REACTION OF A EUROPEAN WAR ON OUR COMMERCIAL INTERESTS.

The effects of a European convulsion on the commercial interests of this country are already foreshadowed in the news which reaches us from the other side. No sooner is it made certain that war is unavoidable than there is a heavy decline in foreign stocks and on cotton, while on breadstuffs and provisions there is a corresponding advance. The advices received yesterday by the Anglo Saxon show that the movement which has set in, in both these directions, is likely, in the course of a few weeks, to reach an extreme point. War, in the onset, exercises either a marked depressing or alleviating influence on the securities and commodities affected by it; and it is not until the public mind becomes accustomed to the contemplation of its consequences that anything like steadiness can be again attained. Until this normal condition of it's be reached, of course speculation will be active to profit by the opportunities which these fluctuations will throw in its way. Out of the numerous interests that will, either directly or indirectly feel the influence, there are better for regard to which, at this early stage of the commotion, any positive calculation can be made. We can only see value as to results; but those, on the whole, we think, will not be found to bear unfavorable on our own business prospects.

One of the first effects of the war will undoubtedly be to create such a sensation in commercial circles abroad as to diminish the demand for our cotton to an extent which can only be determined by the circumstances under which hostilities are entered upon and their probable duration. If it is to be a struggle such as Lord Derby and English statesmen generally anticipate, then we may calculate that for a long time to come the agricultural interests of the South will be severely affected. But as there is no evil without its compensating good, the effect of this check will probably be to develope our own cotton manufactures, and to thus eventually render us independent of foreign consumption. To such important results there will also be some distributive influences at work. The necessity that foreign manufacturers will be placed under of realizing their stocks at almost any sacrifice, will for a time flood the market with cheap goods. The large importing houses which have already disposed of their spring and summer purchases will not feel the influence of the competition, but it must hurt the retailers. Its effects, however, will be only temporary as farther French manufactures are concerned, and, as regards German goods, those who choose to do'd on to their stocks will lose only the interest of their money. A blockade of the German ports by France, if the war extends beyond Italy, which will be one of the immediate necessities of a general war, will effect a short time a store to any further importations from that quarter.

Against these inconveniences, such as they are, we have to balance many encouraging and cheering circumstances. If the South is to suffer for a season, the West, which has had its period of ordeal, will benefit by the influences that quarter. Against these inconveniences, such as they are, we have to balance many encouraging and cheering circumstances. If the South is to suffer for a season, the West, which has had its period of ordeal, will benefit by the influences that quarter.

THE NORTH ADAMS TRAGEDY.

Not Developments—Hints of Poison—Abortion by Doctors, etc.

From the Springfield Republican, May 3.]

A coroner's inquest has been instituted in the case of the young woman, Miss Butler, of North Adams, who died last week from a surgical wound to conceal the effect of her seduction by Mr. Littlefield, the father of the village bank. The testimony elicited by it, so far, adds new mysteries and suggests new horrors to the case; and will widen and deepen the interest in it, for the whole sad history.

The jury of inquest consist of Dr. Henry H. Tobin, of Pittsfield, Surveyor; Dr. Hoover, M. Tobin, Jonas Brown, Daniel Lyons, of North Adams; John Holden, Abel Weatherbee and Harvey Arnold, of North Adams. They commenced their examination on Friday last, and without conclusion, they adjourned for one week, to Friday, the 12th inst.

The history of Miss Butler's sickness and death, as shown by the testimony of her parents and the physicians, was this:—On Sunday evening, April 24, Miss Butler, with no her young lady, went to the house of Mr. Littlefield, the senior, and spent the evening, some six, Mr. L., Miss B. and the other young woman each drinking a glass, and Mrs. Littlefield a little that was left in Miss Butler's tumbler. After the girl became sick she was ill sitting sick at her stomach; her mother gave her some Skinner's Liniment, an old family medicine, but she commenced vomiting, purging, and Dr. Hawkes was sent for. He thought her symptoms indicated poison; she complained of severe pain in the stomach and right side; vomiting small, yellow and sparing, exceeding 100 per minute; gave her first morphine, and afterward continued the anodyne treatment, with morphine; she was passed until her death, on the next Sunday morning—one week after being taken sick.

Dr. Hawkes discovered signs of pregnancy during the week, and before Saturday an abortion having been attempted or produced. But not until that day—the day before her death—did he speak to Mrs. Butler of her condition, when she admitted it might be possible; on being asked the time of her failing, she said it must be over a year ago; then, that it was within the six weeks last past; and to the physician that neither of these statements could be correct, she said it was while Mr. Littlefield was in the Legislature, a few months ago. Her parents appeared thunderstruck at the discovery of her pregnancy; they said they did not suspect it till the doctor told them of it on Saturday.

