☞ Remember the sermon in behalf of the orphans, by Bishop Otey, this morning, at Calvary Church.

Models.—The sidewalks in the principal streets of the city were yesterday morning strewn with models of "shocking bad hats."

☞ The Rev. J. W. Strick, of Nashville, will preach at the First Baptist Church, tonight, at seven o'clock. The public are respectfully invited to attend.

The Weather.—The weather yesterday was very warm; a brisk wind blew from the south in the morning; at night we had heavy rains, with thunder and lightning.

☞ Rev. J. T. C. Collins, book and tract agent of the Memphis Conference, will preach at Wesley Chapel, this morning, at 11 o'clock; at the State Colleges, at 3 o'clock, and at Asbury Chapel, at 7 p. m.

Criminal Court.—This court sat its four and a half hours yesterday; the trial of Winters proceeded but was not finished. The Grand Jury brought in a true bill against John Milton, for stealing a glazier's diamond.

Receipts and Payments.—The tax collector last week collected over eight thousand dollars; the Register yesterday paid, on account of the city, over seventeen thousand dollars.

☞ The attention of planters and all others interested, is invited to the advertisement of W. Howard & Co., who keep constantly on hand a large assortment of supplies of every description, fresh and genuine.

Railroad Damages.—We learn from Conductor Hope, that the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad has been seriously damaged between Knoxville and Bristol, by the late heavy rains; some of the bridges were broken down, and other injuries suffered.

Thanks.—We are under obligations to Mr. Borden and Mr. Armstrong, of Adams & Co.'s Express, for Eastern papers. Their kindnesses are innumerable.

We are also again under obligations to Capt. Dill for similar favors.

The Steamboat Race.—We mentioned on Friday that the McLellan and the Lucas had started out together on the preceding evening, on a race to Cairo. Mr. S. R. Hayman, last evening, showed us a dispatch he had received from the operators of the telegraph at Cairo, which says: "The Lucas was three hours ahead of the McLellan."

Excursion.—We understand that an excursion is in preparation for the City Council and others of this city, to go by railroad to Columbus, Ky., where a grand dinner will be partaken of, the company returning at night. We believe Council will set hold a meeting immediately after their return home. The first of March we heard named as the probable date of the excursion.

The Quid Nunc.—The publisher of this forthcoming paper, J. B. Synnott, informs us that he will receive advertisements for it at Grand Junction, on Monday. We learn that the new paper will begin under very favorable auspices. Grand Junction is certain to be an important place, and a paper published there will have a fine chance of success. Mr. Synnott is an accomplished master of his profession, and will make an excellent publisher.

Letter List.—The list of uncalled-for letters is advertised regularly in our Sunday Edition. It will be found in this morning's paper. It is not published in any other city paper, so that if persons wish to know whether they have letters in the Memphis post office, they must subscribe for the Appeal regularly, or buy our Sunday Edition, which always contains a large amount of matter interesting to the general reader.

The Lumber Business.—The lumber business is becoming a large one in Memphis, and among the pioneers of the trade none have shown more industry in their calling, or been more successful in their enterprises, than M. E. Cochran, whose office is on center landing at the foot of Washington street. He began business ten years ago in a small way, and is now doing a large trade. He is the oldest lumber man in Memphis, and well merits an extensive patronage from our citizens. Let him have it.

Escaped and Retaken.—There are two men on the chain gang—Davis and Clarke—who can never be satisfied. When they are off, they never rest until they are on, and when on they are miserable until they are off. They have run away so frequently, lately, that it had been found necessary to chain them together; but even chains would not detain them; for yesterday they contrived to crawl out of the jail yard under the large doors. Capt. Steinback found them near Wolf river. When Clarke saw him, he jumped into the stream, dragging his companion with him. Davis, however, could not swim, and the two were again committed to the chain gang.

Felt-hies.—Memphis is rapidly extending the sources of her wealth. To her large cotton trade she is adding a share of the tobacco business; a large amount of meat is annually killed and packed here, and the poultry trade is now being added to our other resources. The house of J. H. Hise & Co., corner of Main and Union streets, have this winter taken the initiative in this business. They have this year invested forty thousand dollars, and have collected a large amount of skins, of which the mink skins are the most valuable. There are, also, bear, raccoon, opossum, fox and other skins. They are generally trapped in the swamps, lagoons and broken ground that exist in the rear of New Madrid, in the section of country on the Missouri and Arkansas line, generally known as the earthquake district. The trappers commence business in the fall, and pursue their solitary and peculiar occupation during the entire winter.

