Non-Intervention and Squatter Sovereignty.

From the Washington Union.]

The article from the South Carolinian in the issue of yesterday, exhibits the position of all national men in the South in respect to the rights of slavery in the Territories. We will not undertake to speak for the Opposition; but of the fact that an overwhelming majority of the Democracy of the South adhere to the principle of Congressional non-intervention, there can be no doubt among candid and well-informed persons.

And why should not this be the position of the Democratic party? It is obvious and undeniable that the unity of the party is possible upon no other condition. Northern Democrats, who neither have except from anti-slavery prejudice, and no matter how fearless in support of their opinions, dare not advocate the doctrine of Federal legislation for the establishment of slavery in the Territories, even though their judgment should approve the policy. Of this we had convincing proof during a recent debate in the Senate, in the prompt and emphatic repudiation of intervention by the men from the North whom we are accustomed to regard as the tried and trusted champions of the Constitution. Not a solitary politician, nor a single newspaper in the North, of any name or party, will tolerate the idea of Congressional intervention for the support of slavery. If the northern Democracy should embrace the doctrine, they would be swept from existence by the wrath of people indignant. They have already gone to the farthest limit of concession to the exigencies of their southern alliance, and although they have only responded to the obligations of the Constitution, they have barely maintained a foothold against the pressure of an adverse public opinion. Shall we exact greater sacrifices of the northern Democracy?

Is it generous to impose the condition of self-annihilation upon allies who have exhibited the most signal fidelity of attachment to our interests? Is it just to demand their active assistance in the propagation of slavery, after securing their support of the Kansas-Nebraska bill by the assurance that the South waived nothing but non-intervention? Is loyalty to repel the friends in the North upon whom we rely in the struggle with Abolitionism, by the demand of a service repugnant to their feelings and incompatible with their existence? We repeat, if the southern Democracy intend to insist on this condition of alliance, they might as well prepare for a final separation from their northern associates. Nay more—if the South is resolved to require the intervention of Congress for the establishment of slavery in the Territories, the dissolution of the Union is inevitable; for the demand will never be conceded, and as an earnest and determined people, we will be bound to resent the repulse, and to provide for ourselves the protection which we claim to be essential to our interests.

The demand, therefore, of Congressional intervention is in effect a proposition for the dissolution of the Democratic party and the overthrow of the Union.

It is objected that the doctrine of non-intervention involves the principle of squatter sovereignty. We do not perceive the logical dependency of the propositions. The following resolution, adopted by the Democracy of Tennessee in their recent convention, announces the true principle, without at all implying the idea of squatter sovereignty:

Resolved, That we are satisfied with the views announced by the Supreme Court of the United States in the celebrated case of "Dred Scott," on the right of slaveholders and the status of slavery in the Territories, and are willing to abide by the principles announced in that decision. Slavery and the rights of slaveholders are protected by the Constitution of the United States, and by an appeal to the action of the judicial tribunals of the Union, until the formation of a constitution by the people of the Territory, and then the State must decide for itself on that as well as other legitimate objects of government.

This is our doctrine. We maintain that the rule of non-intervention restrains Congress from legislation in respect to slavery in the Territories; legislation in respect to slavery in the Territories, but it does not follow from this position that the Territorial Legislature is invested with absolute authority on the subject. Congress and delegate derive their power in possessed; and as we deny to Congress the right to exclude or prohibit slavery in the federal domain, we deny the same power to the Territorial Legislature. To what point the jurisdiction of the Territory extends, is an issue for the decision of the courts. If the Territorial Legislature claim a power incompatible with its derivative and subordinate authority, the slaveholder may protect himself by an appeal to the judicial tribunals whose duty and province it is to define the limits of power.

As exponent by its great champion, squatter sovereignty signifies that every Free man is entitled to the exercise of the political rights in the people of the Territories, independent and exclusive of the paramount authority of Congress. We maintain that the power of a Territorial government is derived from Congress and limited by the necessary conditions of its origin. Is this an heretical opinion? If so, it is a species of heresy which we find inculcated in every authoritative exposition of Democratic doctrine.

The Opposition in the South.

