Daily Appeal.

EXPENDITURES OF THE GOVERNMENT.

From the Democratic Review.

The Opposition, finding the Democratic party invulnerable to every assault upon its principles, resorts to the device of assailing what it terms the extravagant expenditures of the National Administration. We are prepared to expose the falsity of the accusation embraced in this assault, as well as the hypocrisy of the accusers.

But ever since the birth of the present Opposition to the Democracy, it has been within its power to correct the prodigality and extravagance of a Democratic Administration, if any such existed, as they now charge has been and is now existing, at the expense of sapping the very foundation of the Republic.

That time was during the thirty-fourth Congress, when it had a clear majority in the House of Representatives. It is true that the Senate was Democratic; but all the annual measures which generally take shape in the means of stimulating a prodigacy in the Government, originate in the House. The Senate, it may be said, can amend; but still the House would have it in its power to insist upon the rigid exactions of a just economy instituted by it, or else let the bills fail. The Senate would not dare, and if it did, such an act of treachery would not fail to sustain the House. The latter body, in the thirty-fourth Congress, did not scruple to kill the army appropriation bill, merely because the Senate would not sanction a mischievous exaction that an amendment should be engrafted upon it, preventing any portion of the army from being used to enforce an obnoxious law of the laws of Kansas. Surely if an anti-slavery fanaticism could demand the extravagant issue in this instance, how much more could an honest desire for economy defend it in the other? But this argument is unnecessary, for a large number of the Democratic Senators in that Congress were kept busy battling against the extravagances of the Opposition in the House, sustained by nearly all their brethren in the Senate.

But for facts and figures. The following table exhibits the amount of money appropriated by the thirty-fourth Congress, and also that estimated for by the Administration of President Pierce, to be appropriated by this Congress, not only for the expenses of the Government for this fiscal year beginning the 1st of July, '59, and ending the 30th of June, '60, but also to supply deficiencies for the year ending June 30th, '59:

Amount of money appropriated by the thirty-fourth Congress, $113,464,839.16
Amount of money estimated as by the Departments as necessary to have been appropriated by the Thirty-Fourth Congress, as enforced in regular printed estimates, and subsequent estimates sent in by Departments 101,976,001.17

Amount appropriated by Thirty-Fourth Congress, not asked for by the Departments $11,488,777.99

It will thus be seen that an Opposition Congress, instead of restricting itself to the estimates of a Democratic Administration, for extravagance existed, cutting them down, actually appropriated $11,488,777.99 more than that Administration asked should be appropriated.

This excess over the estimates was to have been expended among the several Departments as follows:

Legislative	$2,000,089 25
Executive	6,206 29
State	6,380 60
Treasury	4,859,850 40
Interior	807,907 77
War	1,745,105 54
Navy	553,773 43
Post Office	160,000 43
Private Acts	1,600,248 33
	$11,488,777.99

The excess of $2,000,089 25 in the Legislative is attributable, to near one-half its extent, to the compensation act passed by that Congress. Upon this public expenditure we propose to influence the public. It can draw its own conclusions from the fact. It is believed that some excess was to have taken place in the extent it is and for the purpose to which it is applied.

As to the balance of this excess, in the Legislative Department, over one million of dollars, the Opposition Congress will be left to justify it.

The largest excess voted over estimates, it will be discovered from the above table, was for expenditures under the auspices of the Treasury Department, amounting to $4,859,850.40. Our four millions of this amount was for ocean steamers, post-offices, court-houses, mints, etc., which, it is alleged, at the greatest cost of which there is not money enough collected to pay the expenses of collection.

The amount of $1,745,105.54 not asked for by the Administration of President Pierce, was appropriated by the Opposition thirty-fourth Congress, and expended under the War Department, with a view to the extent of $1,000,000.00 for appropriations for rivers and harbor improvements, passed over the veto of the President.

