MEMPHIS, November 26, 1858.

Notice.

THERE is to give notice, that I have taken out letters of administration upon the effects and estate of Charles Rutledge, late Second Lieutenant in the United States Army. Lieut. R. died in the city of Memphis, it is believed intestate, a few months since, possessed of a well executed military and personal wardrobe, a few valuable pieces of jewelry, a small amount of money, and some effects in his favor (over $400) upon the United States Treasury.

This is intended to be taken principally with the view of settling decedent's accounts with the Government. If any there be who feel---but all persons having claims against the deceased, should present them in two years, otherwise they will be barred by law.

New and Fashionable Establishment,

No. 318, corner of Main and Union Streets.

TO THE LADIES EXCLUSIVELY.

M. GOLDBERG begs leave to call the attention of the Fashionable Millinery Establishment, to his Fashionable Millinery Establishment, of a fashionable French lady from Paris, with a knowledge of all the present styles of Dress Bonnets, he can now do more than ever before, that order for immediate direction and Mrs. Goldberg, the most fastidious can be pleased. His assortment is chosen with a particular eye to taste and fashion, a large portion being direct from France. Having purchased them with cash for cash, he can afford to sell at wholesale as cheap as any other wholesale establishment in the city. It is his presumption on my part to say some of the most fashionable ladies of this city, having purchased from N. York and New Orleans, have subsequently bought from me, and pronounced them to beauty and elegance superior to those from New York or New Orleans. He solicits them to favor him by their visits, and examine for themselves, themselves, being assured they will not be disappointed in expectations.

I have also on hand a fine stock of Staple and Fancy Dry Goods, which will be sold at cost to make room for a more extended millinery business. 2m-dw

Interesting from the Gold Mines.

The Council Bluffs Nonpareil has a series of interesting reports from the Kansas gold regions, of which we make an abstract. A company of adventurous spirits left Council Bluffs for Cherry Creek on the 22d of last September, and arrived safely in about thirty days. On the 25d of last month one of the party returned, having made the trip in nineteen days. Says the Nonpareil:

Mr. Ritchman says that the miners who have been there long enough to get permanently located are at work, are making, without the aid of long toms or rockers, from two dollars and fifty cents to twenty dollars per day.

While Mr. Ritchman was there, he saw three dollars and fifty cents worth of gold washed out of a single panful of dirt.

The largest piece of gold found while he was there that came under his notice, was worth forty four cents. Old miners have prospected for round gold, and found it in several places, but always in small pieces. He thinks when the snow is melted off in the spring, so that the miners can work in the gulches in the mountains, that round gold will be found in more abundance and in larger pieces.

Another gentleman---Sam'l J. Curtis---writes from Cherry Creek, under date of October 30th:

Gold is found everywhere, in small quantities, but the best diggings are on Cherry and Dry Creeks, and cannot be worked at present, owing to the scarcity of water.

There is said to be some digging done on the banks of the Platte, about ten miles above here, but the water is so cold that but little can be done. The ice is running in the mornings, but still the miners are making in these diggings (which would not be worked in the spring or summer) from two to five dollars per day.

We feel perfectly satisfied with regard to the gold, and have but little fear of "Old Winter." We have as good a place to winter as could be found around Council Bluffs. It is a small bend of the Platte, filled with young cottonwood, from six to eighteen inches in diameter, and will "cut" two or three houselogs to the tree.

Deer, antelope, turkey and sage hens are abundant, and there are some panthers and bear in the timber. There was a little fall of snow here about a week ago, which drove down some black-tailed deer from the mountains, and, it is said, that when cold weather comes on, they will be very plenty.

John Graves corroborates all that Mr. Curtis states. His letter is dated October 31st, Cherry Creek, and we quote a part of it:

"We found the earth pretty much pregnated with gold more or less. We can find the color in most every place, but, as a general thing, the soil would not pay unless extensively worked. But, up Cherry Creek and other branches, it will pay to dismiss any one who chooses to work it. We will not, however, be able to do much this winter, but those who winter here will have the advantage in the spring, while the water is coming down the mountains. I think we shall be able to make from three to ten dollars per day, but hope to do better with the implements we have to work with.

"I send you a small particle of dust, to show you that the gold is not all a humbug. This I panned out myself. Provisions are scarce and high, but we, and most of the emigrants, have enough to last till spring. We are building in a very heavy grove of cottonwood timber, on the south fork of the Platte, immediately at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. We have a plain view of Pike's Peak, which is about sixty miles south of us.

"Emigrants are daily arriving, and we think there will be from four to six hundred men in here this winter. We hear and fear but little of the Indians. There is a town laid off here, but as yet no splendid brick blocks have gone up.

