THE SABBATH.

'Tis the Sabbath morning! With what emotions of heartfelt pleasure do we hail the coming of its calm and holy light! Another week is hurried to the sepulchre of the past—a week of toil and pain and feverish unrest; of labor at the wheel and the anvil; of weary bending over the counter and the desk; of hurrying to and fro along the busy thoroughfares of trade; of chaffering in the market places; of painful toil at the printer's case, with the hammer, with the trowel; of labor in every form in which man is fulfilling the destiny assigned to him in the heaven-uttered edict, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." To the laborer, to the tradesman, the mechanic—wasted and worn by the cares and hardships of busy life—how grateful comes the appointed season of rest—the divinely allotted day of repose, the blessed Sabbath!

In the beautiful allegory of the Creation, we read that when the work was finished, and the heavens and the earth and the creatures that inhabit it, and the waters and the living things that dwell therein, and man, that last and noblest creation of the Divine hand, to whom was given dominion over all, were created, and the seventh day came, God rested from labor! And when after the lapse of many generations, amid the thunders and lightnings and thick clouds that invested the awful summit of the Holy Mount, the observance of a day of rest was commanded to the chosen people of God, it was the ordination of a great natural law, the necessity and binding force of which is universally felt and cannot be disregarded. The organization of man demands a season of repose after fatigue, of rest after labor—a time for the recuperation and reinvigoration of energies wasted in toil. Without it the overtaxed system cannot withstand the wear and tear of life, but falls a victim to the violation of fixed natural laws. The same law applies, in some measure, to every part of the material universe. Viewed in this light alone, how beneficent appears the institution of the Sabbath!

But contemplating it as observed by Christian usage and it presents still stronger claims to the veneration of the world. It becomes not only a day of rest from physical toil, but a season for mental repose. It affords a fitting occasion for man to recall his thoughts from the pursuits of daily life and to contemplate the nature of his relations to the Infinite—the obligations he owes to the unseen power that watches over him and strews his pathway with blessings. It is a season to ponder the mysteries of that incomprehensible nature which unites the perishing with what we instinctively feel to be immortal and destined to some new mode of existence and higher degree of progress in wisdom and virtue in the hereafter—to exercise forgiveness and charity towards all men, and to pour forth his gratitude to the Giver of all good. To him whose heart is imbued with the genuine Christianity, as illustrated in the exercise of love to God and love to man, the Sabbath is truly a blessed day, and its observance alike pleasant and profitable. With such, the calm which broods over the face of nature this pleasant morning is a fitting type of the peaceful serenity that dwells in the minds of those that love God and keep His commandments.

SLAVERY DEBATE.

The New York Times has an article reflecting with great severity upon BROWNLOW and PRYNE, the self-constituted champions of their respective sections in the debate upon the slavery question at Philadelphia. The remarks of the Times, which we subjoin, are in the main very just. We think, however, he should give BROWNLOW credit for some shrewdness in going to the North, where he could accomplish his purpose—to achieve notoriety—with much more ease than he could in this section of the Union. Such a contest in the South would fail to attract more than a passing notice. We find, however, that in Philadelphia it creates quite an excitement, and is thought of sufficient interest to form the subject of telegraphic communication to various parts of the country. What the Times says of the South repudiating BROWNLOW as its representative is altogether correct. He is an exponent of neither the intellect, culture nor refinement of the South, but simply a self-appointed champion of a cause which rests for its foundation upon the eternal principles of divine right and political expediency, and needs no defense at his hands.

"The discussion between Mr. Pryne and Parson Brownlow which has been raging at Philadelphia, is not, in our estimation, very likely either to influence public opinion upon the slavery question very largely, or to add much lustre to the name of Pryne. We have no doubt either of that gentleman's sincerity or of his abilities, but we believe he is a clergyman, and for the honor of his cloth we could wish he had selected some person besides Parson Brownlow for an antagonist. A tilt of this kind in public between two such antagonists brings nothing but scandal and ridicule upon both the anti-slavery cause and upon religion.

"Or Brownlow, the kindest thing we can say is to hope he is insane. A man who glories at the conflict of a mob in burning a fellow creature alive, and declares that had he formed one of the members of it, he would have proposed tearing away pieces of the flesh with red-hot pincers, is a person whom all his friends and well-wishers must humbly pray that Providence has deprived of the reason. In addition to which, he is so foul-mouthed, coarse and abusive that even the South has protested against his being recognized as its champion, and several of its leading journals have expressly disclaimed all responsibility for any antics of which he might be guilty in his Northern crusade. Under these circumstances, we hope sincerely that when he comes over the border all respectable men would let him rave to the top of his bent, and not prostitute either reason or good sense by trying to convince him of his errors. Mr. Pryne must know that in using scriptural arguments with slaveholders he is wasting his breath, and doubly wasting it with Parson Brownlow. They have been assailed with these weapons for years, and the result is that they are now tenfold more firmly attached to the institution that they were a quarter of a century ago.

