"I MUST SLEEP NOW."

DYING WORDS OF LORD BYRON.

For the Memphis APPEAL.]

"I must sleep now"—life's torrid day is over,
And I shall feel its angry strife no more;
Not have a part in all that shall be done,
Nor partake "beneath the control of the sun."

"I must sleep now"—no more shall I pursue
The phantoms that my fond stream drew;
Nor cast one thought on the bright wreath of fame,
My cherished task unfinished! no matter.

"I must sleep now"—long, a dreamless sleep,
And yet a sweet sleep, though fearful dreams,
Nor break the solemn silence of the tomb.

"I must sleep now"—beneath the grassy sod,
My body in its narrow cell—
In the dark shades of silence doomed to be,
Perpetual as the feeling even in me.

"I must sleep now"—my energy and wakening,
When from my frame the vital spark hath flown;
But where, O, where will my immortal soul,
In realms of woe or bliss while aeons roll?

"I must sleep now"—but, oh, the dawn will break,
When Christ will bid the sleeping dead arise;
Not to be numbered with the dead I'm sent,
And leave their companions, both great and small.

I shall wake then! what a stupendous thought!
With my spirit—a deep unspeakable thought!
Where, Heaven's Savior, will my portion be?
Where shall I spend a long eternity?

SEXAS PUBNY, TENN., May 19, 1859. JENNIE S.

FUNNYISMS.

INVENTER, BORROWER AND STOLEN.

Cotton is going down, the times are dull, the weather is perfectly delightful, the floods pretty on the bottoms. There is war in Europe, revolutions and super revolutions in Mexico, the canal is not yet dug across the Isthmus, the Pacific railroad is not yet contracted for, Pike's Peak miners are starving, hogs are dying of the cholera, swill milk is still sold in New York, the locusts are "going it green," and the rust is taking the wheat; this is, therefore, just the time to be jolly, to breathe deep, laugh hearty, and keep up the circulation by shaking the sides. We have been cribbing, hooking, and brain-dragging some materials for aiding the public in this praiseworthy labor of "trying to be jolly." May the mantle of Mark Tapley fall upon them!

We will start with something knowing, and no sarcasm can hide, no nose deny what our eye knows.

"How is it," said one little mine to another, "that John's never afraid, and I am?" "Because he's got a Roman nose, and feels safe; don't you remember we read the other day that it has always been said that a Roman knows—no danger?"

We will next try one of Prentice's natural productions: A woman was severely beaten in Cleveland last week by her illegitimate son. The boy, although the natural son of his father, is a very unnatural one to his mother.

Does anybody know that the extent of family jars is more than from one to two feet? Here is the proof. "There are two kinds of family jarts—one you put your sweet meats, and in the other you put your feet." So says a newspaper joker, and he proves our position when the best is to be in jars are the jar is over one foot; when the other jar is on the dinner table and the legs under it, the jar is over two feet.

The answer is a clear demonstration. The reason of the following assertion is almost invisible: A dandy lately appeared in Missouri, with legs so attenuated, that the authorities had him arrested because he had no visible means of support.

We do not meddle with State secrets in this part of the paper, but as the following is quite a church secret we hide it: Singular how pious sew clothes make people. For a whole month after the Misses Flirt got new mantillas, they were at church three times a day.

Here is a specimen of the running wit that is let off on crinolines: It is not only little boys who like to play with large new-fashioned Full-grown men have frequently seen chasing them through the streets.

The reversed occupants of the pulpit occasionally try a joke. Here is an instance: Mr. Spurgeon's visit to America is reported to be all a sinner-ship movement.

Now for a touch at the lawyers: the jokes perhaps not new, but it is good: A lawyer's face is a portrait taken in the lawsuit attitude, standing with his hands in his pockets. "It would resemble him more closely," said an acquaintance, "if he had his hands in somebody else' pocket."

We will try another sample from Prentice: Mrs. Martha Woodward, of Ohio, made last year three hundred and fifty gallons of wine from an acre of ground. That speaks well for the productiveness of "Martha's Vineyard."

