THE RISING MOON,

AS SEEN FROM THE DICKSON HOUSE, JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

R. — T. DAVIS.

BY REV. T. DAVIS.

The rising moon now shows her [illegible] blushing face,
And throws a mantle with crimson [illegible] my place,
And with a dim twilight shades the silver [illegible] range.
This glittering queen of heaven begins her [illegible]

Her jeweled crown gleams like a globe of fire,
Her face unveiled, for myriads to admire;
And more white mounting, she's a paler light,
As if ashamed, by men of mortal sight.

This smiling beauty rolls in gorgeous state,
But heedless she's an star richer plan to wait,
Her coronet now has shivered diamond,
While Aurora flowers their sweetest odors blend.

Still wearing blushes, in bridal robes complete,
She moves a queen of heaven over mines and streets
Then mount royal curls with rare grace,
And finds majestic on her nightly race.

NOVEMBER, 1856.

A Glorious Example.

It is with inexpressible satisfaction that we copy the following highly important item of intelligence, from one of our exchange papers:

MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATURE.—The Senate has passed a bill prohibiting, after the 1st of January next, the circulation in that State of all bank notes of the denomination of $20 and under.

It is a glorious beginning—a noble, patriotic, and most important movement in the right direction. If there are not hypocritical, bogus, sham pretenders to Democracy enough in this House, to defeat this imperatively needed reform, as is usually the case under such circumstances, we may reasonably hope that something may be done at last, as well as eternally talked about. If the members do not allow the miserable excuse—which is usually urged to hide an utter want of principle—that if Mississippi does not allow her own small bills to circulate they will have an overflow of those of other States, to operate against the passage of the law, then that State will have the renown of having been the first in the Union to strike a blow in the right place. If the Legislature of that State is composed of bank owners and bank owned, as most of our Legislatures are, nothing will be done, as bribery, corruption, and intrigue will be resorted to, not to say hearthly disgusted, with the hollow professions which we hear on all sides, of opposition to our nefarious banking system. "Oh! Pin down upon the banks," is the stereotyped catchword used upon all occasions, and what does it amount to? It is all empty cant—hollow, meaningless, hypocritical; it is mere brazen falsehood—"sound and fury, signifying nothing." The people are cajoled into voting for candidates who profess everything that could be desired, but who vote for the very opposite measures they were elected to advocate and support. The banks own members enough of every State Legislature to be able to manage things pretty much as they please. Hence, nothing is done in the way of reform. If the reported bill shall pass the Mississippi Legislature we shall be agreeably disappointed. It will be a bright ray of light scintillating in the midst of almost universal darkness, timidity, and political corruption.—Philadelphia Argus.

A MORTARA CASE IN INDIA—PROTESTANT PROSELYTING ZEAL.—The Mortara affair has been reproduced at Madras, with the difference that the sufferers are Hindoos instead of Jews, while the zealots who read family ties in the name of religion are not Catholic priests, but Scottish Free Church Missionaries.

It appears from a history of the case in the Liverpool Mercury, that a respectable resident of the Presidency had placed his son at a native school, where he became introduced to the Scotch mission. On the child requesting to be instructed in the doctrines of Christianity, a teacher was appointed for him, and he regularly went to the mission premises for the space of three months, apparently without the smallest misgiving on the part of his instructors as to the impropriety of imparting their own religious tenets to a boy of tender years, without the sanction or knowledge of his natural guardians. At last, taking advantage of the temporary absence of his father, this precocious youth ran away from home, placed himself under the protection of new friends, who seem to have received him with open arms. The father, on his return, immediately proceeded to inquiries and learned where his son was. He instantly applied to the missionaries for his restoration, when he received for answer that the boy was a free agent, and was at perfect liberty to leave them if he chose. The young gentleman, however, did not choose, but insisted on remaining where he was. The father had, consequently, no resources left but to take legal proceedings against the reverend abductors.