It is not necessary for us to explain the balance of these included for appropriations. It is for the Opposition to defend them. They may say that the Democratic members of the House are also responsible for them. This we deny, and say, gentlemen, you had the organization; you had the control of the committee of the House. Your committees reported these bills; and, by outcasting the Committee of the Whole in the extravagant clauses of appropriation bills, you placed it out of the power of the Democratic party in the House to have the yeas and nays upon them. Every parliamentarian will understand that when the Committee of the Whole concurs in any portion of a bill, and a standing committee, that, no matter how extravagant, a single section may be, it is beyond the reach of the House itself to have a separate vote on it in order to strike it out. There is not an item of money appropriated during that Congress but what could have been defeated by the Republicans, without cost to the American. By arrangement they were kept as solid phalanx in their seats to meet any exigency which a vote to keep up the slavery agitation might require. If for this miserable purpose they could be so constantly in attendance, it might well be asked, if, for the noble purpose of economizing the expenditures of a government about which they have lately so much clamored, they could not be equally assiduous.

We propose to intend in selecting from the record the votes in the House, to the limited extent that votes were had upon some of the most important of the propositions to expend money. We classify them politically, and submit it for the judgment of the country.

Feb. 18, 1856. Journal, P. 592. On motion to suspend the rules to introduce resolution appropriating money for the relief of the suffering poor of Washington, Georgetown. Yeas—Democrats, 81; Americans, 22; Republicans, 30. Nays—Democrats, 47; Americans, 3; Republicans, 7.

March 19, 1856. Journal, P. 695. On Mr. Dunn's motion to send a Traveling Committee to Kansas. Cost in the expenditure, from $50,000. Yeas—Democrats, 85; Americans, 9; Republicans, 62. Nays—Democrats, 48; Americans, 23; Republicans, 6.

April 14, 1856. Journal, P. 714. On Mr. Tyson's resolution for the purchase of Dr. Kane's work, which would have cost $8[illegible]. Yeas—Democrats, 58; Americans, 21; Republicans, 38. Nays—Democrats, 31; Americans, 5; Republicans, 21.

July 5, 1856. Journal, P. 1176. On appropriation of $45,000 for deepening the channel over the St. Clair Flats, over the veto of the President. Yeas—Democrats, 13; Americans, 2; Republicans, 37. Nays—Democrats, 37; Americans, 2; Republicans, 1.

July 8, 1856. Journal, P. 1178. On appropriation of $300,000 for removing obstructions from the mouth of the Mississippi river, over the veto of the President. Yeas—Democrats, 18; Americans, 31; Republicans, 36. Nays—Democrats, 35; Americans, 2; Republicans, 1.

May 15, 1856. Journal, P. 1025. On Mr. Holloway's motion to print 200,000 instead of 100,000 of Agricultural Report. Additional cost, about $75,000. Yeas—Democrats, 42; Americans, 14; Republicans, 56. Nays—Democrats, 30; Americans, 9; Republicans, 15.

July 7, 1856. Journal, P. 1171. On Mr. A. K. Marshall's resolution to purchase books for members. Cost near $138,000. Yeas—Democrats, 11; Americans, 27; Republicans, 56. Nays—Democrats, 47; Americans, 5; Republicans, 30.

July 23, 1856. Journal P. 1270. On printing 20,000 copies of Report of Kansas Investigating Committee with evidence, and 100,000 without it. Cost, about $40,000. Yeas—Democrats, 1; Americans, 1; Republicans, 78. Nays—Democrats, 42; Americans, 14; Republicans, 2.

August 11, 1856. Journal P. 1421. On the appropriation of $200,000 for the improvement of the Des Moines Rapids, over the veto of the President. Yeas—Democrats, 10; Americans, 10; Republicans, 62. Nays—Democrats, 47; Americans, 2; Republicans, 4.

August 8, 1856. Journal P. 1421. On the resolution paying A. H. Reede per diem and mileage, Yeas—Democrats, 81; Americans, 3; Republicans, 57. Nays—Democrats, 37; Americans, 3; Republicans, 0.

August 18, 1856. Journal P. 1490. On the appropriation of $100,000 for the improvement of the Potapsco river, over the veto of the President. Yeas—Democrats, 10; Americans, 24; Republicans, 93. Nays—Democrats, 4; Americans, 3; Republicans, 1.

