THE APPEAL.

Written for the Memphis Appeal.]

THANK OFFERING.

I thank Thee, Father, in my glad heart swells
A gushing tide of gratitude and love.
As on and from di pths of hopeless woe it swells
The chant of praise sung by the saints above,
To see Thee, God of mercy, smiling o'er
A world where all is beautiful and bright;
And taste secure once more the homeless store
Of love that spring within home's magic light.

I thank Thee, Father, through the gloomy night,
I watched the pulse's frenzied fever-beat,
On tiptoe hope in voice we prayer the light
Of reason in the dull eye gave it to meet;
Stifled my heart's wild, anguished, bursting sob,
With and, sweet matchless of remembered prayer,
And trusting in Thy love and wisdom spite the throb
Of yearning nature, dared not bid Thee spare.

I thank Thee, Father, from the loved one's cheek
The livid fever-flush has fled now;
And blessed health with visage mild and meek
Sits calmly smiling on the pale white brow.
The angel dark whose gastly pinion spread,
Its dreadful shadow o'er my breaking heart,
Has ceased to hover o'er the prayer-watched head,
And turned aside the plumed and pointed dart.

I thank Thee, Father, from each greenwood grove,
The birds are pouring forth their joyful lays,
And all the stars from their bright homes above
Are hymning to my heart sweet notes of praise.
Oh! may my life like theirs be one long lay
Benedicite of endless thanks and praise to Thee,
The ceaseless worship of a Sabbath day,
Till Thy great Sol hath sets my spirit free.

SEPTEMBER 1, 1858. MARY P——

A DAILY BLESSING.

"Why, Jane, I believe you would rather miss your breakfast than go without reading the newspapers! For my part, I do not see what makes you love it so much?"

"Yes, Cousin Sarah," answered Jane, "that is emphatically the truth. I do love the newspaper—and I would rather do without my breakfast than omit the pleasure of reading it as early as I possibly can," she continued. "If I could have my choice, I would rather starve physically than mentally, and I would think I was very hungry in mind if I should be compelled to live three days in the week without reading my own daily morning newspaper."

"You are a singular woman, Jane. What can you see in a piece of printed paper to interest you so much day after day, all the week?"

"O, Cousin Sarah, I see a great deal to make me love it, and to keep me from ever being wearied by it; but ever and above all that, I owe it a great deal of gratitude, because it once saved me from being a California widow."

"It did, did it? Well, I declare, that is quite interesting. But I should fancy that if your husband is bound to you only by the frailest tie of printed paper, his matrimonial entanglement cannot be very strong or durable."

"Any kind of binding material," said Jane, "would, I think, be better than chains of iron; but do you not want to hear the story of my escape from widowhood? As the circumstance connected with it all happened while you were absent from America, perhaps to hear them talked over, will interest and amuse you."

"Yes," answered Sarah, "I would like to hear it, if you can leave your paper long enough to pay me that much attention."

Jane did not condescend to notice her cousin's hint on good manners, but commenced at once her story of how she missed being made a pro tem. widow; the worthy habit of daily reading the newspaper made her kind, courteous, and forbearing.

"When we were first married, we were not as well off as we are now, for my husband was a clerk, and had only his salary to depend upon; yet by being economical and prudent, and not consulting the tastes and opinions of other people, we lived within our income, and made out to save a few dollars every year.

"When those saved dollars amounted to about seven hundred, James bought with them a vacant building lot to one of the suburbs of the city, where he intended some day, should he ever be able, to build him a permanent home.

"A few months after he had made this laudable purchase, the firm in whose establishment he was employed, unexpectly failed, and he was suddenly thrown out of bleistuation.

"At first this did not worry either of us much, as we both hoped that before long he would obtain some other occupation. But, to our dismay, we found that all his efforts to procure another situation, were utterly fruitless.

"He was almost daily told that the heads of one and another large mercantile firms were missing their clerks, and many of them were filling their places by their own sons, who were kept from school or college for that purpose, or they were taking on themselves double duty by acting as their own clerks.

"Retrenchment was the order of the day; and want of employment, by many able and industrious men, was the natural consequence.

