A NOBLE LETTER ON A NOBLE THEME.

From the Boston Post, July 4.]

The inhabitants of the town of Chelmsford, in this State, have set out a project to erect, upon the green in the village of Old Chelmsford, a monument to the memory of these citizens of the town who lost their lives in the war of 1775. There were eight of the inhabitants of Chelmsford who died under arms as soldiers of the Revolution. The movement to erect a simple and well constructed granite memorial to these men is purely a town movement, aided only by those in another locality who are the children or grandchildren of those men of Chelmsford who thus participated in the opening conflict of the revolutionary struggle. Gen. Benjamin Pierce, father of ex-President Pierce, was a native of Chelmsford. On the 19th of April, 1775, being less than so many years of age, the senior Pierce was a striking at the plow when tidings reached the village of the bloodshed at Lexington and Concord. He at once loosened the ox chain, left the plow in the furrow, took his uncle's gun and equipments, set forth for the scene of action, enlisted as a private soldier, and did not return to his native place for seven years, at the expiration of which time he commanded a company. He settled in Hillsborough, N. H. and received the highest honor of the State. The fact that Benjamin Pierce was a native of Chelmsford made it proper for the gentlemen having the proposed plan of a monument in charge to communicate in relation to it with his son now in Europe. The letter address to him suggested, among other things, that it was hoped circumstances would permit the inauguration of the monument to take place on the present anniversary day of our liberties, but it has been found necessary to postpone the celebration till September next.

The letter, however, of General Pierce, in reply to the committee, meets with such natural simplicity the demands of the contemplated occasion, and is, without any straining for effect, so appropriate to Independence Day, that we have asked and received permission to spread it this morning before our readers. It requires no preface from us. In vigor of thought and glow of expression it is characteristic of its distinguished author. It sounds over our this glorious morning like an anthem. More that is worthy to be remembered and pondered, and particularly in the present state of the public mind North and South, has rarely been expressed in the same space. It addresses itself, not only to descendants of revolutionary officers, but speaks to every trumpet-tongued to patriotic hearts throughout the land. Why, in the future celebrations of the Fourth of July, cannot there everywhere be read to the people, as part of the exercises of the day, not only the Declaration of Independence, but the Farewell Address of the Father of his Country, so feelingly and appropriately alluded to by ex-President Pierce?

LANGDON SWALBACH.

Duchy of Nassau, June 2, 1859.

MY DEAR DR. SWALBACH: I thank you cordially for your kind letter of the 17th of April, which having reached Rome after my departure, was returned to Paris, and only came to me yesterday. This early will show you that I have not been before the day designated for the inauguration of the monument, to be erected upon the green in the village of Old Chelmsford, but, however this may be, I am sure that I shall be with the warmest and best sympathies. When that morning arrives, find me where it may, I shall say, well done sons and grandsons, daughters and granddaughters of the Revolutionary men of Old Chelmsford. You mark the Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in a manner best befitting, when you retire it as the day on which to inaugurate a monument to the memory of your fathers, who defended that Declaration with their lives.

I have sometimes trembled for the future of my country, as I have seen the gallant, self-sacrificing men who achieved her independence, step one by one from the theatre of their trials and triumphs, until not one probably remains who participated in the opening conflict. While they moved among us, the bond of national brotherhood was strong, and recognized as limits but those of the Union. They knew and felt what the institutions of our republic, united country one, and what was required to preserve them. They cherished an habitual reverence for the Constitution, and yielded a cheerful obedience to all its requirements, and to all laws enacted in every instance faithful execution. They wisely deferred to the august tribunal established to decide all constitutional questions which might arise involving constitutional rights and obligations. It will always be said of them that they were strong-minded, stout-hearted, practical Union-loving men. From the North and the South they had fought shoulder to shoulder in the common cause, and the comprehensive and unselfish patriotism which nerved their arms for the struggle, warmed their hearts, and inspired their counsels during the deliberations which resulted, under the providence of God, in the establishment of the admirable system which has contributed to their descendants a degree of individual freedom and happiness, and of national prosperity and advancement, without a parallel in the history of our race. How universally they cherished and lived every sentiment of the Farewell Address of the Father of his Country! They found it, it forcibly expressed, the views and principles which had guided them through life, and which they hoped might never cease to command the regard and confidence of their children. As that words will never again be addressed to our ears, it is well that we shall no more to honor their memory—to quicken our appreciation of their lessons of wisdom, and to keep alive our admiration of their services and virtues.

The connection in which you allude to my venerated father, revives in my mind many pleasing recollections, which had been dormant for years. His attachment to Chelmsford, and Chelmsford people, always struck me as peculiarly strong, especially so as he had never resided there for any length of time after he was a boy. He was born at Hillsborough, and after the announcement of the battle of Lexington, he joined the army. I observe among the names appended to the prospectus for the monument several which were my playmates when I was a boy, and infer that the signers are some or grandsons of the friends of his youth.