"Snow has been falling all the morning, and it is now about seven inches deep, and yet falling."

CONFESSIONS OF A TABLE-MOVER.---For a long time Mr. George P. Paine, of Worcester, Mass., has been known as a powerful "physical medium," and his wonderful exploits in the line of table-moving have converted hundreds of people to spiritualism, and been an argument in the mouth of its believers. His demonstrations were not in the dark, like those of the Davenport boys, but under a full blaze of gas or in broad daylight. He has made tables move apparently without human contact, to the comfort of believers and the confounding of skeptics.

Recently Mr. Paine came to this city, mainly for the purpose of convincing Mr. Coles, a former medium, who has recently concluded that physical manifestations are a humbug. For this purpose a circle was held in Mr. Paine's rooms, and Coles, with several others, attended and were unable to detect any deception. At last a small hole in the floor and a rent in the carpet were discovered in close proximity with the table-legs. Three gentlemen proposed to take up the carpet, but Mr. Paine demurred, and requested them to call next day. Mr. Coles and his associates, however, determined not to yield the point, and gave Mr. Paine clearly to understand that they would not leave the room until the hole had been up that night.

Mr. Paine, finding that he could not slave off an examination, finally acknowledged that the whole thing was a fraud, that he had cheated, not only on this occasion, but from the beginning, his wife and his most intimate friends, as well as his most numerous converts, that he had been the dupes of his premeditated deception.

Mr. Coles stated these facts in the Spiritual Conference, on Wednesday evening, in the presence of Mr. Paine, and after he had concluded, the hogs in motion got up, rose and cheerfully acknowledged the fraud, and defended it, on the ground that the end justified the means. He believed that the great share of the reputed spiritual phenomena is sham, although he was of opinion that some of them were real. He stood commended to his own conscience, and counsel it among his treasures in heaven, that he had charged nothing, although small presents had, from time to time, flown into his earthly coffers---he labor for them on the ground of love. He had resorted to deception in order to meet deception, and ultimately expose it.

Having defended his course, Mr. Paine exhibited a piece of No. 2 wire, as the veritable appatus by which he had moved tables, and converted hundreds to Spiritualism.---Worcester (Mass.) Rep.

COLONEL STEPTOE'S BATTLE-GROUND.---A letter from Washington Territory says:

Colonel Wright, on reaching his camp on the Nedahnah creek, sent a party, with three companies of dragoons, to the battle-field of Colonel Steptoe, to recover the two twelve-pound howitzers there lost, and to gather together the bones of those who fell in that very memorable defeat of our troops, with the proper forms and ceremonies, a decent military burial to the last remains of those gallant men, who lost their valuable lives in the wilderness, fighting a treacherous, faithless enemy, and acting as pioneers in a future hardy population, who will mention with honor the names of Taylor and Gaston, when the fame of many shall have grown dim.

Lieutenant Mullan, with his party, was sent with Major Grier to determine the position of the battle-field, and make a map and sketch of the ground. Dr. Randolph and Lieutenant Grey, who were in Steptoe's battle, were present, and also Lieutenant White, who, with his canoe at hand, paddled down the long-boat guns and Lieutenant Ponder and Howard to assist in paying the last respects to a place now hallowed in history. At 12 m. they reached the battle-field, which now seemed truly the city of the dead, for there was more than a decent duty, and the bones of men, whom their country should never forget, lay bleaching on the prairie hills for miles around. During the heat of battle their bodies could not be recovered, and as the retreat was made at night, no time was had to pay burial to any save Captain Taylor, Lieutenant Gaston, and two men and a half-breed.

A scene of sad desolation met the eye on every side, and as Lieutenant Grey and Dr. Randolph would point to this and that spot, as bearing testimony to the brave acts of braver men, those around listened and dropped a silent tear for those so ruthlessly butchered. In silence and sadness they gathered the remains of the officers and men, recovered the two guns which still remained buried as they were left, and taking a pair of shafts off one of the guns---the only thing remaining of all that been left on the battle-field they fashioned and framed it into a rude cross, and erected it upon the ground, as not only a sign to all future travelers, who, through curiosity or otherwise, should visit this point, but as a Christian mark for the butchered dead; and planting around this cross the remnants of all that was remaining, they left the spot in mournful silence.

PAULSEN PLAYING HIS TEN GAMES AT PITTSBURGH.---The Pittsburgh Chronicle, referring to the chess feat of Mr. PAULSEN, in that city, says:

During the entire continuance of this protracted and obstinately contested tournament, lasting ten hours and forty-five minutes, Mr. Paulsen sat in an elevated rostrum at one end of the hall, completely motionless. His face was turned square to the wall, his back in front of him, and his back to his opponents and the spectators. He sat with his feet generally upon the floor, his knees drawn closely together, and covered with a cloth or garment. Pending the play, he partook of nothing but occasionally a little cold water. The ten boards were arranged around his desk in regular order, No. 1 being directly to his left as he sat, and No. 10 being directly behind him and completing the circle. A temporary balustrading separated the contestants from the spectators, the number of which were constantly fluctuating during the day and evening.