Market Houses, Parks and School Houses.—The local column of the Enquirer had a paragraph, a day or two ago, objecting to the Council spending the money of the city—now the city treasury is so low—on parks and ornamental grounds. The paragraph expresses the opinion that market houses, school houses and street paving should have the precedence over such improvements. The Enquirer does not object to parks, but to spending money for them just at the present time. The City Council has no intention, nor has it entertained any proposition for spending money for such purposes as ornamenting parks, at least for some time to come. It is true that Market Square is set apart for a public square, but the work of fencing it in and ornamenting it with trees and shrubs is left for the future. With respect to the ground at the foot of Main street, now occupied as a cemetery, Council have had no proposition before it for its purchase. It is understood that the dead now in that place are to be removed to Elmwood Cemetery, and but the public spirited proprietors of the place contemplate offering it to the city at the amount it cost them, the time of payment to be regulated to suit the convenience of the city. To such a purchase, under such restrictions, we presume there would be no objection by any intelligent citizen. With Court Square in the center of the city, Market Square at the north end, and Morris Square at the south end, and with a well paved levee, Memphis would compel admiration from every visitor, and would rank high in estimation abroad. These improvements would be of little value, however, unless a school house dotted the city here and there, betokening that an intelligent generation is rising up to advance the future position and character of Memphis.

No advertisements of steamboats inserted except through agents in this city, who will be held responsible for advertising fees.

River News.

The river was rising rapidly yesterday and some drift was floating. The landing was in a dreadful condition from mud which the heavy storm of last evening did not mend.

The handsome and spacious Alvin Adams is the Ohio river boat to-morrow. She leaves this afternoon at three o'clock for Louisville and intermediate ports. Capt. Lamb and the clerks Ed. Hallibay will spare no pains to make the trip agreable to passengers. Priest agent.

Since writing the above we learn that the Alvin Adams has been detained for repairs, and that the splendid The Vivaria will take her place.

The Philadelphia is the regular packet boat for St. Louis to-morrow, starting at 4 o'clock this evening. Capt. Marshall and Mr. Petty, the clerk, are famous for kindly courtesies to those who travel on the Philadelphia. The boat has been lately in the workman's hands, and is in a fine condition. Williams agent.

The St. Francis No. 2, A. T. Wood in command, Will Wood clerk, leaves to-morrow evening for Vicksburg, and passengers bound down stream will find her the right boat for them; she is punctual in her time and her officers are agreeable and attentive gentlemen.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of February 16, reports:

The Marshal has attached the Tennessee Belle, lying at the levee, for a small sum, at the suit of the Niles Works, but it was supposed the liability would be paid at once and the boat released. The Belle is in the New Orleans trade.

Second Marriage—A Widow in Trouble.

A friend of ours, who does business on Main street in this city, was traveling a few weeks ago in Arkansas, some fifty or sixty miles below Memphis. As night came on at the conclusion of a long day's travel, he arrived at a solitary house, where, it appeared, the residents within were already preparing to retire to rest. He knocked at the door; a head was protruded from a window, and, in reply to a question from the owner of the head, he said he wished to stay for the night. The head was withdrawn, and a consultation ensued, apparently took place with some within, and after a little delay the head was again advanced, and our friend was asked his name. We will not give the name stated—that of "Fulkerson" will answer the same purpose. "Fulkerson," repeated the man with the head out of the window, as if surprised, and not agreeably so. "Yes, John Fulkerson," was the reply, in a tone that had an expression of impatience about it; for the traveler was hungry as well as tired, and not being a priest, fasting never smoothes his temper. The head was again withdrawn at this announcement, as rapidly as an Irishman once withdrew his, when he knelt and took a drink out of one of the boiling springs of Saratoga; in which the adventure we are relating took place. Sometime now elapsed; the night was cold, and our hungry friend found his quarters in front of the solitary house not at all to his mind. At length he hammered violently at the door several times, and uttered a series of ejaculations, more indicative of a flexible tongue than of profound piety. He then took a look around the premises, to ascertain, if possible, the reason of this unaccountable delay. He discovered a man stealing silently away in the rear of the house, from the fence and set off in a run, that spoke well for his agility, in the direction of the timber. The front door was opened at this moment, and a negro girl called to him to come in.

On entering he could discover nothing suspicious; a good supper was set before him and he was attentively waited upon. He noticed, however, that the negro waiter was very curt in her replies to his questions, and that when he asked anything about the inmates of the place she manifested an emotion that looked like alarm. He retired to bed, too greatly fatigued to reflect much upon the singularity of this conduct; he slept well, and in the morning was at an early hour eating his breakfast, when he observed a pair of eyes intently gazing at him from a chink in the wall that divided the room in which he sat from an adjoining passage. Determined to know the meaning of the singular behaviour he had observed in the place—for every individual about it, whom he had accosted, answered him with trepidation in the fewest possible number of words, and then hurried away from him as if in fear—he rushed into the passage and catching hold of the man whose eyes had been so busily engaged, he demanded the reason of his singular scrutiny. The man appeared overcome with agitation, and asked—in a voice the interrogator at once recognized as the same he had heard on the previous night—if Mr. Fulkerson intended to stay? No, Mr. Fulkerson would go as soon as he had finished his breakfast and paid his bill, but he insisted upon knowing why so much prying and whispering were going on. "Why, are you not Mr. Fulkerson that owns this house?" asked the man. "No, I never saw the house before" was the reply. In a moment a look of intense satisfaction beamed from the man's face, which had before worn a troubled expression, and without another word he rushed up stairs, three or four steps at a time, and quickly returned, bringing with him a portly looking dame, whose eyes were red, as if with weeping, and who was exclaimed in a tone of joyous surprise as soon as she caught sight of our bewildered friend, who could not for the life of him guess what had bewildered the folks—"It is not John."