"We feel quite satisfied that the spectacle of two clergymen assailing each other in public with a mixture of vituperation and scriptural quotations and threats, though it may, as the report tells us, "create considerable excitement" at Philadelphia, may possibly bring both them and their calling into discredit, and can do no good to the negro. If Mr. Pryne will take our advice, he will let the foolish parson go. Brownlow will do more by his folly, if let alone, to rouse public feeling against the system of which he professes to be the apostle, and in which he can be recognized as a pastor, than his opponent could effect with all the learning and the prophecies for the next ten years. The question of the right and wrong of slavery is already decided, and its fate is sealed."

The Recent Bounty-Land Frauds in Tennessee

Not long since the Commissioner of Pensions, having discovered that a large number of land warrants issued under bounty land warrants through his office by means of false and forged papers by some person residing at Chattanooga, Tennessee, dispatched a special agent to that place with a view to ascertain who was the impostor and bring him to justice. It was soon ascertained that he was J. W. White, a prominent lawyer of Chattanooga, and a popular Know-Nothing member of the State Legislature. The charge was examined by United States Commissioner Lowry and Judge Green of the State Court, who acquitted White of the charge brought against him.

It will be recollected how exultingly this acquittal was trumpeted forth by the Know-Nothing organs in East Tennessee. The Government officials were too well satisfied of the justice of their cause, however, to be intimated by White's position and influence, or to submit to the extraordinary conduct of Messrs. Lowry and Green, acting as they were as a sort of military court. They only desired a fair and impartial investigation, and that they seemed determined to have. Accordingly, White was re-arrested some ten days since, and taken before Judge Humphries, of the United States District Court. White's counsel found the United States so fully prepared and fortified at all points with the requisite evidence, after the testimony of two witnesses for the prosecution was given, that he could forthwith be caused his recognizance in the sum of $25,000, with ample security, for White's appearance at the November term of the United States District Court.

It was magnanimous and commendable in the officers of Government engaged in this matter to adopt extraordinary measures in order that White's examination might take place at his own home, surrounded by his numerous and devoted friends.

Every now and then we hear of arrests and convictions for frauds upon the Pension Office, and feel surprised these oft-repeated demonstrations of the certainty of detection and punishment do not deter others from the commission of similar offenses, and we have almost come to the conclusion that the pension and bounty land act—founded originally in the humanity and in redemption of our soldiers—has imposed some peculiar demoralizing tendency.—Washington Union.

☞ The engineer who, some years ago, ran a train of cars through the drawbridge over Norwalk river, at Norwalk, Connecticut, resulting in a dreadful loss of life, committed suicide on Thursday evening last, at the house of Mrs. Brocie, Tenth Avenue, New York, by opening a vein in one of his wrists with a razor. He had not gone a locomotive since the unfortunate day referred to above, and was in indigent circumstances at the time of his decease. He leaves a wife and two children at Troy.

Forney and the President—The Grumblings of a Discharged Cook.

From the New York Herald, Sept. 6.]

It is a well known fact in social philosophy that discharged domestics rarely speak well of the establishments from which they have been turned off. They always have some fault to find with their quondam employer. Sometimes the fault is that he is not religious, or that he is not fashionable, or that he does not see company enough, or that the wages are low and the service hard, or that the butcher's bills are kept down to the lowest possible figure of economy—say seven dollars a month. We are used to this sort of grumbling. It is a feature in the every day comedy of "high life below stairs." And, therefore, we were by no means surprised to see that the cook and bottle washer of Pierce's kitchen cabinet and who subsequently held the same position for a short time in Mr. Buchanan's kitchen in the White House, should have shown himself, the other day, at Tarrytown, in the colors that belong to discharged domestics.

