THE APPEAL.

ADDRESS OF DR. SAM. BOND,

OF LOUISIANA,

Delivered at the Western Division Fair, at Jackson, on Wednesday, October 20, 1858.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I am happy to meet with you to-day. This scene, and the occasion which brings us together, fills many hearts in this assembly with joy; but it is not the joy which rends the heavens with hosannahs in the march of a military chieftain, or in the peaceful train of the civic hero. Nor is it the burst of applause which was won to the proclaim the victor of an olympic game. The enthusiasm which crowned the ranks of Peter the Hermit with Christian soldiers to rescue the sepulchre of the Saviour from Saladin and the Saracen, did not assemble a more magnificent array of beauty and taste, of chivalry and worth, than composes this grand council of wisdom, and this splendid display of energy and industry.

There are not wanting those in this assembly in whose hearts are alive the energies of a pioneer—the love of adventure which throws the veil of romance around his life—the strong will which levels the forests—and the generous hospitality which hungs on the outside the latch string of his door. I see around me the veterans of a hundred fields, who have built up the seats of learning and of art; established and sustained courts of justice, and reared the temples of the living God. Not, sire, is it a less pleasing scene in this panorama to look upon these mothers of the Gracchi, and these fair daughters, as worthy of a Roman's bed as the accomplished and virtuous Sempronia. For, sire, to these and these matrons than to you, my comrades in the campaigns of a forest warfare. They left with us the seats of learning, of eloquence, and of opulence, the associations of friends and the endearment of early life—they left the paternal roof, leaning upon our arms and relying upon their own strong nerves to provoke the generous soil to yield the horn of her abundance. Yes! they are trailers worthy to be entrusted with the government of the young mind, whose expansive energies are to drive forward the cars of improvement—steer the ships of commerce—wield the ponderous sledge-hammers of industry in its various departments—inculcate sound morals and correct theology—be the pillars of State and the expounders of good law.

It would not be proper for me to enter into any details on the present occasion. They are more appropriate elsewhere than here. To-day we kindle the prostrean fire of agricultural improvement, and in its bright blaze we look upon the trophies of our industry and skill, but to be awakened to the attainment of higher and holier ends! There is nothing in the past to yield us to the Bush, but there is enough to strengthen our nerves to the music of still nobler deeds, and our minds to the conception of more extended designs. As true agricultural Moslems we come to the Mecca of our faith, and are offering the sacrifices of our devotion, and with the grand hegira which will soon take place, let us bear back with us to our farms that enkindled interest in our great work and mission which will make our worn out fields and impoverished soils to gladden and rejoice with luxuriance and abundance.

We have a mission to perform, and it is a great one. It is the mission of the age—yea, it has been the mission of every age. The Egyptaras and the Nile home upon the bosom of their waters the vegetative properties which gave birth only to matted woods and thickets, until the great missionaries of agriculture leveled her forests and cleared her undergrowth, sweep where she pot on the robes of plenty and gave the bread of life to teeming and prosperous millions. Her lakes were the abodes of the great, and ornamented with the palaces of splendor, and studded with the temples of devotion, where oracles from the gods were received from day to day. Her population feasted upon the luxuries of well-paid labor, her husbandmen had cattle upon a thousand hills, and her merchants were merchant princes. Nor was the hand of agriculture less visible in those States whose cities have come to be replete with maxims of wisdom, and illustrated with examples of practice. Greece sowed her dragon's teeth, and Cures poured upon her soil rich harvests. Hymettus' honied wealth was gathered to the hives, and the gods drank their nectar upon her chosen hills. Rome herself did not don the purple robes of her greatness until the humble, but resplendent agriculturist, had arrayed her hills and valleys in golden harvests. In the march of her greatness, did she appear so great as when she thought the plowshare not unworthy the hand that had wielded the sword which had conquered her enemies, or when she could perceive the merits of the honest Cato and entice him from the fields where he labored with his servants, to walk in that path of glory, and those ways of wisdom, which so greatly promoted the prosperity of his country, and opened so many of the avenues to excellence.

Ours is a great State—great in mineral wealth—with coal to fuel old Vulcan's forge, and iron enough to forge the thunderbolt forever—great in commercial advantages, with running streams sufficient to drive a thousand factories—great in fertility of soil and salubrity of climate, but greater—

"Still than this, than these, than all," in her men and women.

"For no kind nature wakes her genial power
Around her, but she smiles on man, and every flower;
Annual for us the grape, the rose renews
The juice enchanting, and the balmy dew;
For us the mines a thousand treasures bring,
For us health gushes from a thousand springs."