I hope hereafter to know more of them personally.

As late as 1824, there were, on one occasion, assembled around my father's table some eight or nine officers and soldiers who served in the army of the Revolution. Some of them were residents of the town, and fourteen of them were in the battle of Bunker Hill. Several of the number I am quite certain were natives of Middlesex county. They have all passed away, but I trust that Hillsborough may be represented by their descendants on an occasion which they cannot fail to regard with much interest.

Enclose herewith a check for fifty dollars, which you will please to place in the hands of the committee as a contribution for the monument.

Your friend and servant,
FRANKLIN PIERCE.

CHAS. H. DALTON, Esq., Boston, Mass.

Present Condition of the Great Eastern Steamship.

The London News describes the condition of the Great Eastern at the recent public exhibition of that vessel at Deptford, as follows:

"When at last safely landed on the lofty deck, one sees that her hands have recently been at work in producing order out of chaos, and carrying out the innumerable details which are necessary to make the Great Eastern a perfect ship. The dock which on our previous visit presented but a rude succession of rude iron girders, over which people stumbled at every step, is now completely planked from end to end, and a glance along its immense expanse gives the first and best idea of the enormous size of the ship. The different skylights are all also in their places, and give a look of finish where all was before incomplete and rough. Funnels, too, there have been set up, and two funnels, which also go far to "furnish" the deck, and the complete bulwarks all round take away the sense of dizziness and insecurity which we felt when formerly in approach the side of the ship. One can now look over the side and judge of the vast height of the vessel out of the water, make some rough guess at what it will and may, thing one that floats upon the Thames, and then look at the bottom of the country, both Keel and Keel, now clad in the brightest green of coppering. The lower decks have been planked, and great progress has been made in partitioning them off into their permanent compartments; the grand saloon is in a very forward state, and would be a noble apartment—many like a drawing-room in a princely palace—so much than the cabin of a ship—yet it has, besides the two immense funnels which cut up the center, and inconveniently interrupt the longitudinal sweep of the apartment.

On each side elegant cabins are being fitted up, and the alone may be said of the other saloons, of which there are, we believe, six in the ship. One of the cabins has been finished, in order that the visitor may judge of what the rest are intended to be, and a very pleasant notion it gives of what a voyage across the Atlantic will be in such a noble ship as the Great Eastern. The cabin referred to, which is called a family cabin, containing bedroom, sitting-room, and dressing room, all of them lofty and well ventilated, and possessing a much greater number of conveniences than could be found in a similar suit on shore. The other cabins are also in an exceedingly forward state, and as an immense number of men are at work upon them, there is every prospect of the ship being ready for the trial trip on the appointed fourth of August. There is free communication now all through the ship, there being elegant staircases with carved oak balustrades leading to the various saloons and cabins, and iron ladders for the scientific or inventive lovers of curious, who cannot believe they have "done" the ship until they have explored the gloomy mysteries of the vast engine room.

Here those who have read Vathek will be forcibly reminded of the Hall of Eblis, and those who have not will wonder at the ponderous beams, and shafts, and cylinders, will be struck with the bright polish of the steel work and think of the time when all this vast mass of mechanism shall be in motion, plowing up the ocean with a giant's strength, and carrying hither and thither as a child the ship at the end of a feather, at the rate of twenty miles per hour. Let us hope that she may go on prosperously to completion, and thus justify the scientific belief being acted upon which she has been constructed. If she should realize the hopes of her projectors and the designs of her architects, she will fill a brighter page in England's history than any of her most famous victories by land or water, for she will inaugurate a revolution in ocean transit, which will bring the farthest ends of the earth together, and make traveling on the ocean as safe and little fatiguing as it now is on the best ordered of our great railroads. We are happy to learn that some of the recent visitors was Mr. Brunel, whose notions ion to health will be pleasant news to the public.

☞ At the late session of the Wisconsin Conference, the Rev. J. W. Wood was charged with scriptural adultery in divorcing his wife on the ground of wilful desertion, instead of adultery, and in marrying another woman. Sympathy ran very high for the elder, but he was expelled from the Methodist Episcopal Church, 70 voting for expulsion, and none against.