No one can read the catalogue of complaints made by unfortunate Forney in his speech near Sleepy Hollow, without being struck by the identity which it bore to the grumblings of the plush-breeched Jeemses and Jenkinses who receive their wages in advance, with permission to find some other field for their talents. Forney was an old and confidential dependant on the Sage of Wheatland. He says himself, that from his very boyhood up, he had reverred he good old man and been ever on the alert to lend him any little humble service that lay in his power to perform; and he admits that this fidelity and steepless attention on his part had awakened in his employer's breast a feeling akin to friendship—that he was in fact, as is not unusual with esteemed domestics, treated as one of the family. But in Forney's case, as in the case of many spoiled and pampered menials, this kind of treatment made him vain. He grew too big for his breeches. He forgot his position, and instead of obeying his master, he presumed to dictate to him. Then came his fall. Mr. Buchanan knows too well the necessity of having a well managed household to tolerate importinence on the part of any of his domestics. And as he said to his man Forney when he complained of some imagined mistake in the management of his household, "Sir, if it satisfies me I think it may well satisfy you. Sir, if the change is pleasing to me I imagine you have no right to complain of it. But, sir, though I should be sorry to part with a servant in whom I had such confidence, I can only say that if you are dissatisfied, you may go to my steward, get a month's wages in advance, and seek elsewhere a place that may be more in accordance with your new fangled notions."

That is the way Forney happened to be turned adrift on the world, and that is the cause of all these grumblings he gave vent to the other day under the orchard trees at Tarrytown, to a handful of political friends of Mr John B Haskin. Fine like lackeyism. What a pity it is that so few people of that class can stand prosperity! The worst thing you can do for one of them is to exalt him or give him any idea of your high appreciation of him. It is almost sure to turn his head with vanity and lead him to make a fool of himself. Forney was in the habit of hearing and obeying such orders as there; "I will dine in Philadelphia on Thursday, at one o'clock. Have a steak and onions ready for me." "Have the carriage at the door in an hour." "Publish in your paper to-morrow an article saying thus and thus" And so long as Forney practiced the Oriental maxim, "to hear is to obey," everything went well with him. He grew fat and sleek. He had a good place and indulgent master, and wanted for nothing. But his original constitution was too weakly for such strong diet as he had. He "waxed fat and kicked." Kindness and indulgence produced pride. He fell into the error of thinking himself a great man, and the natural consequence was that Mr. Buchanan was obliged to turn him about his business. That is exactly the position of the past and present relations of Mr. Buchanan and his former chief of the cuisine.

But indulge apart, this speech of Forney's contains a very good idea of the state of the quarrel between the Administration and the softers. These miserable political wire pullers and the folly to think that because they could manage corrupt primary elections and control local conventions, they general conventions, they therefore had a right to impose their views of national policy on the man who was raised by the suffrages of the people of the United States to the chief magistracy of the nation. They and the security and the presumption to expect that they would be able to make him a tool in their hands. But they were mistaken for once.

He felt the responsibility of his position, and so can himself adrift from these miserable hucksters of party patronage. And now Douglas, and Haskin, and Forney, and their hangers on, go around the country, exposing the confidential affairs of the establishment from which they were turned off, and calling on the people to sympathize with them in their disgraces. But the common sense of the country only laughs at them. They made their own bed, and they must be content to lie in it. As for the Administration, it is impregnable to their puny jogguns, which are about as ridiculous and contemptible as an armament of Chinese stinkpots to the allied fleet.

ALABAMA ITEMS.—The Alabama State Agricultural Fair has been postponed from October 18th to November 1st.

Col. Thornton B. Goldsby, a citizen of Dallas county, distinguished for his liberality and enterprise, died on the 4th inst.

W. F. Perry, whose resignation as State Superintendent of Education, will take effect the first of October, will then take charge of the Tuskegee Female Institute.

Dr. N. B. Cloud offers for sale his half interest in the Montgomery Advertiser and State Gazette, because he desires to give his individual attention to the Cotton Planter and Soil, and to his favorite pursuits, practical agriculture and horticulture.

A Central railroad meeting was held in Montgomery on the 6th inst, and a committee of twenty-one was appointed to make arrangements for a barbecue, at some suitable place near the city, on Saturday, the 30th day of October, and said committee was charged with the duty of obtaining subscription to the North and South Alabama railroad charter, in accordance with the proceedings of the Decatur convention. A committee of five was appointed to invite speakers.