That is good; we will add one of Hook's sparklers as a concluding one: "Do you know why Bull built this bridge?" said a lad to Hook. "No," replied Hook; "but if you go over you will be killed?"

Now let Mrs. Partington, that embodiment of simplicity, have a word: "When a woman," says Mrs. Partington," has married a husband, and the ceremony is over, and she has responsibilities to bear, she will never want to enter the maritime state again."

John Bull shell follow the lady.—What have you to say, Johnny? "Lick! me, here's a beagle." Ma—(reproachfully)—"A beagle! Johnny, you blasphemer! Fy, it's a bowl." Keeper of the menagerie, (respectfully)—"Ahem purling, mum, its an auk!"

Now for one of Beecher's wangs: mind you this is strange, and yet true: Beecher says there are many persons who think Sunday is a sponge with which to wipe out the sins of the week.

Now for a little love and divinity, we were going to say simply, but the lady in question, we have just read the article: How is it proved that Adam was orthodox in his sentiments? Because his belief unobtrusively was Eve-angelical.

As we have got to the doctrinal, we will take a clerical glance at the law and the gospel. It will be thrown away on the pig-headed, but may be of benefit to the reader. Adam Clark, who had a strong aversion to pork, was called upon to say grace at a dinner, where the principal dish was a roast pig. He s prayed—"Lord, we have sinned against Thee in the eat, Mea under the Gospel what thou didst curse under the Law—bless this pig."

Here's a puzzle for our young friends: If brass is good to make a candle-stick, what will make it let loose?

We are having phrenological examinations at this time in this city, but can Fowler equal a celebrated phrenologist in London, who felt the contents of a barrel by examining its head?

Oh, crinoline! what hast thou to answer for! Look at this: Why is a fashionable lady like a rugal ceremony? Because she makes a great bustle about a little waist.

The following is an atrocious calumny, as everybody but married men well know: What is the difference between a good soldier and a fashionable lady? One faces the powder and the other powders the face.

We conclude with a little Arkansas witticism: The New York Tribune says that women in that city only receives five cents a piece for making boy's pants. The Helena, Arkansas, Courier replies: That isn't nothing; the ladies in Arkansas make caps, boys and all, and don't charge a cent.

THE LOCUSTS.

The Cicada—improperly called Locust—contains a number of species. The red-eyed Cicada (Cicada Septendecim,) usually called in the United States the "Seven Year Locust," makes its appearance in some part of the country every year; but in 1829, 1833 and 1842 swarms were found in Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia. Their appearance disappeared "seventeen years" thirty. That there is a great difference in their numbers in different years, is true; and the same theory obtains in regard to other insects, particularly the Rose bug. The same thing happens to the vegetable world. One year we are favored with an immense number of apples, peaches, grapes, cherries, and next year probably but few are produced. Excessive numbers of other insects which feed upon the Cicada, changes of temperature and unfavorable weather, are the probable causes of intense and decrease of different years.

Another very general and popular notion is round in the history, and that it is the same insect mentioned in the scriptures as one of the plagues of Egypt. This also is an error, as can be easily shown. The locust is a native of the warm climates. It is found in all the temperate climates and warm countries of the globe. In the south and east of Europe they are constantly in plague, and continually an object of admiration.

Two varieties—one with red bordered wings, the other with green bordered wings—are the most common in the United States. All have a flexible proboscis, short antenne, four membranous wings, and six feet. The females have a long, sword-shaped ovipositor, and only the males possess the singing organ, which is an extended moveable membrane on the underside of the abdomen, by the rapid vibration of which they produce their peculiarly loud sound. The females are without this apparatus, and are silent. The latter deposit their eggs in the under branches of trees, by slitting the bark with their sharp ovipositor. The eggs are white, flat, oval, and about one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter. If the weather is favorable, the eggs are hatched in about six weeks. The young ones then leave the tree, in the condition of larvæ, each being provided with a small, horny case, and at first like a flea. They retreat under ground, where, according to the observations of Portebosq, they feed on roots for a short time; after which they come out, climb upon the fence or a tree, burst their transparent case, and assume their perfect form as four winged insects. Their lives, after this transformation, seldom exceed four or five weeks, during which time the deposition of eggs and propagation of species is carried on.