DISGRACEFUL PROCEEDINGS IN A CHURCH. The quarrel between the rival preachers of St. George's-in-the-East was renewed on Sunday afternoon. Although it was known that the Rev. Hugh Allen would not attend to deliver the afternoon lecture, (he having complied with the request of the Bishop of London to abstain from preaching until a legal determination had been come to on the Rector's right to interfere,) yet a large number of persons thronged the church. At four the Rev. Bryan King, preceded by a choir of eight or ten young men, entered the church in procession. As soon as the people got sight of them a storm of hisses and groans commenced, which continued till the procession had arrived at the reading desk, when it was discovered that the minister's and chorister's place in the choir was occupied by the people. The Rev. Bryan King then retired within the communion rails, the choristers remaining outside, and then commenced a chant, which had the effect of—amid cries of "No Puseyism!" "No Popery!"—raising an increased amount of hissing and groaning, which completely drowned the chanting. After an interval of about ten minutes, the Rector with his choir retired from the church, followed by some of the police, amid renewed groans, hisses and cries of "Down with Puseyism!" "We want Hugh Allen!" At the seven o'clock service there was no chanting, but the plow in the furrow, took his uncle's gun and equipments, set forth for the scene of action, enlisted as a private soldier, and did not return to his native place for seven years, at the expiration of which time he commanded a company. He settled in Hillsborough, N. H. and received the highest honor of the State. The fact that Benjamin Pierce was a native of Chelmsford made it proper for the gentlemen having the proposed plan of a monument in charge to communicate in relation to it with his son now in Europe. The letter address to him suggested, among other things, that it was hoped circumstances would permit the inauguration of the monument to take place on the present anniversary day of our liberties, but it has been found necessary to postpone the celebration till September next.

Testimonials.

The public attention is invited to the following testimonials, from those who have witnessed the operations of the Jack Screw Cotton Press.

FINE BLUFF, April 26th, 1859.

Hon. J. W. Bocage—DEAR SIR: I have one of your Jack Screw Cotton Presses at work, and it performs beautifully. It presses more than double the amount of cotton that I have been in the habit of packing in other presses.

In my opinion it should recommend it to every planter, and is so simple that I would prefer it to one of other. It occupies but little room in the hold, is more expeditious and powerful than any other Press, and I believe as soon as it becomes known there will be no other press used.

I recommend every planter to get one. Any ordinary press hand can set up one.

The undersigned, having noticed the operations of Bocage's Jack Screw Cotton Press, take pleasure in testifying to the entire correctness of the above statements.

LOOKING-GLASS STORE, ETC.

FREEMAN & CO.,

(W. A. R. FREEMAN, Nashville, Tenn.)

HAVE opened a house, 259 Main street, (Overton's old stand,) where they will keep on hand a large assortment Gilt Mouldings, Fine and Medium Mirrors, Oval, plain and common Looking-Glass Plates, Oil Colors, Putty, Colza, Portrait and Picture Frames, Inside Venitian Blinds, etc., etc., and keep for sale Artists' Materials of all kinds, Engravings, Window Shades, Looking-Glass Plates, Fancy Glass, etc. Our Gilt Works are building (formerly occupied by Messrs. Overton & Jones) for rent, transportation, and are enabled to furnish our work in Gilt, Oil and Walnut, on as favorable terms as any house in business will, we trust, enable us to give satisfaction to every respect. We solicit and hope to merit the patronage of our friends.

N. B. Old Frames re-gilded and Venitian Blinds repaired and trimmed.

Hams.

20 TIERCES Strawberry and Prince's extra Palmetto Hams, which we warrant equal, if not superior, to any ham in the city, now just from the smoke house of Dwinelle's. Try them. We refer, by permission, to Mr. R. T. Tyler, of the firm of Hicks & Jordan, who has tried them, and knows what they are.

Dissolution.

THIS co-partnership heretofore existing under the firm of LOWNES, ORGILL & CO. expires this day by its own limitation. The undersigned are each authorized to use the name of the firm in liquidation.

J. HENRY A. LOWNES, MEMPHIS.
EDMUND ORGILL,
WILLIAM ORGILL, New York.

Memphis, June 30, 1859.

Co-Partnership.

THE undersigned have purchased the interest of Mr. Lownes, in the late firm of Lownes, Orgill & Co., and will continue the co-partnership under the firm of ORGILL BROTHERS & CO., and will continue the Hardware business in all its branches, at the well known stand of their predecessors, Nos. 13 and 15 Front Row.

EDMUND ORGILL, Memphis,
WILLIAM ORGILL, New York.

Memphis, July 1, 1859.

CARD.

REFERRING to the above, from which will be seen I have withdrawn from the hardware business, I feel it due to the numerous friends and customers of the several houses with which my connection for time to time has been connected, to return them my thanks for their liberal patronage and confidence.

And I further take pleasure in commending to your favorable consideration the new firm of ORGILL BROTHERS & CO., whose facilities and enterprise will enable them to render them entirely worthy of your most liberal patronage.

J. HENRY A. LOWNES.

Memphis, July 1, 1859.

NOTICE.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Lownes, Orgill & Co., are hereby notified that the affairs of that house will be wound up by the undersigned, who will attend with respect at the old stand, corner of Monroe street and Front Row. Those owed by that firm are requested to call and make immediate and satisfactory arrangement for their claims.
