THE APPEAL.

Colored American Morgan Association.

Gerrit Smith's Doctrines Repudiated—Tariff—Naturalization Laws—Colored Women as Legislatresses—Colored Voters to support Morgan.

Under the above caption, the New York Post gives the proceedings of a free negro "American Association," convened at the Rev. Mr. Hopper's Church, for the purpose of "pledging the support of the Association to the Republican State ticket and to the nomination of Mr. CHARLES M. BRIGGS for Congress." The "Rev. Mr. HOPPER" addressed the meeting, from which we make the following extract, as a matter of curiosity, which novelty, and that our readers may better understand the nature of opposition the Natchez Democrat has to contend against at the North:

"He was opposed to colored Americans throwing away their votes on Gerrit Smith, when they knew that he could not be elected. And, indeed, if he could be, it would not be wisdom in them as a body, in their present condition to vote for him, with his present ideas and political views. His doctrines were most pernicious to the colored race, and if endorsed by them would result in their destruction as a people. It would give their enemies a chance to say of them that they were opposed to the Constitution and Federal Government. His idea of calling out the troops to prevent the enforcement of the Fugitive Slave Law, could only be injurious, it could not help the condition of colored men at all. The low tariff doctrine is equally bad, as it prevents laborers in this country from obtaining work, and gives it all to people in other countries that are opposed to ours. This country is our's as well as the white man's, and it is our duty to work and vote for its prosperity.

"Mr. Smith was opposed to the naturalization laws. He would therefore take issue with him there. The doctrines of the American party on that subject were right. We ought to have such a law to protect our citizens from foreign influence, which operates against our rights, interests, and foreign competition, which works bad against our laboring community. If colored people should indorse Mr. Smith's woman's rights doctrines, all parties could oppose giving us the elective franchise on that ground. They will say that we want our colored women to be legislatresses.

"At this point the audience indorsed the sentiments of the speaker with a round of applause. He went on to say that the colored men should be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

"Let these meetings be kept up now every night. He would attend them—would give his time and exertion to the cause till Morgan was elected. [Applause.] Colored people must understand themselves. It was time that they should become political men and statesmen. They must know the nature of things for themselves, and not take them as white men told them. They must be their leaders and statesmen from among their own number. If they wait for white abolitionists to direct them, then they were as much slaves as they would be at the South.

"Several other speakers then addressed the assembly, after which, with loud cheers for Morgan and the Republican State ticket, the meeting adjourned."

Graphic Sketch of Mdme. George Sand.

"Malakoff," the Paris correspondent of the New York Times, furnishes us, in his last letter, with some late information of the brilliant and eccentric George Sand, author of "Indiana," "Consuelo," and other popular and passionately penned romances. The public, which never loses its interest in her least movement, is beginning to inquire anxiously about her. Knowing that her active and feverish brain can never rest, he writes:

Mdme. Sand lives in a retired chateau, called Nohant, on the banks of the Indre, about one hundred and fifty miles from Paris, and in the heart of the most lovely and interesting of French countries, La Touraine. She rarely comes to Paris, but receives and entertains many friends at her house. Nohant is a modern place, built in the time of Louis the Sixteenth. A large English garden is attached to the chateau, which serves Madame Sand as a promenade and as an occupation in leisure hours. The house is elegantly and comfortably furnished, and her working room is full of curiosities and rarities of all kinds. The habits of the divinity of the place are not those of everybody. She rises at one o'clock in the day; her breakfast is a cup of black coffee without sugar. As soon as she has taken it, she descends to the garden, and if she is not too much pressed for time, takes a hoe and goes to work at her flower beds. She adores flowers, and has the finest in her neighborhood. She is fond also of animals, and her habitation resembles an ark. Her Havana lap-dog, Marquis, never quits her; she has Bengal parrots, native birds and chickens, for which she has built a palace; she has cows and horses; but for several years has renounced horseback riding. She has a caprice for turtle, and keeps a small one continually on her work table. As soon as she gets up in the morning she makes a cigarette, and never ceases smoking till she goes to bed again. This is her only vice, and is one she regrets, but she avows she cannot conquer it. At dinner, which is always gay, when there are guests, and this is the most usual, the Amphitryon drinks water only, and contents himself with a Spanish wine at the dessert. The evening is spent in reading, in music, and in needlework. Madame Sand is a good musician, and the work of her needle, in tapestry, especially, are admirable. Among the other arts, she is particularly fond of the works of Scott and Cooper. At 11 o'clock she retires to her library and works all the night, till six o'clock in the morning, and then sleeps till 11. She writes with great facility; she reads and corrects but once her manuscript; her splendid style is natural to her, and comes without study.

Another writer, an intimate friend of George Sand, has given us an exceedingly fine and cleverly drawn sketch of the author of "Indiana," "Consuelo," and other popular and passionately penned romances. The public, which never loses its interest in her least movement, is beginning to inquire anxiously about her. Knowing that her active and feverish brain can never rest, he writes:

Also one tract in St. Francis county, twelve miles east of Des Arc, containing 480 acres, over 100 improved, with good cabins, &c. It is sufficient to say of this place that it is one of the best in the fertile Black land township. It is on one of the principal roads in the State and is favorably situated for a public stand. There is a female academy going up within half a mile of the house. There is also a fine church convenient. Mr. Davidson, on the place, or Col. Bagby will show the land. Col. Bagby is authorized to sell. Persons wishing further information will address me at Waterford, Miss.

Cheap Plantation for Sale.

I OFFER my plantation for sale, lying three miles northwest of LaGrange, Tenn., containing Eight Hundred and Nineteen Acres, (819) of land. This place was formerly owned by Capt. Thos. J. Polk, and at present is rented by Mr. N. H. Outlard. It is now in a high state of cultivation, and adapted to the production of cotton and all kind of grain usually grown, and could easily be converted into one of the most valuable stock farms in the west, being divided into four large fields. The improvements are comfortable; the dwelling house is of log, and has four large rooms (quite comfortable) for twenty or thirty negroes, corn cribs, stables, and all other necessary buildings; a good well of water, and one of the best orchards in all the country. This is one of the most commanding and beautiful sites to build a fine house in the country, being high and elevated and surrounded by a beautiful grove. The purchaser will be convenient to both the male and female colleges in LaGrange, and can have the expense of boarding his children cut off as well as have the pleasure of their company at home. I have more land than I can cultivate which is the cause of my disposition to sell. Any one wishing a barrain in land can not do better in West Tennessee. Call and examine the land at 1 am determined to sell. I can be found at my residence three miles north of LaGrange, and will take pleasure in showing it to any one wishing to purchase.