"Week after week passed away, then month after month succeeded, and my husband was still forced to eat the unfruitful bread of idleness.

"The little money we had on hand was soon exhausted. Then we were obliged to part with our best furniture, and move into a smaller house. In two months, then, we were reduced to the necessity of moving into two rooms, with only such things as were required to live in a very humble way.

"Yet we never parted with our daily morning paper; we clung to it with the firmness of dying grasp.

"I have often said, let us live on dry bread, before we give up our daily paper; and it has frequently occurred, that when the carrier has called for his money, we have not had enough to pay him and leave our family without a supply of butter, and still we have paid him and gone without the butter.

"Well, this state of affairs could not last long. It is said that 'Necessity is the mother of invention;' and I have often thought that the spur of poverty is the keenest sharpener of the inventive faculties; yet, although we lived severely pressed by necessity, and sharply driven by the spur of poverty, we found that our invention were as hollow as our pockets, and that to obtain an honest living in our native city seemed an impossibility.

"To come to this unwelcome conclusion was very heart rending, for we both loved our birthplace very dearly, and it was to us agonizing to think of leaving it. But—money, money—we were in want of money, and our many efforts to procure it were all useless. Starvation was a sting us in the face, and its aspect was very hideous to our eyes—yet, hideous as it was, I can truly say, that to ask for help was still more horrible.

"Oh, the agony to which humanity must submit, before it is driven to begging, cannot be conceived by any one who has not experienced the utter hopelessness of its soul-harrowing pangs!

"James at last resolved to sell his lot—leave one-half of the money he should obtain for it with me, for the temporary support of our infants, and go to the gold mines of California, and dig for the living which he despaired of ever obtaining at home.

"The lot was sold, and the preparations for his long journey were nearly completed. I was upon stretched upon a bed of sickness, and with James seemed to be tearing my heart to pieces.

"One morning, while he was dressing to go out to make the last arrangements for his departure, I said to him, in the agony of my grief:

"'Oh, James, James, how can I part with you?'

"'I know, Jane,' he answered, 'it is hard—quite as hard for me as it is for you. But, dear wife, you know the alternative—I must go, or we must all starve!'

"'Now, James, dear James,' I said, 'I will make one more effort. I will look over the paper once more, to see if I cannot find something that will suit you at home.'

"While he finished dressing, I hastily looked over the fresh advertisements, and saw for sale a retail grocery store, which I thought must be in a good location, and I begged James so earnestly to inquire about it that he could not refuse to grant me my petition. He did inquire, and he was so much pleased with it, that, before night, he had agreed to purchase it.

"We very soon moved into the small dwelling, which we found was to let over the store.

"As the grocery was a temperance store, I did not object to taking a small bar-bill. My counter, to assist James when he was more than usually busy, and to take his place there, when he went out to carry home goods, or to procure fresh supply of stock.

"At first we had a laborious life of it; and we toiled hard for our daily bread—but we were together!

"More than that, our living was certain—the business, though small, was profitable, and we were rewarded for our exertions.

"We were highly prosperous, and, at the end of three years, James was able to hire assistants, and I was kindly requested to resign the weights and measures in their favor. I retired from behind the counter, delighted to return once more to my undivided domestic duties. In three years more, we moved to a larger establishment, and last year James caused to be built for our house this handsome private dwelling which you have admired so much since your return to America. He obtained the money for it by my reward of merit for my unshaken love of the daily morning paper. Thus, you see, our daily paper is regarded as a daily blessing."

Land and Negroes on Long Time.

I HAVE about Three Hundred Thousand Dollars worth of Real and Personal Property in the city of Memphis and its vicinity, all of the most select quality, which I desire to sell on long time, say from one to five years, to wit:

One tract of 631 acres, 300 in cultivation—fine improvements.

One tract of 1155 acres, 300 in cultivation, adjoining the above.

One tract of 560 acres, 50 in cultivation, adjoining the above.

The above three tracts are eight miles north of the city on the line of the Memphis and Fort Creek Plank road.

One tract 1022 acres on the Mississippi river, twenty miles north of the city, 150 in cultivation and fine improvements. With the above tracts, or any one, I will sell 20 or 30 Negroes; 5 to 10,000 bushels Corn, stock and farm utensils.