Dr. Sabin, of Williamstown, and Dr. Babbitt, of Adams, confirmed Dr. Hawkes' testimony.

The testimony of the attending physicians is either impefectly reported by the North Adams Transcript, or they kept back that which is essential to an understanding of the case. We cannot discover, from their evidence, whether an abortion had been produced before they were called to the girl; whether one followed, from medicine taken before, while she was under their treatment; or whether they, or any of them, had anything to do with the abortion, for themselves. Not one of them gave an opinion as to the cause of her death. Several physicians, who did not attend the deceased, testified as experts from hearing the other testimony.

Then there is a strange piece of testimony from Alfred P. Butler, brother of the uncle of the deceased. He is speaking of the testimony of the attending physicians—Drs. Hawkes, Sabin and Bishbitt:

"Is the statement given are different from what I understand them; it was said by the physicians that to save the life of the girl it was necessary to procure abortion; they went through the operation, as I understood; my wife said she did not wish to say if the thing was to be done before morning; she went home; we were called in the night about 10 o'clock; Dr. Hawkes told me afterward that they had an examination, and found things as they expected—a child some five or six months old; I may be mistaken about these things, but it is as I understood them; it was Saturday night when the operation came off, as I understand it."

It is apparent that the fetus was removed before the death; but when, by whom, and by what means, are left a dark mystery, as the testimony stands. This Mr. Butler's testimony would indicate that it was done by a surgical operation, by the attending physician, on Saturday night, April 30, and at a period of time, leaving her sickness, then of a week's standing; and that the operation, instead of being of any benefit, was the finishing stroke to the girl's life. The testimony of the medical experts is consistent with this theory; but that of the attending physicians, so far as it suggests any theory, would seem to create the impression that the abortion was perfect before any of them were called, either by something she took on Sunday (April 24,) or with the aid of her mother, that evening, or by the Skinner's liniment given by her mother—which reduces the time between cause and effect to several hours. As Dr. Hawkes was called about midnight—and that they had a week's time attempting to revive her from the effects of that operation. This is at least mystery No. 1.

But there is another—perhaps connected, perhaps did not murder. Mr. Littlefield, the father, who, as a prominent citizen, has for years been the talk of the girls sickness, watched by her Monday night, the mother testifying that she was in the room all the while, and left for throat ale for her. Mr. Barber, a friend of that S. H. Wells, one of the direc ors of the bank, told him, under a solemn pledge of secrecy, that a medical consultation had taken place, and that the Butlers, and one other, had decided that the medicine was poison. Mr. Barber, in his testimony, Mr. Barber and Mr. Wells' remarks as to the effect that the family (the Butlers) were inclined to be by statements in the letter he showed for Mr. Littlefield. Mr. Sanford said that he began to express great indignation, when Mr. Wells stopped, and would not communicate the sensible cause. This testimony was obtained by the jury, in the examination of the coroner. Mr. Sanford refusing to break his word, Mr. Wells, himself being called, refused absolutely to testify, and gave as reason for that his refusal was because he might criminate himself.

The examination was closed at this point. The stomach and intestines of the deceased were removed and given to Prof. Chadbourne, of Williams College, for chemical examination; and the bottle of medicine (Skinner's Liniment) from which the mother administered to the daughter on the night she was taken sick, is also to be analyzed.

Dr. Hawkes, in the course of his testimony, said that Mattie, (the deceased,) on Saturday afternoon said, that Mr. Littlefield had never intentionally wronged her; but on Saturday evening she said, "O, he was a villain! wasn't he?"

The North Adams Transcript gives the following further particulars of Littlefield, the seducer, and his acquaintance with the deceased:

"Among Mr. Littlefield's accomplishments was that of being an excellent singer, and he immediately joined the choir of the Baptist Church in this village, and soon became its leader. He was thus thrown into the society of Miss Martha A. Butler, a beautiful, accomplished and modest girl, then only fifteen years of age, who was also a fine leading singer, and ambitious of musical excellence. He gave her instruction in music, and under this clock was a very frequent visitor at the house of her father (one of our village merchants,) and also received her at his own house. Quite a family intimacy grew up; so much so that Mr. Littlefield was received as a boarder in Mr. Butler's family during several weeks last summer, his wife being at her home down East. He then lived his wiles most are dutously and faithfully (Matti,) Mr. Butler's rule was accomplished by this artful Lothario several months ago; and as the natural fruits of their criminality began to become apparent, it was resolved to hide the shame at all hazards. Whether poison was administered to procure an abortion, or mechanical means instead, the coroner's inquest will decide, and wherever the guilt may belong, their investigations will probably afford a clue to it."