August 8, 1856. Journal P. 1421. On the resolution paying A. H. Reede per diem and mileage. Yeas—Democrats, 81; Americans, 3; Republicans, 57. Nays—Democrats, 37; Americans, 3; Republicans, 0.

August 18, 1856. On amending amendment of Senate striking out appropriation for books for members, so as to appropriate $182,765 85 for that purpose. Yeas—Democrats, 14; Americans, 21; Republicans, 66. Nays—Democrats, 45; Americans, 10; Republicans, 37.

February 9, 1857. Journal P. 380. On appropriating $300,000 for the construction of a way on book to the Pacific. Yeas—Democrats, 17; Americans, 21; Republicans, 81. Nays—Democrats, 35; Americans, 0; Republicans, 5.

February 9, 1857. Journal P. 516. On appropriating $70,000 per annum to Atlantic Telegraph until receipts reached 6 per cent., invest then, then $50,000 a year for 20 years. Yeas—Democrats, 9; Americans, 10; Republicans, 62. Nays—Democrats, 42; Americans, 2; Republicans, 21.

February 23, 1857. Journal P. 578. On appropriating $182,765 85 for books for members of House of Representatives. Yeas—Democrats, 11; Americans, 26; Republicans, 58. Nays—Democrats, 54; Americans, 10; Republicans, 27.

February 24, 1857. Journal P. 628. On the New York Free Bill, involving over $2,000,000. Yeas—Democrats, 2; Americans, 29; Republicans, 80. Nays—Democrats, 58; Americans, 15; Republicans, 13.

March 3, 1857. Journal P. 797. On the bill appropriating $325,000 a year for five years for removing by contract, obstructions on the Mississippi river. Yeas—Democrats, 9; Americans, 24; Republicans, 72. Nays—Democrats, 31; Americans, 3; Republicans, 14.

Some few of these measures did not become law owing to the opposition of a large number of Democrats, aided by a small share of the Republicans and Americans, whilst others were defeated by the Democratic Senate.

These propositions for the expenditure of public money, it will be seen, were in every instance voted for by the great mass of the Republican members of the House. We do not expose these votes of some of the Democratic members who, to a limited extent, supported some of these appropriations. Nor do we condemn all these expenditures and proposed expenditures of money. The table is presented merely to show that the Opposition by voting against these schemes, could have defeated all of them, and that, instead of doing so, the bulk of it voted for them. They therefore should cease their heartless cry of economy.

During that Congress a large amount of the public lands was voted to the States for railroad purposes.

It is questionable whether this is the best means of enhancing the value of the remaining lands, although there are those among the Democratic party who think it is. To complete the record of the House during that Congress, we place at the table of the reader the votes on these grants, without indulging any argument on their propriety or impropriety. It is as follows:

May 8, 1856. Journal P. 942. On Mr. Bennett's bill, making grants of 3,450,000 acres of land to Iowa for railroad purposes. Yeas—Democrats, 57; Americans, 17; Republicans 56. Nays—Democrats 26, Americans 18, Republicans 15.

May 14, 1856. Journal P. 998. On the bill granting 1,811,600 acres of public land to Florida and Alabama for railroad purposes. Yeas—Democrats 81, Americans 12, Republicans 18. Nays—Democrats 29, Americans 10, Republicans 32.

May 21, 1856. Journal P. 1013. On the bill granting 1,062,809 acres of the public land to Wisconsin for railroad purposes. Yeas—Democrats 20, Americans 9, Republicans 52. Nays—Democrats 22, Americans 14, Republicans 21.

May 21, 1856. Journal P. 1013. On the bill granting 1,582,918 acres of land to Alabama for railroad purposes. Yeas—Democrats 23, Americans 12, Republicans 52. Nays—Democrats 24, Americans 9, Republicans 30.

May 27, 1856. Journal P. 1066. On the bill granting 1,000,000 acres of public land to Michigan for railroad purposes. Yeas, Democrats 19, Americans 10, Republicans 42. Nays, Democrats 29, Americans 12, Republicans 16.