W. H. Benson has leased the Wetumpka Dispatch to J. S. Porter.—Huntsville Democrat.

AN INCIDENT.—A touching case was presented to the consideration and charity of one of the good Samaritans who now take care of the sick, relieve the destitute and feed the starving. A boy was discovered, in the morning, lying in the grass of Claiborne street, evidently bright and intelligent, but sick. A man who has the feelings of kindness strongly developed, went to him, shook him by the shoulder, and asked him what he was doing there. "Waiting for God to come for me," said he. "What do you mean?" said the gentleman, touched by the pathetic tone of the answer and the condition of the boy, in whose eye and flushed face he saw the evidence of the fever. "God sent for mother and father, and little brother," said he, "and took them away to his home up in the sky, and mother told me when she was sick that God would take care of me. I have no home, nobody to give me anything, and so I came out here and have been looking so long up in the sky for God to come and take care of me, as mother said he would. He will come, won't he? Mother never told me a lie." "Yes, my lad," said the man, overcome with emotion, "he has sent me to take care of you." You should have seen his eyes flash and the smile of triumph break over his face, as he said, "Mother never told me a lie, sir, but you've been so long on the way." What a lesson of trust, and how this incident shows the effect of never deceiving children with idle tales. As the poor mother told her child, she told her truly, "God would take care of him." He did by touching the heart of this benevolent man with compassion and love to the little stranger.—N. O. Courier.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—A new military post will soon be established in the Gadsen purchase, and will probably be located upon the San Pedro, near the mines, and such active measures taken as shall put a check upon the continued depredations of the Indians. Gen. Garland, although he has come in for his share of the indiscriminate abuse of the aggrieved settlers in that section of country, is fully alive to their sufferings, and anxious to redress them. Fort Buchanan will probably be removed to the Santa Cruz Valley. Major Fitzgerald, off in command of that post when Major Steen was killed, has been relieved from duty on account of illness, from which there is little hope of the recovery, and Captain Ewell, a most efficient officer and good Indian fighter, placed in command.

Col. Sumner, with his command, encamped on the Arkansas on the 23d ult., about twenty-five miles below the crossing. The Cheyenne Indians, in considerable numbers, were encamped at the crossing, the chiefs holding talks with Col. Sumner, in which they made the most peaceable assurances. Col. Sumner opened a new route from Fort Kearney to the Arkansas, crossing distance 297 miles.

Major Backus, with his train and recruits, crossed Walnut creek, on the way to Ft. Union, on the 27th ultimo, after a long stay of some days, in consequence of sickness, and lost seventy mules. A few of them were subsequently recovered.

HORRIBLE—CHILD'S NOSE BITTEN OFF BY ITS FATHER.—The St. Louis Republican, of the 10th, says:

—Night before last a domestic broil arose between Daniel Devine and his wife, the woman was in bed with her daughter, a child about five years old. Devine, extinguishing the light, went to where they were lying, and, mistaking the little girl for her mother, deliberately stooped down and bit her nose off, disfigurering the whole of that member from the face—a deed too horrible almost to think of. The brute was, of course, arrested on two charges, one of disturbing the peace and the other of mayhem. On the former, the Recorder yesterday fined him $100, and on the State offense sent him before the Criminal Court, now in session. The penalty for mayhem, we believe, is, at least, ten years in the penitentiary, and it is to be hoped that Devine will be made to suffer the awful outrage on an innocent and unoffending creature."

NEUTRALITY OF THE TELEGRAPH.—The London Daily News has an idea that England will respond to Mr. Buchanan's request for the neutrality of the Atlantic telegraph. Of course not! It is rather late to expect such a thing after the job is done, and beyond being undone. If Jonathan were not somewhat verdant, and apt to go off at half-cock, he would have thought of all that before he spent his time and money in laying the cable. Pity he put your head in a lion's mouth, and then asking him to preserve his neutrality, is a specimen of more than lamb like innocence, but it will not prevent the lion from eating when he is hungry.

THE CLAY MONUMENT.—Work on the Clay Monument, at Lexington, Ky., is to be suspended after the 30th of the present month, in consequence of the non-payment of subscriptions. The amount due is said to be $10,000.

The Fair.

We were one of the witnesses of the proceedings of the recent Annual Fair, of the Madison County Agricultural and Mechanical Society, and while we were much pleased with the spirit and order with which it was conducted, we regret that so important an occasion was not more generally witnessed by our people.

From the result of this Fair we are strongly seed in the opinion that, as an institution, it does more towards the promotion of the Mechanical and Agricultural interests, than any other system that could be devised; and no one who witnessed the exhibition in its various departments can come to any other conclusion. True that in some, the articles were not numerous, but were of a quality evidencing superior skill. The Ladies' Department did not present so great a variety as was exhibited at the last "Division Fair," but was, in the character of the articles, more neat and beautiful; in this particular the Society is greatly indebted for contributions, to Mrs. Col. Chester, Mrs. Dr. Jackson, Mrs. Weir, Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Neely, and Misses SIMMONS, HAYS, and FLOWERS.

The exhibition of cattle was of the highest order, as well in point of number as improvement. In fact it exceeded anything of the kind we have ever witnessed in the county.