An explanation then ensued, from which it appeared that the house in which our friend had spent the night, had formerly been the property of a man of the same name as himself. This man had been absent some years. As nothing had been heard from him during all that time, his better half, the lady who appeared so much pleased that he was not "John" had resolved to take another husband, and the new knot was to be tied that very evening. On the previous evening her intended second husband was paying his last attentions as a lover, when the announcement of the name of "John Fulkerson" from our friend, in a manner spread dismay and consternation where all had been joy and sweet anticipation. The lover stole off the back way, to be beyond the reach of danger; the lady had spent the night in weeping; once she had mourned her husband's absence, now she grieved over his return. The quietness of the unexpected and unwelcome guest had, however, somewhat reassured the distressed couple; the lover had cautiously returned to the house and was making his observations, when our friend so unceremoniously seized him. The tidings were quickly spread, and laughter and mirth soon filled the dwelling that had been doleful with disappointment and sorrow. The traveler was heartily invited to stay and partake of the wedding supper; his business called him away, however, but he has since learned that the marriage took place without any outward interruption. If the real John Fulkerson of Arkansas, should be alive and see this, let him take warning and never approach the home he has deserted, for he is most emphatically and wanted. We assure our readers that the occurrence we have related is strictly true.

What Hollanders think of Bernhave's Holland Bitters!—J. Quintus, editor of the Sheboygan Nieuwsbode, in a letter dated September 6th, 1854, thus remarks:

"You will observe that I have published several certificates lately. These are not mere 'puffs,' but literally true; and should you continue advertising with us, you may expect to secure large orders, from every Holland settlement in the United States."

This is an extract from one of the many letters received from the Holland settlements. Surely when Hollanders recommend the Holland Bitters so warmly, Americans may not hesitate in testing its virtues for themselves.

PROSPECTUS

OF a Weekly Newspaper, the publication of which is to be commenced at Grand Junction, Tennessee, on or about the first day of February, 1859, to be called

"THE QUID-NUNC,"

J. B. PRYOR, Editor. J. B. SYNNOTT, Publisher.

The name of the proposed journal will, perhaps, sound somewhat far fetched, but, to make it, we have examined the world from the beginning of Adam's family down to the present or future. "Quid-Nunc" is compounded of two Latin words, which, when translated, are, "What Now?"—and Whether, in the University edition of his dictionary, gives the word, applicable, as follows: "QUID-NUNC, a person who is curious to know everything." Just so, we intend to make the new paper "curious to know" and prompt in publish, "everything" going on in the world, that may be important to the community in which we live, and to the public at large.

We also intend to make the Quid-Nunc a welcome and useful visitor at the female firesides.

In politics it will be perfectly independent of all parties, with no sympathy on no question affecting the glory of the Republic, the welfare of the South, or the equality of the States before the Constitution.

The Quid-Nunc will join heart and hand in the cause of Internal Improvements, and in the great Agricultural movement now so happily going on in this and the surrounding States.

Price of subscription for one year, $2. No name received upon our books without the cash in advance. The cash system will be adhered to rigidly. Address the editor, at Grand Junction, in all cases.

THE IMMENSE DEMAND

FOR

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES

HAS rendered more extensive accommodations necessary. A NEW AND LARGE SALESROOM has been fitted up at No. 199 Main street, next door to McKinney & Co.'s Furniture Store, connecting with the latter upon the second floor.

The reputation of SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES, is so well established, it is only necessary to close attention upon their merits, especially since it is customary to advertise every kind of Sewing Machine, whether new or old, as equal to, or at least equal to all others. But assertion is not proof, and no sensible person will trust to a public advertisement, while he can avail himself of the opportunity of judging by personal inspection what Machine is best proved to be superior.

It is impossible for the purchaser of a Singer Machine to be deceived, unless, contrary to the rule, he fails to use the privilege of returning it in a given time if it should not prove to be what it was represented.

Were it necessary, we could point to a volume of facts illustrative of the maxim "Success is a sure evidence of merit." It is well known that I. M. Singer and Ward Clark, who constitute the firm of I. M. Singer & Co., have been engaged in business for a considerable fact, that Singer's Machines have always commanded a higher price, and that there is a much larger number of them sold than of any other kind, and that hundreds of these Machines have been in constant daily use for upwards of seven years, being still in good condition.

Singer's new manufactory in New York, is considered a remarkable structure even in that city of marvels; extensive as it is, it is now found that its facilities are barely able to supply the demand, which has more than tripled within the last three years. Agents throughout and warehouses of the stores of Sewing Machines with which the whole country is dotted.

Those who are best for inspection the Sewing Machine, would do well to make a thorough examination before purchasing.