10 choice lots just outside the northern limits of the city.

5 choice lots on Alabama, Poplar and Exchange streets.

1 lot on St. Patrick street, with good improvements.

2 lots on Shelby street near the Depot House, fine improvements.

8½ acres on the Pigeon Roost Plank Road, 1½ miles from the city.

Also one lot on Main, south of Vance street, 75 by 150, good improvements.

Also one lot on south side of Vance street, west of Main, 50 by 150, fine improvements.

40 acres nine miles out on the Memphis and Charleston road.

11,000 acres of perhaps among the best lands in the State of Arkansas, all favorably located and generally in large tracts, for which I paid high prices, because they were first choice. It is needless to say that I am in the business to sell, and will give any one a bargain

FINAL SALE OF LOTS
—IN—
Kentucky City,
On Monday 27th Day September, 1858.

WILL commence the second and final sale of LOTS in this growing and most interesting YOUNG CITY. The Trustees in charge of the sale feel warranted in assuring the public that at no point in the West can there be found equal opportunities for sale and profitable investment.

KENTUCKY CITY is located on the east bank of the REPUBLICAN RIVER, in NOWHERE, and is contiguous to New Jo the mouth of the Ohio river, and for practical business purposes, is, and will forever be, the mouth of the Ohio.

Kentucky City and Columbus contains four thousand three hundred acres, laid off into lots, streets, alleys, and 300 acres in quarter and half lots, the remainder in one, two, four, ten, twenty, forty and sixty acre lots. It is from 4 to 210 feet above high water mark and surrounded by a wall.

HEALTHY AND FERTILE COUNTRY, rapidly settling with the best class of citizens, such as enterprising, generous, liberal and enlightened society. There wanted but one further feature to make this the most commanding point on the "Great Rivers of Waters." This was uninterrupted communication with the interior of the adjacent States, to accommodate the immense commerce and facilitate the business of communities. That want is now met by the established system of which has fired Kentucky City as like the centre of a network of railroads stretching out and affording connections with all points of the interior and with the cities and lakes of the North and East and rapidly running through the whole South and West.

That the reader may not be led off by supposing that this is a mere city spec paper, we request you to inquire—come and see for yourselves.

See the Mississippi Central, the northern terminus of the Great Mobile and Ohio Railroad—560 miles long. See our railroad connection by Union City and along the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad's valley to Clarksville to Nashville, 170 miles. Also—by Kentucky and along the Memphis and Ohio road to Memphis, about 170 miles. See our connection by the Ohio and Mississippi to Jackson, Miss., to New Orleans, 600 miles. Also by Cairo, Chester along the Memphis and Charleston Railroad to Tuscumbia, Montevallo, Chattanooga, Knoxville and the East, and with Atlanta and Savannah, Augusta, &c. Also, by the Paducah and Mobile Railroad via Little Rock, through to Arkansas and Texas to the Pacific Ocean.

Also, by the Iron Mountain Railroad to St. Louis, 150 miles. Also, by the plying to and fro with Cairo and the Illinois Central Railroad to Chicago and the whole northwest.

Intelligent, enterprising and practical men who will come and see and investigate for themselves, will discover that the extraordinary commercial advantages and facilities of railroad and steamboat transportation possessed by Kentucky City are unsurpassed by any point for manufacturing and commercial purposes, which must, and will, ere long, make Kentucky City the great intermediate city between the North and the South, at which the productions and manufactures of each section will be concentrated for sale, or to be exchange for those of the other.

The Hon. Postmaster General in a recent report says: "Now, can any look at the map of this country without his eye finally resting on the mouth of the Ohio as the centre of population and commerce of the United States."

The sale is to be made without reserve, and in good faith, and there will always be a reliable gentleman on the spot, whose pleasure and duty it will be to give all needful information, and answer all written or oral inquiries. Parties who cannot personally attend to be left to my corner, when the facts are as opposite in all.

Sale to commence MONDAY, September 27th, 1858, and continue from day to day.

TERMS OF SALE.—From ten to twenty-five per cent. cash in hand, for the residue, a credit of one and two years, with interest.