It is not necessary for me to prove that agricultural must precede mechanical and commercial greatness. The history of all national greatness is based upon the agricultural development of their soil and climate. Some few empires have arisen to an ephemeral display of wealth and power, have robbed cities and plundered granaries, but all whose power of arms, force of eloquence, and possession of wealth have left a lesson worthy to be studied, have been not the less celebrated for their agricultural development. We may conquer with the sword, but we must humiliate and establish supremacy with the plowshare. How does old England, while she is safe with the frost of centuries, yet spread her dominion from pole to pole? How does she tame and civilize the Indian and the Hindoo? How does she gather her stores of merchandise from the Ganges, and how tribute from subjugated nations to every clime? Does she do it by the thunder of her cannons? Nay, verily! What she conquers with the sword she retains with the plowshare, and the gleaming which she whitens with the bones of the children of the soil, she has made to bloom and blossom with an abundance which proved her worthy to reign and rule.

We, as an agricultural people, are eminently conspicuous. Our cotton has found an entrance into every port—our wool and breadstuffs, and the vast surplus of every article of production, will yet crowd our wharves. But, although our progress has been most conspicuous in the fields of agriculture, yet we are of a race of gallant men, as our history proves. Indeed, the man who has trodden upon the soil, and knows that it is his own, has felt that divine glow of true sovereignty which breeds valor and independence.

That poor emigrant, with his little wagon of white-headed children, with his rifle upon his shoulder, whom all of us have seen wending his way to the West, has, within his unburned home in, that godlike principle which his strong arm will defend unto death. And this poor emigrant must still go on. He will go on as long as there remains an Indian, or as long as there pants the wide prairie a deer or a buffalo. He blazes the paths of civilization—he marks out the rich lands by the dottings of his cabins and his little corn fields, which a succeeding generation will enlarge and improve. He must go on—for he is commissioned by the goddess of corn and harvests, like Triptolemus of old, to make himself useful to mankind, by making two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before. This has been our history, and it has been in pursuance of our mission, which is an agricultural one.

I would not be understood, gentlemen, as advocating the abandonment of our homes, and leaving it to desolation. We must stay and reclaim, and let those adventurous and vigorous young men—whose energies are adapted to the combat with wild beasts and savages, and to the felling of big oaks—go out to accomplish this great work. There are men among us who prefer the rearing of such steeds as Lexington and Peytona, to the shipping of an Indian, or the plowing of a row that grows a hundred bales of cotton. There are those among us who prefer to run a horizontal row accurately, and the reclamation of an impoverished field, to the hewing away of the natural forest—the leveling of a river—or the draining of a swamp to get to the alluvial soil. It is the mission of all such men to remain where they are. Nor is it a small work they have to do. They must not only reclaim what is impoverished, but they must put under the plowshare the thousands of acres which are fresh and blossoming, and until "the full bloom of coming ripeness." Run the horizontal row—cultivate the pea and the grape—grow fat cattle, and fine mutton, and noble steeds, and, instead of barren hills with huge gullies, and impoverished fields, we may boast of our States to the poet's words:

"With its low soil, and marshy but slow course,
Her streams outrating in the summer's drought,
Unmoaked her guardian oaks; her valleys fat
With golden waves; and on her mount-side, flocks
Bleat numberless; while, roving round their sides,
Bellow the kindling herds in many droves.
Scatter'd, the herdsman pipes and unequaled rise
Against the mower's scythe."

I repeat that the mission of agriculture is a great one, and the work which we have to do is one of sublime importance. It should be a matter of pride to us that we have pursued it with an energy which has accomplished so much. While politicians of low degree, and mongrel demagogues are consuming whole years in vituperation, and millions of treasure, with like the girl of the Arabian story, have kept our eyes upon the apple of our purpose, swerving neither to the right nor to the left. The vast prairies of Texas have already begun to yield to our hardy hand the varied stores of a tropical climate and a fertile soil. Men who were bred in our favored State—inured to the hardships which make men useful and vigorous, and accustomed to the sight of the cotton plant, and to the riches of body and of mind—have made the Rio Grande a wake from the slothful repose of Castilian indolence—have already established a youthful republic, whose star shone brightly and gloriously under the reign of one of the children of our soil, now a State worthy of the inheritance which our fathers have bequeathed us. Nor, sire, is this all this mighty mission embraces. Our exploits, and wisdom, and power are yet to be shown when we consider the untasted and untried energies of our mountain born sons. Rivers are no barriers of empire to them, nor mountains boundaries of enterprise. Like the Titans of old, wherever they set their feet upon rich alluvials, they gather strength and food from their mother earth, to prepare them for other and greater exploits. Why talk of Mexico, with her fertile valleys—her picturesque mountains—her navigable rivers—her mineral—her salubrious clime—her inexhaustible resources in all those elements which make a people great and prosperous—remaining in the hands and under the plowshare unworthy of its greatness?

