Paris would have let such a question be unsolved for thirty days.

A LITTLE POLITICAL ARITHMETIC.—It is not given to man to look into the future and disclose with absolute certainty the coming events of time. There are some hints, however, about which one who doubts even in matters of human prophecy is far more of a skeptic than a philosopher. For instance, we start with the proposition that the Democratic party are bound, and will remain for years to come, largely in the ascendant in sixteen of the thirty-one States of the Union. Sixteen States, it will be conceded, is a very large political capital to operate upon; and when it is remembered that they are controlled by an honest, manly, patriotic and energetic party, they become absolutely formidable, we should think, to the vagrant opposition. Well, then, with sixteen Democratic States, we enter the great struggle of 1860 under many advantages. They are strong enough to elect a President. We have sixteen more to choose from; and as niggerism is the basis of all opposition to the latter, and as that sublime humbug is fairly played out, including Kansas and Mr. Seward's "contest between free and slave labor," we may reasonably calculate upon carrying at least half there for the Democratic party.

It is well for the opposition factions to look these matters fully and squarely in the face. If they have particular favorites to save from defeat, they had each better nominate somebody else for the Presidency. If, on the contrary, it is their design merely to distinguish their men with nominations, they can accomplish this most satisfactorily by remaining as distinct factions, thus widening the way of preferment. Know-Nothingism having fairly gone by the board, and negrotism disgraced, we do not see whatever can be done for the factions.—Washington Union.

CHEAP.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, predicts that grain, corn, beef and all provisions will be very cheap this fall. The writer says:

"Lots of beef will go from this section, and more especially from Illinois, eastward. The over-labored ox is being treacherously entertained by the owner with corn nubbins and tender prairie grass to fit him for an early train to New York."

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF GERMANS.—We see it stated that extensive preparations are making in New York for a national convention of Germans in that city, to be composed of delegates from the various German emigration societies throughout the Union—the object being to urge the enactment of laws for the better protection of emigrants. The convention is to commence on the 1st of October, and to continue for three or four days.

☞ "My son, would you suppose that the Lord's Prayer could be engraved in a space no larger than the area of half a cent dime?"

"Well, yes, father, if a half dime is as large in everybody's eyes as it is in yours, I think there would be no difficulty in putting it on about four times."

AT the solicitation of friends and patrons, I have determined to establish a Family School, of a limited number of boys, to be taught by my other sisters, and it has been my ambition to make it, in the best sense, a home school, a nursery for thoroughly drilling lads in the English Branches, Classics, Mathematics, AND Modern Languages.

Preparatory to entering College. The private family which is the home of the teachers, and which is one of all those evils unavoidable in the larger and populous schools. It is the school for lads away from the parental roof and the circle of home influence. In the family of the component and constitutional teacher, whose duty and whose interest it is to care for them, and to form them to the model of manhood; to extend to our pupils the same kind of parental care and watchfulness which we bestow on our own children. The fee here charged for tuition and attendance was insufficient for the support of a family, and hence we have heretofore taken in a few families about $12 per month. These charges are supposed to be lower than those of most Colleges offering similar advantages.

The above three tracts of land are as good lands as any in cultivation in the whole State of Arkansas, and four of them have been entirely above overflow, and on the third one 1,000 acres have been above any overflow during the greatest rise of the late flood in the Mississippi Valley. These lands are unquestionably safe from all encumbrance by overflow, and purchasers are invited to call and examine for themselves. Also, the water powers are plain so that they may not be deceived as to what they are buying. Also, on them; also 30,000 acres of select lands in Crittenden and Mississippi counties in Arkansas, as many tracts of which are certainly above the recent high water. Several tracts of the above have deadenings, varying in size from 50 to 500 acres in place. Also quite a number of other lands, both in hilly and river country, too tedious to mention.

Any person desiring to see me in regard to any of the above property can do so by calling at my office, up stairs over the storehouse of Messrs.