The opposition to the Democratic party and the national Administration appears at this moment to be animated by some hope of success in the ensuing Presidential election. Whatever grounds may exist for this hope, it is evident it can not be fulfilled without such a union of the various elements of the Opposition as seems, at this time, to be entirely out of the question. We mean to say that such a union is necessary if the contest is to be any thing more than strictly sectional. Can any of the Opposition. Of course a thorough union of the Opposition thought the North, a perfect combination of the Fillmore party and the Fremont party of 1856, would be amply powerful to carry a large majority of the electoral vote. That combination would prove a sad, what in fact has long been apparent to all discriminating people, that if the South has any allies in the North, they are to be found only among the Democracy. It is, therefore, extremely illogical, to use no stronger term, for southern men to find encouragement and hope for a Southern Opposition, in the present apparently powerless condition of the Democratic party at the North. It is certainly true, and those persons must have conveniently short memories who forget it, that the defeats of the Democracy at the North have been suffered in consequence of the support given by the Administration, and the great majority of Democratic members of Congress, to the rights of the South in the Territories, and to the two State Rights construction of the Kansas act and the Lecompton Constitution. If the Democracy have lost every northern State but three, it is caused by the defection of those who deserted the South, when the Administration and the masses of the Democratic party stood by her.

We can not, therefore, look, without impatience, on those who hail these indications as the harbinger of an opposition victory which can only result in throwing the Government into the hands of the Black-Republicans, and precipitating a crisis which may involve the dissolution of the Republic. For, we take it, that no Southern man, whatever may be his politics, is prepared to counsel submission to the rule of a hostile sectional majority, guided by an Abolition administration. Logically, therefore, these are Democrats who rejoice at a state of things which can but produce this result. If, on the contrary, the South is to remain in the Union, if her destiny is to be fulfilled and her mission accomplished within the existing confederacy, it is her policy to unite for the defense of her rights and interests. This appears a proposition so plain as to admit of no dispute. Yet all over the South, in Virginia and Kentucky especially, and even in Louisiana, we find symptoms of a more mistaken content than has taken place for several years, and of a more vigorous opposition to the dominant State Rights party, than one year ago anybody would have believed possible. That this opposition can be successful in either of those States we can not for a moment imagine. Now is not the moment for a division in the South. It is indeed, true that a strong and powerful opposition is necessary to preserve the purity and stimulate the energy of a dominant party; but we must remember that the South herself forms that opposition against a vigorous, progressive and vigilant party, which threatens to overwhelm and subjugate, or drive us to the alternative of stern and uncompromising resistance. The spectacle of Southern divisions is encouraging to the growing opposition of the North; and a victory of the opposition anywhere in the South would be an indication that we are about to break our alliance with the only friends upon whom we can count in the North. When we make up our minds to that, we must likewise be prepared to see a Black-Republican elected President and to decide whether we will submit to degradation and subjection, or seize the only remedy left us.—New Orleans Delta.

THE WISDOM OF VIRTUE.

Archbishop Thirlwall, when Dean of Canterbury, about the year 1840, was indeed, (says his biographer,) "upon being informed that the Earl of Shrewsbury was being engaged in a conversation which might prove dangerous to his virtue, as well as his orthodoxy, he wrote to him the following letter, which is a masterpiece for the elegance and politeness as well as the force and pathos of the remonstrance:"

MY LORD—It was a great satisfaction to me to be anyways instrumental in the gaining your lordship to our religion, which I am really persuaded to be the truth. But I was always more concerned that your lordship would continue a virtuous and good man than become a Protestant, being assured that the ignorance and errors of a mistaken understanding are sooner forgiven by God than the faults of the will. I remember that your lordship once told me that you would endeavor to justify the sincerity of your conduct in a conscientious regard to all other parts and actions of your life. I am sure you cannot more effectually confound your own and this by bringing over a person of your profession to have embraced a better religion. I will certainly be one of the last to believe anything of your lordship that is not good; but I always feared I should be one of the first that should hear it. The time I last waited upon your lordship I had heard something that affected me very sensibly; but I hoped it was not true, and I was therefore loth to trouble your lordship about it. But having heard the same from those who, I believe, hope no ill will to your lordship, I cannot think it my duty to acquaint your lordship with it. To speak plainly, I have been told that your lordship is of late fallen into a conversation dangerous both to your reputation and virtue, two of the tenderest and nearest things in the world. I believe your lordship to have a great command and conduct of yourself; but I am very sensible of human frailty, and of the dangerous temptations to which youth is exposed in this dissolute age. Therefore I earnestly beseech your lordship to consider, besides the high preservation of your soul and the hazard of your soul, whenever you engage in a bad course, what a blemish you will bring upon a great and unspotted reputation; whatsoever uneasiness and trouble you will create to yourself from the severe reflection of a guilty conscience; and how great a violence you will offer to your good priority and your great reputation, and to a mind the best made for virtuous and worthy things.