Why talk of those rich provinces which stud the Pacific coast and clap the hands of their plenty, beckoning us to the rich harvests of their fatness, still drinking the blood of an inglorious and degenerate race? Why talk of Cuba with her thousand coffee and sugar fields and olive groves; of Nicaragua, with her stories of wealth, still to be the abode of men whose energies are cramped by the plenty of her richness? Their destiny is inevitable. It needs no plumed chieftain, with glittering banners and thundering cannon—it needs no banditti, or lawless horde, to slaughter her sons and lay waste her towns and villages, to effect the great change of reducing into possession and Americanizing, this fair field of agricultural wealth; Young America—those little white headed and yellow locks of urchins in the full glow and strength of manhood, rushing from these mountain fastnesses and sandy hills, will work it out as surely and inevitably as that mind will prevail over matter.

It needs no treaties to give us a foothold. Diplomacy may talk and consume months about terms and boundaries. Spain may arm her Armada—Britain wave her trident—and France interfere, yet the slow, but peaceful and steady step of the agricultural missionary will build the fortress of our strength by felling the forests, and causing to bring forth those products which are sharper than the sword, and more powerful than an army with banners. It is a peaceful mission, and it goes forth conquering and to conquer, not like "Young America" turned loose to scourge mankind, but with a force as irresistible as the tide of our great rivers.

We must wait, work, and hope. We cannot of ourselves accomplish this great work, but we can give an impetus to the great wheels which roll up the West the unconscious laborers and defenders of the dearest rights of mankind. We must do our duty, not only in working ourselves, but in building and directing the energies, and the powers, and the will, of this sterling young man and woman, whose strength and elasticity has given them the appellation of "Young America." Let us impress upon his mind the decree that by the sweat of the brow he must live, and send him forward as a champion in a good cause. And what will be the result? Can we imagine a field as bright and so glorious that it will not open to our view. It will make the desert bloom and blossom as the garden of God.

I appeal to you, ladies and gentlemen, by the most sacred ties of religion and of country, if there is not a wide and extensive field for us to labor and cultivate. I appeal to you who are to be the nurseries of science, of patriotism, of virtue, and of religion, if you cannot see a work more extensive, and a destiny more sublime than ever fell to the lot of men to accomplish, when we look at what our ancestors have done, and what we are to do. From the wooden fortress of New England, our fathers have marched westward, and here, from this metropolitan ground, we can take a survey of the boundless empire that rises in the West. The flowery plains, wild with the beauties of nature—the marble mountains smiling an invitation to disentombed them from the repose of ages—the navigable rivers running from mines of inexhaustible wealth—vales rich as Tempe—and above all, our country's flag made glorious by a struggle unparalleled in history. Can you not see before you a destiny sublimely great; worthy of the best energies of your minds and bodies? Then let us, with our shoulders together, move on, South and West, to the bosom of the Pacific, showing ourselves worthy to possess, as we do, the noblest inheritance of mankind. Let us continue to move on in the path to greatness, which our fathers so faithfully marked out. Let us proceed to that land of promise flowing with milk and honey—to the land where empires are to arise, bearing the torch of freedom—the light of science—and the holy zeal and benevolent principles of the gospel. Let us march to that land of gold where the Montezumas reigned in primal splendor—the glory of the New World—to the land of sugar and coffee, and of olives and dates. Let us go where "the Nebraska hears no sound, save his own dashings," and let us start from its unexplored and unknown retreats the voice of enterprise, and establish on those distant spheres an empire, the greatness of whose power, and the glory of whose march, the world has never seen.

As a guaranty of the soundness and durability of the goods.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and deceptive goods are now offered, upon after season, and sent sealed with the name of RICHARDSON, by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted upon the American consumer and the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with goods of a worthless character.

Mississippi Bottom

Land on Island Forty,

For Sale.

ON THE THIRD DAY OF NOVEMBER, in front of the Chancery Clerk's Office, between the hours of 11 and 1 o'clock, I will sell at public auction, as Trustee for Perkins and Harbin, a valuable tract of land, containing 320 acres, more or less, of which about 40 acres are cleared and in cultivation, the balance being in timber. The land is bounded on the east by the Mississippi River, on the south by Island 40, on the west by Island 42, and on the north by Island 39.

A good WOOD-YARD on the chute and main river, with a large amount of Ash, Cotton Wood and other timber.

Titles believed to be good, but only such title as is in me vested as Trustee, will be made. For terms apply to N. RAGLAND, sep23-dawtd Trustee for Perkins and Harbin.