On the case coming into court (the Supreme Court of Madras) the principal question to be decided was whether or not the lad was of an age at which he was still amenable to parental authority. After a good deal of pleading on both sides, the court decided that the youth's father and family, who represented him as being little more than thirteen, were probably better authorities than the boy himself, who claimed to be sixteen, and he was, consequently, handed over, not without signs of vehement reluctance, to the custody of the weeping and apparently fond and affectionate father.

A MAN SHOOTS HIS WIFE AND ATTEMPTS TO KILL ANOTHER WOMAN.—Thomas Henry, a resident of Mt. Pleasant, seven or eight miles from the city, has been suffering—as we learn from Mr. J. F. Wright—for some time aberration, to which he is periodically subject, for several days past, and yesterday committed a horrid act that threw the little community where he lives into a tremendous state of excitement. He obtained possession of a revolver, and entering a room where his wife was sitting sewing, raised the pistol without saying a word and fired two of the barrels within three or four feet of her. The weapon was loaded with heavy shot, five of which entered her left breast and one the trachea or windpipe, making very serious wounds, and such as will in all probability cause her death.

Mrs Henry was suffering greatly last evening, and her physician, Dr. Ferree, considered her condition extremely critical.

After perpetrating the deed Henry fled, and meeting a woman coming toward him he drew his revolver again, and endeavored to shoot her. His pistol snapped each time he made the effort, or he would certainly have blown her brains out, as his weapon was almost at her ear. When he found he could not shoot she struck her on the head with the revolver, knocking her down and injuring her seriously. He was then taken into custody and secured from the power of doing further harm.

As we have said, great excitement prevailed in the village, and some persons were in favor of lynching Henry, but those who pretend to know say he is temporarily deranged, and that no one could be filled with more horror than he will be when he learns, as the probability is, that he is the slayer of his wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry have, we believe, lived together quite amicably, and he has never made the least complaint—a fact that tends to corroborate what has been said of his insanity.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

GEN PAEZ'S HORSEMANSHIP.—Dr. Mackenzie was correct in his statement regarding Gen. Paez's horsemanship. The New York Times thus describes the accident to the General at the Evacuation Day celebration:

A squadron of dragoons from the First Brigade appeared at his residence, at the time appointed, to act as an escort and guard of honor. The General came out, dressed in the uniform of a cavalry officer, and was soon mounted upon a mettlesome black horse, which he rode handsomely. Soon after the squadron had moved, General Paez was met by General Stanford and staff, and all seemed well. But as they neared the Astor-place Hotel, the horse of General Paez stumbled and fell upon his right side, carrying General with him. Without dismounting, the General brought his horse upon his feet, but he fell again immediately upon his left side, with the General's other leg under him. Again the gallant old hero, he struck for the third time without dismounting; one knee to him stumbles and fall again upon the treacherous pavement. The General now left the saddle, and found that he was unable to walk.

The Herald says:

Many Paez, his son, was passing down Broadway at the time of the accident, and seeing his father surrounded by several persons, attempted to approach him, when a thief shoved against young Paez, and in doing so, dexterously cut his guard chain, and carried off his watch.

COTTON TIE

—OR—

HOOP LOCK.

P. C. INGERSOLL'S Patent.

THIS most useful invention can now be seen at Lowrie, Orgill & Co's. No 19 Front Row, Memphis, Tenn.; the superiority of this adaptation to the purpose required is apparent at a glance; the security afforded by it is also as apparent; the facility of using and power to hold are equally manifest. Its cheapness is such that it comes from the Montgomery (Ala.) Mail:

INGERSOLL'S HOOP LOCK—We have seen a sale of cotton ties with hoop locks fastened with ties now double use. It saves to a bought in the cost prepaid with the purchase of a hundred bales, and simplicity. The "lock" consists of two small castings, about 2½ inches long and only an inch thick, riveted together in the centre. The hoop is passed through the eye of one casting, and the end is bent down and secured by the other end passing through the other eye. The hoop is then tightened by a screw or other power, and the lock is then drawn down to the bale and the tie is