And do not imagine you can stop when you please. Experience shows us the contrary, and that nothing is more vain than for man to think they can set bounds to themselves in anything that is bad. I hope in God no temptation has yet prevailed on your lordship so far as to be guilty of any license sort. If it has, as you love your soul let it not proceed to a habit. The retreat is yet easy and open, but will every day become more difficult and obstructed. God is so merciful that upon your repentance and resolution of amendment, he is not only ready to forgive us what is past, but to assist us by his grace to do better for the future. But I need not inforce these considerations upon a mind so capable of and easy to receive good counsel. I shall only desire your lordship to think sometimes and seriously how great a point of wisdom it is, in all of our actions, to consult the peace of our minds, and to have no quarrel with the constant and inseparable companion of our lives. If others displease us, we may quit their company; but he that is displeased with himself is unavoidably unhappy, because he has no way to get rid of himself.

My Lord, for God's sake, and your own, think of being happy; and resolve by all means to save yourself from this froward generation. Determine rather upon a speedy change in your youth in anything but what is lawful and laudable; and let me have the satisfaction to be accounted your lordship's friend in this, which will be the greatest kindness and most acceptable service to me in the world. I have only to beg of your lordship to believe that I have not done this to satisfy the formality of my profession; but that it proceeds from the truest affection and good will that one can possibly bear to another. I pray God every day for your lordship with the same constancy and fervent as for myself, and do most earnestly beg that this counsel may be acceptible and effectual. I am, etc.

FIRE, FIRE!
ANOTHER
OF OUR FIRE-PROOF
SAFES, Tested!

Stearns & Marvin's Safe Triumphant.

The following letter from the Editors of the Eagle and Enquirer leaves how satisfactorily their books, papers and money were saved from destruction in the great fire of the 18 instant:

MEMPHIS, MARCH 21, 1859.

Messrs. Lownes, Orgill & Co.:

GENTS: Your note of the 7th instant has been received. We thank you for the kind sympathy expressed for our losses, and in reply to your inquiry as to the fate of the Stearns & Marvin Safe, No. 1127, sold to us by you, we have to say that it contained our Books, Papers and Money, and was placed in the middle of the store, where it was exposed to the heat, logs at it for upwards of forty hours, we hardly expected that it would preserve our Books, Papers or Money; upon opening it however, we did find its contents safe and sound. Every paper we put in our books was as legible as on the day we put it in. Not a paper was destroyed or injured, even checks which tumed in this city and the day before given us, and which had been placed in the money drawer, were taken to the banks and paid on presentation without question. We do not hesitate to recommend it as the best safe we know of.

Very truly yours,
JOHN H. ROGERS & CO.
Proprietors of St. Louis Flour Depot.

AND YET ANOTHER.

Messrs. Lownes, Orgill & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 1st inst., asking reply to certain questions touching the fate of my SAFE, No. 681, made by Messrs. Marvin & Stearns, and purchased of some two years ago from you, to hand, and I cheerfully reply, as follows:

The fire you refer to, was the largest that ever occurred in Memphis; there being some fifteen Brown stores burned, and about as many families turned out in the streets—on the morning of the 9th of January last.

My SAFE stood in my office on the second floor of a three story brick building, and it remained until the floor was burned from under it, when it fell into the cellar among the stock of burning molasses, pitch and spirits of turpentine. I had previously taken from the SAFE my books and papers, (using as a drawer, a box Jas. E. Culbert, of Memphis, or A. J. Turner, near Canton, will give any information desired.

IMMENSE SALE OF TOWN LOTS
—ON—HOPEFIELD, ARKANSAS.

THE Trustees for the Memphis and Hopefield Real Estate Association, have purchased the balance of the town site, and have up the business of said company, and will, on the 12th Day of April, 1859,

sell one thousand lots, on the following plan:

HOPEFIELD,

is situated in the Mississippi River, at the great point of the West, situated, as it is, opposite the

CITY OF MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE,

on the western shore of the

GREAT MISSISSIPPI RIVER,

at the junction of the

MEMPHIS AND LITTLE ROCK RAILROAD

the only railroad in operation between St. Louis and New Orleans and Little Rock.

GREAT WORLD

west of the Mississippi river, and the road which will in a few years connect with the

HOPEFIELD

PACIFIC OCEAN,

and the southern termini of the

ST. LOUIS AND IRON MOUNTAIN R. R.,

three hundred miles nearer country in the south, now rapidly being opened and put into special cultivation. The proprietors deem it unnecessary to show in say a word to show the public that