Around the room were scattered tables covered with numbered chess-boards, on which the various moves were made as announced, and the games closely followed by excited groups of spectators. When a move of extra importance was made, as when check was cried, or when a queen or large piece was taken, there was an unusual bustle and shuffling of feet, as spectators ran from board to board. Of course each player had to wait until his turn came round. His move in answer to Paulsen's last was announced, when Paulsen, sometimes almost immediately, and sometimes after shorter or longer silence, would proclaim his move, and then at once dismiss that game and board from his mind until its turn came around again.

The whole contest was a beautiful exhibition of skill, memory, and the power of abstraction, displaying interesting phenomena of both a physical and intellectual character.

RETURNED IN SAFETY.---Lords Cavendish and Grosvenor and Hon. Mr. Ashly, who, according to rumor, have been "eaten up by bears," "killed by Indians," and "frozen in the snow," while on their hunting expedition in the region of the Red River of the North, reached this city in safety last night, and are now the guests of the Richmond House.---Chicago Journal, 21st.

A Glance at Mexico---Its Wealth, Soil, Cities, Population, &c.

Some time since Senor Tejada, one of the most intelligent gentlemen of that republic, published a series of articles upon the condition of Mexico, giving a very good idea to the outside world of what is its natural wealth, the quality of its soil, the richness of its mines, the size of its cities, &c. It has command of a large ocean front, with numerous gulfs, bays and inlets, many of which furnish many excellent harbors. There are some twelve or fifteen rivers, the longest of which is the Rio Bravo del Norte, all of which are navigable to a certain distance; in most cases, however, very short. A good many of these and the lesser streams of the country would furnish an abundance of water-power which now runs to waste. The more southerly portions of the country are almost uniformly fertile. Sterility is impressed chiefly on the northern plains and the mountainous regions. A great deal of the finest soil of Mexico is yet unreclaimed. It abounds in the most valuable timber-trees, and a growth which affords rich dyes and many of the prized gums of commerce and medicinal extracts. Of its mineral wealth, not a word need be said. There is scarcely a known metal which is not found in its mines.

There were at the last examination of the department but 9,234 foreigners residing in the country, of which there were 5,141 old Spaniards, 2,948 Frenchmen, 615 Englishmen, 581 Germans, 444 Americans, and of other nations 465.

The agricultural wealth is estimated at $260,000,000, and the yield of the mines at $24,000,000 annually. The value of domestic manufactures is set down at $99,000,000. There are forty-six cotton and eight woolen manufactories, located chiefly in the middle States of the Republic. About forty thousand pounds of silk are made in silkeries at the capital and in Puebla and Guadalajara.

GREAT EXCITEMENT AMONG THE COLORED POPULATION OF BROOKLYN.---A colored lecturer, Dr. Martin Delaney, an agent of the British Colonization Society, who is now operating in Brooklyn, New York, having made statements at a public meeting derogatory to the character of colored people in the Northern States, as contrasted with those in Canada, an indignation meeting was held on Tuesday evening at the Apostolic Church on Broadway, when the following resolutions were adopted.

Resolved, That the law of Ohio, which allows a person over half white, to vote, is not a law encouraging bastardy; and that the assertion that it is calculated to promote the prostitution of our females to white men is false.

Resolved, That the law of New York, requiring $250 property qualification for colored voters, does not cause such voters to regard their poorer brethern with contempt or disrespect.

Resolved, That the statements of Doctor Martin Delaney, that colored men do not understand politics, and that they do not dare vote or be voted for to fill any office in any town, city, or county of this State are base falsehoods.

Resolved, That the statement of said Delaney, that colored women are obliged to labor at the wash-tub to support their husbands in rum and cigars, is another mischievous and slanderous lie.

Resolved, That the said negro be requested to take his immediate departure for the wilds of Africa, or the river Niger, where he says he belongs, and to take his little negro Cyprian along with him, and there remain till the colored citizens of Brooklyn, E. D., shall send for him.

Resolved, That the said Martin Delaney be requested to evacuate the city of Brooklyn for the benefit of his health.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions duly signed, be handed to Doctor Delaney for his immediate perusal.

The meeting was addressed by several speakers, all of whom asserted that the virtue of colored women, and the intelligence of colored writers, were above suspicion or impeachment; and denounced Doctor Delaney as a base slanderer. The meeting then adjourned till the next evening.