The speed ring exercises—the trotting of horses in harness one mile, against time, excited much interest, and drew together a large number of spectators. The premium was awarded to Dr. H. S Crittenden's horse, "Hopdoddy" who made his mile in three minutes and forty-one seconds; the certificate to the horse of Robt. A Connally, his time being three minutes and forty-eight seconds. The time of the other horses ranged from three minutes forty-eight and a quarter seconds, to four minutes sixteen seconds.

The Society, we have been informed, will hold its next Annual Fair sometime in July, 1859. For further particulars see premium list in another column.—West Tennessee Whig.

NORTHERN POPULAR LITERATURE.—The catalogue of the New York Publishers' Association contains a list of twenty-four different biographies of notorious highwaymen, pickpockets and burglars, and fourteen stories of New York life, such as is usually seen at the Five Points and other similar delectable and moral localities. These are called the "most saleable books in the market," and that fact appears to be the only one that the conclave of publishers regard as worthy their consideration. The profits to the business from the sale of such books impose a proportionate tax upon the State for the maintenance of penitentiaries and other public institutions of a penal character, to say nothing of the general demoralization which does not develop itself so far as to become the object of legal punishment.—Charleston Courier.

MEMPHIS MARKETS.—Our Memphis exchanges still allow us to call their attention to their "Memphis Price Current—Corrected Daily," as being greatly at fault in some respects. For instance, a citizen of our town who is a constant reader of the Memphis papers, and who thought them as reliable in market quotations as they are in political doctrines, seeing corn quoted at 80 to 90 cents, sent down some twelve or fifteen hundred bushels, and the highest figure he could get was 62½ to 65 cents, the "Price Current, corrected daily," of the morning dailies, on the same day the sales were made, quoting corn at 85 to 90 cents. We need not say to our Memphis brethren that our townsman came back with a smaller pile than he anticipated.—Chattanooga Advertiser.

A CHOICE SPURGEONISM.—The following passage from a late sermon by Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, gives that clergyman's view of a "mother in heaven:"

"But now your mother says, Now, my son, it is changed. I can weep no more now, for I am glorified. I can pray no more for you now, for prayers are useless here. You are justly lost. You are damned; and I must say Amen to your condemnation."

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA.—The meeting of the Board of Visitors of this institution last week, was an important one. At it the Board resolved to hereafter no longer supply water works for the University, the water to come from the farm owned by it. To increase the corps of instruction in the school of Modern Languages, requiring candidates hereafter to speak fluently three languages they expect to graduate. To extend the pleasure grounds, and create a superintendent of them at $1,500 per annum. Wm. A. Pratt to fill that office.

☞ We learn that the owners of the James Buchanan, a slaver, built and fitted out in the Delaware river, in sight of our dwelling, have become apprehensive of loss since the capture of the Echo. But the James Buchanan has made four successful voyages since 1856, and cleared $400,000. Two of the owners were the supporters of Fremont for the Presidency. So we go. Our readers may believe religious—nevertheless we state nothing but facts.—Southern Monitor.

APPOINTMENT BY THE PRESIDENT.—Robert J. Cowart, of Georgia, has been appointed an Indian agent for the Territory of New Mexico.

☞ Refer to SPEED, DONOHO & STRANGE'S column.

☞ Attention is directed to the advertisement of "True Turf Oil." It is all it claims to be.

☞ For sale, a small family residence, just outside of the corporation, immediately south of the Memphis and Charleston depot. A bargain will be given if application is made soon at the APPEAL office.

WHO HAS NOT HEARD OF BERNHAVE'S HOLLAND BITTERS.—Simple in its composition, pleasant to the taste, and truly wonderful in its effect, its popularity cannot be wondered at. To invalids just recovering strength, it is invaluable; exercising that soothing influence over the nervous system, and imparting that health and tone to the stomach, so longed for by the convalescent.—Daily Enterprise.

New Work by L. B. Montez.

ARTS OF BEAUTY; or Secrets of a Lady's Toilet, with Hints to Gentlemen on the Art of Fascination. By Madame Lola Montez, Countess of Lansfeld. Cloth Gilt Side, Price $1 25 cents.

THIS book contains an amount of detail, and is written expressly by the fashionable ladies of all the chief cities of Europe, for the purpose of improving and preserving their charms. Independent of its value and really useful matter, the book is a curiosity as a piece of art, itself, for the most delicate perfumes are used with a skill, and an unexceptionable propriety of language, which is truly surprising.

This work is also full of the choicest and useful receipts used by the beauties of Europe; and will enable, our fair readers to adorn, improve and preserve a set of charms, which what cannot be purchased at the perfumer's at any price.
