Daily Appeal.

Contraband of War.

The term contraband is from the Italian contrabando, contrary to proclamation, and is applied to all such goods as are not allowed to be exported or imported, on the ground of theories regarding national policy. Contraband of war is applied by belligerent powers to the furnishing of arms, means for the furtherance of hostilities or other assistance to powers with which they are at war, whether by their own subjects, or the people of neutral States. The near prospect of a European war has given rise to much discussion as to the list of articles which this term may be supposed to include, but there is no rule on the subject which is of universal application. Vattel, in his Law of Nations, defines the term to include "commodities particularly useful in war, such as arms, ammunition, timber for ship building, every kind of naval stores, horses, and even provisions in certain junctures, when we have hopes of reducing the enemy by famine."

In the past, powerful nations, able to enforce their own views in this respect, have taken the largest liberty in arranging the list of prohibited articles to suit their own convenience, so that there is scarcely an article of value now included in the schedules of commerce, which has not at some time or other been declared contraband. The most simple products of the soil, which were shipped in the regular course of trade, have been seized upon the coast of Europe by one or another of the belligerents, and either confiscated or taken at a nominal value, as likely to afford aid and comfort to the enemy. Many of the civilized nations now have commercial treaties or conventions limiting the application of this power, and nearly all of them exclude articles of food from the list of contraband, except in cases of an actual blockade of the enemy's port.

The United States have suffered during the former European struggles by the arbitrary exercise of this right of prohibition, made prevention in all her earlier treaties with the principal maritime countries for the proper exercise of this power. Many persons have supposed that these treaties are still in force, and that with both France and England the understanding is so definite, that a list of the articles to be prohibited can readily be obtained. We have reason to believe that this is an entire mistake, and we know of no obligation which would bind either of these powers in case of a general war, as to the articles to be declared contraband, in that somewhat uncertain code, known as the "Law of Nations."

The treaty of 1778 with France provided, that under the name of contraband should be comprehended arms, great guns, bombs with the fuses, cannon ball, gunpowder, a great variety of other offensive and defensive weapons specially enumerated, horses with their furniture, "and all other warlike instruments whatsoever." All other articles of descriptions of produce and manufactured articles, including naval stores, "and all other things properly either for building or repairing ships, and all other goods whatever, which have not been worked into the form of any instrument or thing prepared for war by land or sea," were especially exempted and could not be declared contraband. The treaty of 30th of September, 1800, modified this in one or two particulars, but did not materially add to the list of contraband. These stipulations expired however by their own limitation, and as far as we can discover, have never been renewed; so that our intercourse with France was entirely unguarded on this subject by any commercial agreement.

The treaty of 1774 with Great Britain made a very different enumeration, for it enumerated as contraband, not only implements and munitions of war, but also timber for ship-building, tar or rosin, copper in sheets, sails, hemp and cordage, "and generally whatever may serve directly to the equipment of vessels, unwrought iron and fir planks only excepted." These were also "declared to be just objects of confiscation whenever they are attempted to be carried to an enemy." This part of the treaty expired by limitation in 1802. Indeed the whole treaty was suspended by the war of 1812, but as the first ten articles were to be perpetuated, they were considered as revived by the peace. The other articles of the treaty of 1794, including the seventeenth and eighteenth, the substance of which we have given above, had previously expired by the limitation under which they were adopted.

In regard to the articles now to be prohibited, it is quite evident that in the absence of treaty stipulations a change will be made from the list formerly excluded by general consent. The object being to prohibit the delivery to the enemy of such articles as it is calculated to afford him direct assistance in carrying on the war, any great change in the method of warfare must involve a like variation in the material to be prohibited.

An integration has been given that in case England becomes involved, her Majesty's government will not allow cotton, naval stores, coal to the ports of her enemies' country, as steamers are now indispensable to naval success, and fuel for steam will therefore be contraband. Such a view will doubtless be enforced in the Admiralty Courts of England, which would have jurisdiction of the question in dispute, and it is hardly probable that the government of this country would interfere with the force of such decisions to that extent. It may be considered as settled, therefore, that all kinds of arms, ammunition, warships and naval stores, and materials for the construction and equipment of vessels, whether in the shape of ships or timber, or in any other kind of way" would apply by general consent. Not so, however, with regard to provisions. As we have the barbarous ages, each civilized nation has agreed with the other upon not including food among the articles which may be prohibited by belligerents, and it is now generally understood that provisions which are in their natural state, or are prepared to meet the wants of consumers who are at peace, cannot lawfully be declared contraband of war, unless only be kept from an enemy's port by an actual blockade. We are quite sure that the Government of the United States will be prepared to maintain this view of the case, and will not permit any nation to exclude our vessels from carrying flour, pork, and other provisions to any open port which our flag may lawfully visit.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Telegrams and Speculation.