August 6, 1856. Journal P. 1408. On the bill making a grant of 1,002,560 acres of public land to Alabama for railroad purposes. Yeas—Democrats 18, Americans 11, Republicans 33. Nays—Democrats 26, Americans 11, Republicans 27.

August 9, 1856. Journal P. 1426. On the bill granting 2,595,053 acres of public land to Mississippi for railroad purposes, number of acres unknown. Yeas, Democrats, 31; Americans, 5; Republicans, 50. Nays—Democrats, 28; Americans, 10; Republicans, 22.

The Presidency in 1860.

From the New York Tribune, April 28.

A new President of the United States is to be chosen next year. We say a new one, because one term is all that, in ordinary cases, including the Hon. James Buchanan, have any idea of reelecting that eminent functionary. Mr. Franklin Pierce is a possible candidate; but we think it highly improbable that a few thousand others; James Buchanan is an impossible one. We are to have a new President, and very probably new candidates on all hands.

This paper is pretty well understood to favor the cultivation of such Democrats and Republicans as may be necessary to defeat the Opposition in the coolest before us. We do not deem it necessary again to contradict the rumors from time to time set afloat that we are laboring to nominate and elect A, B, or C. The single end we keep in view is the triumph of our principles and the consequent advancement of our country, and the happiness and honor. The elevation of A or B to the Presidency may seem to us desirable, but the triumph of our cause is infinitely greater importance. We are as far from being wedded to any one, and that one is not their own industrious into the Presidential chair.

In the next Presidential contest, the votes of the American people seem divided as follows:

Democrats	77,000
Republicans	1,341,314
Americans	377,369

From these figures it appears that the Democrats are a minority, and must remain so.

Of course, it is plain that a substantial, practical union of the electors who supported Fremont and Fillmore, would insure a triumph in 1860, even though there should be some scalding of one other side, as there probably would be. We can afford to lose One Hundred Thousand votes of the Opposition vote in 1856, and still carry the next President by a handsome majority.

Now, mark, any considerable obstacle to a substantial union of the Opposition in 1860?

In other words—What do the Republicans insist on as essential that the other branch of the Opposition shall forget or forgive?

Doubtless, there are Republicans whose opinions and feelings with regard to slavery are such that we are responsible for them. This we deny, and say, gentlemen, you had the organization; you had the control of the committee of the House. Your committees reported these bills; and, by outcasting the Committee of the Whole in the extravagant clauses of appropriation bills, you placed it out of the power of the Democratic party in the House to have the yeas and nays upon them. Every parliamentarian will understand that when the Committee of the Whole concurs in any portion of a bill, and a standing committee, that, no matter how extravagant, a single section may be, it is beyond the reach of the House itself to have a separate vote on it in order to strike it out. Agents Wanted,
TO sell a book entitled, "SCENES BEYOND THE GRAVE." The favorable reception this book has met with, induces us to offer it to agents, and the unprecedented activity of many persons of various denominations in disposing of it, leaves us no doubt but it should be placed in every family of the land, the publisher is induced to take this method to put it before the public. The work is a simple narrative of a young woman named Maryette Dexon, Boston, New York, and twenty-five years, who fell into a sleep or trance, in which she remained for six days, her relatives on the point of her friends and her physicians failed to arouse her from this stupefying state, and when at last she awoke to a consciousness of external things, she was in full possession of her mental faculties with an almost supernatural acuteness of perception superadded. She avowed that while her body lay, as it were, in death, her spirit had visited the eternal world, her mouth was filled with praises to God, and with joy and rapture she beheld the unspeakable things which the ear and heard. The tone of the trance is amusing and Christian, and it reveals the spirit in which it was intended to cause full to glorious and encourage the Christian, and to lead the unbelieving to the world beyond the natural existence, for while believing her to be in the range of spiritual thoughts and visions, forgetting the state world we have lived in, and the world to come, revealing their glory and magnificence, never departed from the strictly Christian spirit, in the spirit we seem to arise with saints and angels and become familiar with the glorious and the celestial heavens, and are lost to earth. Maryette, the author of the work, we know that Providence which unfolded the vision, which we read with such delight, and which we have extracted spirit. Agents furnished with the books at