Our locusts cannot be classed among injurious insects; or, having no mouth, like some of the other varieties, they cannot devour vegetables and fruit. The dew taken in the leaves, sucked in through the proboscis, constitutes their sole nourishment through the last few brief weeks of their existence.

United Synod of the New School Presbyterian Church South.

It has been announced, says the Richmond (Va.) Dispatch, that this body assembled in Lynchburg, Va., on Thursday last, 17th inst. There are represented in it, the Synod of Virginia with three presbyteries; the Synod of Tennessee with four presbyteries; and the Synod of Mississippi with five presbyteries, including those of Texas and North Alabama. Rev. J. J. Robinson, President of Maysville College, Tennessee, was chosen moderator, and Rev. R. Hendy, of Portsmouth, Va., temporary clerk.

Huntsville was unanimously chosen as the place, and the third Thursday in May, 1860, eleven o'clock a. m., as the time for the next meeting of the Synod.

In the New School General Assembly North, in session at Wilmington, Delaware, on the 21st instant, the Board reported adversely to the prayer of the sending southern Synod, asking a partition of the funds.

The Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Theological Seminary made a report accompanied by numerous official documents—referred.

The Treasurer of the Assembly made his annual report—also referred.

The moderator announced the committee on Synodical Records, composed of two members from each Synod. He also announced the resignation of S. Mercer, a Trustee of the General Assembly.

The Chairman of the committee on Church Extension made the fourth annual report. It shows that out of two thousand two hundred and sixty-seven churches in communion with the General Assembly, five hundred and fifty-two have no houses of worship, one hundred and eighty-eight have houses insufficient for present wants, one hundred and ninety-one are in debt, seventy-seven have had aid from abroad in building their churches, and three hundred and seventy-three cannot build without aid from the church at large. The report shows that the contributors for the church extension have benevolently increased.

The committee of conference has reported that the time has now come to secure a final adjustment of difficulties or separate from the Congregationalists.

Antiquities in Illinois.

Wm. McAdams, jr., who has devoted much time to an examination of the tumuli and caverns in Illinois, communicates to the Prairie State an account of exploring the cavern in Madison county, Jersey county, Near Piasa; in that county, he examined some figures, apparently made by the hand of man, on the face of a rock in a cavern on a cleft under an overhanging bluff. These figures were known among the people of the neighborhood as "pictures." Mr. McAdams, on an attentive examination of them, arrived at the conclusion that they are hieroglyphics, and record events in the history of an ancient people. They are painted on the face of a perpendicular rock, in a horizontal line running east and west, and are about fifty feet from the bottom of the cliff, being accessible from the above by a narrow ledge of rock, which leads down to them. The original number cannot be ascertained, as portions of them have been carried down on fragments of the cliff that have fallen off. They represent men, plants and animals. On the top of the bluff, directly over these strange pictures, is an ancient mound, thirty feet in circumference at the base, and covered with flat stones. On opening it, there was found, two feet below the surface, in a strong clay, a skeleton, a skeleton lying extended on its back, the bones of which were in an excellent state of preservation. The skull, which was perfect in all its parts, was brought away by Mr. McAdams. Drawings of the place and the hieroglyphics were made by Mr. McAdams, who intends to lay the whole subject before the St. Louis Academy of Science.

Bonaparte—Bourbon—Orleans.