Land for Sale.

I HAVE for sale two tracts of Land, a section of one mile from Chase on White river, in Arkansas, being a plantation I have just sold to Jas. Upshaw, of Memphis—no improvements but excellent land, and twenty feet above overflow. The other, two miles from Aberdeen on the stage road to Little Rock; has 160 acres of land in cultivation, 160 in all. Improvements are good, with a dwelling, cotton gin, &c. Apply to Jas. H. Upshaw, of Memphis, or A. J. Turner, near Canton, will give any information desired.

sep17-dawtf M. R. WELLBORN.

White River Land for Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale the following tracts of Land, lying near White River, in Arkansas: One tract within two miles of Duckport, Ind., consisting of 320 acres, with 75 acres improved and some cabins. The land is rich, level close to navigation, above overflow, in a good neighborhood and convenient to produce shipping. One tract four miles from Cass county, containing 650 acres, 175 improved, good cabins and excellent pin hoven. This is a first-rate upland farm, remarkably healthy location, fine range, good neighborhood and close to constant navigation. Mr. Price, living near the place, will show it to persons who wish to examine it.

Also one tract in St. Francis county, twelve miles east of Des Arc, containing 430 acres, over 100 improved, with good cabins, &c. It is sufficient to say of this place that it is one of the best in the Mississippi bottom. It is on one of the principal roads in the State and is favorably situated for a public stand. There is a female academy going up within half a mile of the house. There is also a fine church convenient. Mr. Davidson, on the place, or Col. Bagby will show the land. Col. Bagby is authorized to sell. Persons wishing further information will address me at Waterford, Miss.

P. S.—If you want bargains apply soon. I am determined to sell. [sep17-dawtd] P. H. M.

SALE OF

LAND AND NEGROES,

IN SOUTH ARKANSAS.

BY virtue of authority given in a deed of trust executed by G. M. Watson, on the day of , and recorded in Columbia county, Arkansas, I offer for sale about

2,500 Acres of Land, lying in Columbia county, on the waters of the Smackover Creek, about thirty miles from Camden. One body of this land contains some two thousand acres—three or four hundred of which are cleared. The other, of some five hundred acres, is in one tract, and is known locally the latter is a Water-gin, and other buildings for the accommodation of a small farm; but the overseer and negroes living upon the latter tract, have heretofore cultivated both together. There are

Forty-Five or Fifty Slaves,

About twenty of them field hands. None are very old. They have been well treated, are more likely than common, and are increasing rapidly.

I will also sell the Crops (except Cotton) made this year, the stock Plantation Horses and Mules, and the property on the Estate.

I would prefer selling Land and Negroes to one purchaser; and if arrangement satisfactory to me are made, such a purchaser can rent a reasonable credit on the purchase of the Negroes, for a term of years. But I offer the Negroes—in families—for cash; and the Land one-third cash, the balance in two equal instalments, on a credit of two and three years, with a mortgage on the interest—the interest on the deferred payments to be paid annually.

A portion of the land and slaves are under mortgage to secure a debt of about eight thousand dollars to I. W. Moon, at New Orleans.

J. H. Apperson is manager upon the place, and to him, and to C. L. McRae, of Mount Holly, Union county, I refer persons who may desire to examine the property. I expect to be on the place or in that neighborhood, by the middle of December next.

My post office is "Trevillian's Depot, Louisa, Va." When in Arkansas my post office will be, "Lisbondale, Columbia county, Ark." THOS. E. WATSON.

Cheap Plantation for Sale.

I OFFER my plantation for sale, lying three miles northwest of LaGrange, Tenn., containing Eight Hundred and Nineteen Acres, (819.) This place was formerly owned by Dabney Cole, Sr., of Polk, and at present is rented by Mr. N. H. Cotterell. It is now in a high state of cultivation, well adapted to the production of cotton and all kind of grain usually grown, and could easily be converted into one of the most valuable stock farms in the west, being divided into four large fields. The improvements are comfortable; the dwelling house is of log, and has four large rooms; cabins (comfortable) for twenty hands; stables, corn cribs, stables, and all other necessary buildings; a good well of water, and one of the best springs of water in the country. This is one of the most commanding and beautiful sites to build a fine house in the county, being high and elevated and surrounded by a beautiful grove. The purchaser will be convenient to both the male and female colleges in LaGrange, and can save the expense of boarding his children as well as have the pleasure of their company at home. I have more land than I can cultivate which is the only inducement to sell. I will sell with or without a bargain in land can not do better in West Tennessee. Call and examine the land as I am determined to sell. I can be found at my residence three miles north of LaGrange, and will take pleasure in showing it to any one wishing to purchase.