The Philadelphia Press has the following:

We have frequently had occasion to call attention to false market reports of European events, which have been circulated by a person who calls himself the agent of the New York Associated Press. It is a well established fact that this same person has for the last ten years been speculating with the money intended for the press, and has succeeded in hoarding up the snug sum of $300,000. His transactions with French Little are still fresh in the minds of many of our merchants who were victimized at that time. That was but the precursor of a series of frauds practiced upon unsuspecting members of business. The New York press at least had their eyes opened to the fact, and insisted on their honest agent giving up his private business and attending to the legitimate business of the Associated Press. This he promised should be done. But being so skilled in finance as he was smart in protecting his ill-gotten gains, he succeeded in sending a cypher message to Jacob Little, he soon overcome the difficulty which the New York press had placed in his way. He found a ready tool to do his bidding, and installed him in a room adjoining his own, cutting a hole in the wall to facilitate business.

Through this hole was handed the market reports of steamers to the young gentleman in whose name all the private business is now done for the Agent of the New York Associated Press. The private messages of European markets are sent off to Southern or Western speculators who are "in the ring" before the news is handed to the press to be made public.

The New York papers have usually been very silent in regard to this speculating on their news, though it has come under their respective notice. The Tribune and Express, however, of late, have shown their disapprobation of the course of their agent, and repudiate all responsibility where it belongs—not on the New York Associated Press—but on the Agent of the New York Associated Press. The Herald, too, at last, has come out and mildly rebukes its speculating news agent. We find in the editorial columns of that paper yesterday morning the following:

"The commercial advices from our Liverpool agent, by the Vanderbilt, show that there was no important omission in the dispatch of the City of Baltimore's news from Cape Race, viz: that flour had declined 6d. per quintal."

This is only one instance of the hundreds of false market reports which are sent out by the Agent of the New York Associated Press, and we are glad that the principal paper in that Association has had the courage to call attention to it.

"The Steamer Great Eastern.

The work upon this wonderful vessel is progressing rapidly, and it is believed that she will be ready for launching by June or August. Should her experimental trips prove successful, she will be sent to the United States—probably to Portland. Her destination, however, may depend upon the condition of affairs in Europe. Should England take part in the war, she may be required as a transport; and for this purpose her services would be highly valuable. It is estimated that she could carry 10,000 men, with coals and provisions for three months. Her speed would place her beyond the reach of danger from an enemy's fleet. It is estimated that she will steam at least twenty miles an hour, whereas the swiftest ship of the line now afloat cannot perform more than eleven miles. This superiority of speed would render her formidable sew ship of war, because she could either run or fight at pleasure.

Should England and France be maintaining her neutrality, it is highly probable that France may wish to employ the steamer to transport troops to and against Austria; and as the water of the Mediterranean is deep in nearly all its harbors, she would experience no difficulty in navigating it.

Such a vessel with 10,000 men on board, might, under certain circumstances, win or lose an empire. If this war continues we have no doubt her services as a transport, will be desired by some of the belligerents, but we think it doubtful whether the English government would be willing to allow her owners to charter her for the purpose of war to any power. We hope England will keep the peace, and that we may soon have the pleasure of welcoming the Great Eastern to our shores.—Boston Traveller.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—At the Cape of Good Hope a large and respectable Moslem population is springing up. Some years ago it will be recollected that ship loads of young females were sent to the Cape under the auspices of goodly ladies here, and consigned to the supervision of the "Bishop's Daughters." These females became known as the "Bishop's ladies," and his charitable chaplains tried in vain to find employment for them. Some of what they would have done had they never left England—turned to old and evil ways, others, strangely enough, married Moslem laborers and farmers, mounted a nasty Fez cap, and sent their husbands and children to mosque as neat as new pins and as happy as the very sour face of Islam allows of the gaiest, open whom he no more chose than he deserves. "Is what have I done? Have I wronged my lover me and my children. How would it have been had I run my chance and married well—any European who asked me in Cape Town? And so many of the "Bishop's ladies" become entirely contented mothers of Selims and Fatimas, forget their catechism, and sing in mom with their lords, "There is no God but God"—Sherman.