The positions which these three houses now occupy may be thus stated: Louis Napoleon, the reigning head of the Bonaparte family, is the leader of the allied armies of France and Sardinia, and is in the field against Austria. Count de Chambord, the head of the Bourbon branch, has resided in Austria for the last twenty years, but now retires to Holland, refusing to remain under the flag of an alliance with his country, France. The young Duke de Chartres, the head of the Orleanists, joined the Sardinian army as soon as war was declared, and proposed to take part in the approaching conflict. But his uncles, the Orleans princes, being opposed to this course of the young Duke, have recalled him to London. The London Daily News says that he was pursuing his studies in a Sardinian military school when the war broke out, and nothing was more natural than that the youth under twenty years of age, should have participated in the enthusiasm of his countrymen. The News thus continues:

"It probably never occurred to him that the French Emperor, who is now virtually the Commander-in-Chief of the Sardinian army, would object, for political reasons, to his a participation in the house of Orleans gaining military distinction before the eyes of French regiments. It is not known that the Emperor has actually made any such objections, but the incongruity of the situation which might have occurred is patent. Moreover, although an exiled prince might claim popularity by risking his life in fighting side by side with the French army, it may very well be that the Orleans princes do not think it wise, for the sake of popularity, to permit their kinsman to adopt the responsibility of the war, and gratuitously to exhibit their house as (implicit) to the dynasty of Austria. The sentiment of the Duc de Chartres from Paris Paris is therefore what was to have been expected."

DALY'S
AROMATIC VALLEY WHISKY!
For Medicinal Use.

WE now have undertaken to introduce in the world's estimation, which heretofore is proprietors in claiming for it

A SUPERLATIVE CURIVALER.

Produced, as it is, from the best of grain in the manufacture, and extracted from the choicest grains, which is the best in the world, and is the best in the world. The Manufacturer, and containing no particle of distillery product, and is the purest and most perfect, for purity and intoxicating properties, which the Proprietor, in the interest of the public, and the preservation of health, shall ever be offered, or in any manner allowed to impair the correctness of the character of the Valley Whiskey.

DISTINGUISHED CHEMISTS

whose certificates we publish herewith.

We have been induced to offer it for medicinal purposes, to government, the

EXTENSIVE USE IN MANY MEDICINAL PROPERTIES

which this article is known to possess; and this effect, on his part, has been induced by a resolution of the Medical Faculty, and the testimony of the public, in the many advertising experiments, and the numerous letters of Quackery, which have been published, but which, on the part, of which we have in the constant energy of unsolicited testimonials to the merits of the article, emanating from

FROM PHYSICIANS OF THE HIGHEST REPUTATION, and testimonials which speak with such emphatic and unquestionable approval of the unsolicited publication of the

AROMATIC VALLEY WHISKY

AS A

MEDICINAL AGENT

in all cases, as a medicinal agent, it has become requisite in order to publish, repair or assist, the functions and energies of the human system, and the Proprietor, in the interest of which he has spoken, to make known to the world, in the most public manner possible, the extraordinary and unsolicited testimonials of Lovers of Pure Whiskey, and of the distinguished persons who have sent them to the Proprietor in the public newspapers.

It is now a fact, that the diseases which it is, comprise all such as are incident to or to any other cause which disorganizes or impairs the correct functions of the human system; inducing the necessity of a resort to the use of a medicinal agent, the Revenue from this source.

TROPICAL LATITUDES, TO A CHANGE OF CLIMATE

In addition then to the AROMATIC VALLEY WHISKY ACTS AS A RESTORATIVE counting the natural organs, to a stimulant which, both in the quantity and quality, is the best of all things, which is the most effective in reorganizing, and in all such that is necessary to the vital organs, to manifest its effects in physical health.

It is to this extent that the proprietor has changed its use, and has offered it to the public, as a medicinal, Hygienic properties and virtues which cannot be overrated, for over-valued.

MEDICAL PROFESSION

is most urgently recommended. Already has it found its way into the hands of the Medical Faculty, in all parts of the country, and wherever it has been once used, it forthwith becomes a regular.

I have analized a sample of "Daly's Aromatic Valley Whiskey" and find it to be a preparation of fine flavor, and without any deleterious adulterations.