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Announcement of the Proprietor for the Season of 1859.

THE OHIO & WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS

ARE situated in Delaware county, 18 miles north from Columbus, the capital of Ohio, on the Scioto river, 16 miles from Delaware, 6 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Columbus, Piqua & Indiana Railroad, 8 miles from Prospect Valley or Sulphur Station, on the Columbus, Piqua & Indiana Railroad. These springs are noted for the strong use of visitors

ON THE 1st DAY OF JUNE.

The improvements of 1859 have been large, rendering the capacity of the house equal to 300 in the single rooms. Among the improvements may be mentioned a large and elegant hotel, new cottages, new dining-rooms, buildings for amusement and recreation, extensive bath-rooms, a new bowling-alley, etc., etc.

Upon the estate there are five springs, all within the area, four of which—the White Sulphur, the Chalybeate, the Magnesian and the Saline Chalybeate—are decidedly medicinal, while the fifth is remarkable for the purity of its water.

THE WHITE SULPHUR

is a beautiful transparent fountain, situated near the rocky bank of the Scioto river. At the depth of 180 feet below the level of the Scioto, flows the remarkable stream of sulphur water which supplies the spring. This stream was discovered some thirty years ago, by a gentleman who was boring for salt. The water, when reached, at once sose to the surface, and has ever since continued to rise, during all seasons, without change or abatement, either in quality or volume.

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES.

For years these springs have been highly esteemed for their medicinal properties. During the past season their reputation in this respect has been amply confirmed. They are administered by a physician, sufficiently to be entirely safe in the hands of invalids, and the results thus evidenced plan the cures were numerous and gratifying.

THE WHITE SULPHUR WATER is peculiarly serviceable in those disorders of the Liver and Stomach, which are often after gentlemen who have been too closely confined to business, and persons of sedentary habits.

THE CHALYBEATE SPRINGS

are permanent tonics. Their effects upon invalids and debilitated constitutions have been not transient but lasting, giving to the blood a new vitality, and to the general health and appetite.

THE MAGNESIAN WATER

is a gentle aperient.

Invalids may rely upon every facility being furnished them which can contribute to their health and comfort.

As a delightful resort during the summer months, the Ohio White Sulphur Springs have no rival in the West, and but few in the United States. The location is peculiarly healthy; the Scioto here is a rapid, rocky stream, with the "Old Limestone," a romantic bluff of feet in height, on the south which the river coils its way, in every direction, or near the springs. The grounds in the vicinity are beautifully sodulated, and interspersed with numerous groves, which carry off all the superfluous water, and which, with the cottages, give a stranger here the most delightful so peculiarly to healthy these circumstances, and the proprietor is acquainted with the wants of visitors, about 1000 feet above the level of the ocean, makes the locality a very desirable one for invalids as a health resort.

The spring property consists of 130 acres of land, one hundred of which is covered by one of the most beautiful groves in Ohio. The woodland is handsomely laid off with walks and drives, one of the latter being two miles in extent.

BATHS.

Nothing has been left unattended to, in bringing into our competition with that at naturally warm and hot springs. The water is heated in a boiler, and the baths are kept at the temperature of 98 degrees, which is found to be the most being raised high enough to give patients its effects, or to be the system applied to the surface of the bather, without the loss of the saline ingredients.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

A telegraph office, connected with all parts of the country, has been established at the springs. To be in communion with distant points, will be a great convenience to gentlemen, who can hear from and direct their business at Chicago.

All the accompanying necessary to health, pleasure and amusement, visitors may expect to find at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs. The proprietor is determined to make it, in every particular, a first class watering place, furnished with the liberal patronage extended last year, no effort will be wanting to merit it continuance.

A hearse, and attendant, will be always ready to attend to the orders.

THIRTY DOLLARS REWARD.

RANAWAY from the subscriber, near Oakland, Miss., on the night of March 20th, my negro boy DAVE. Said boy is of dark complexion, about 5 feet 11 inches high, weight 175 pounds, and 22 years old, stands and walks very quick. He has been accustomed to hiring most the last week in March. He may probably attempt to pass for a free man. A reward will be paid for his apprehension and confinement in some jail, so that I can get him. [may18-dlm*] S. D. POPE.
