THE CROPS.

Our information of the state of crops around us is not so extensive this week as usual, as the visitors in the city from the surrounding country have been but few. We saw a letter yesterday from a gentleman in North Alabama; it stated that he was well qualified to speak upon the subject; he had been traveling over two or three counties, and the appearance of cotton was not favorable, and that of corn still less so, owing to drought. In some of the adjoining parts of Mississippi there is much want of rain in places; the same is true of Tennessee immediately north and east of us. The rains at the beginning of last week, and before that, were partial; where they fell they have done much good; in other places and on the ridges, both cotton and corn, especially the latter, are suffering from drouth. As a general thing cotton is represented to be in fine condition, small but doing well; corn is in a less favorable state, and unless there is more rain it will return a poor crop to the planter. Our country exchanges appear to have our idea of giving accounts of the crops directly from the press of various parts of the south, as we observe that they frequently quote in whole or in part our selections, but they do not so regularly keep up in their own columns a report of things in their own neighborhood as we should like to see them to do.

TENNESSEE, Nashville Gazette, July 14:—The corn crop here in this and the adjoining counties are suffering greatly at present from want of rain, and many of our farmers entertain the idea that unless we have the necessary rain in ten days, they will not average a barrel to the acre.——Grand Junction Quisivar, July 16: The weather during the past week has been excessively hot, bright and day, diversified with several refreshing and most seasonable rains. As may be supposed, both cotton and corn are growing off finely. We do not hear of a sign complaint of any kind, in any of the adjacent counties, either in North Mississippi or West Tennessee.——Somerville Times, July 16: During the past week, this immediate section of country, has been refreshed with several pleasant showers of rain.——Cleveland Banner, July 15: We learn from our farmers that since they have commenced threshing their wheat, that it does not turn out well—falling short at least one third. It appears upon a close examination that the heads are not well filled out, and that accounts for the deficiency in the crop. The weather is now warm and dry in this section, and the growing crops need rain badly.

Mississippi.——Panola Star, July 13: We regret to see so many planters who visit this town wearing such long faces. The continued drouth is ruining their crops, and unless we have rain in a few days it will be too late to do any good. Corn is suffering the most; while the cotton is drooping to a great measure. The prospect is neither flattering nor encouraging.——Brandon Herald, July 13: From all parts of our own and the adjoining counties, as far as we can learn, there is a fair prospect for a large crop this year, especially of cotton. Early corn was slightly injured by the drouth in May, but the recent rains have brought it out wonderfully, and without a further blast, it will yield an average crop. Late corn is fine, and cotton was never better.

ARKANSAS.——Brownsville Echo, July 13: Last Saturday week, we had quite a refreshing shower. They visited us not a moment too soon, for crops were beginning to need rain very much. Forward corn will do well without any more rain, and one or two good showers in a week or so from now, will give us as good crops as has ever been known in this part of the country.——Little Rock Gazette, July 9: A gentleman of our acquaintance, who has been on a business tour through the counties of Perry, Montgomery, and a portion of Hot Spring, informs us that the breadth of land in cultivation in those counties greatly exceeds that of any previous year, and that the growing crops of corn and cotton, are certainly the finest that have ever been seen in that section. He states also, that the crops of wheat which have been harvested, have proven a fine and sound article, and that the millers would commence wagoning flour to this place in a short time.——Camden Herald, July 9: Never in the history of Arkansas has the prospect of the crops been more flattering than now. From all portions of the State we receive the most glowing accounts. A good crop of wheat and other small grains has already been gathered; that there will be an abundant yield of corn is a fixed fact—and unless we should have an exceeding drouth, we shall have as much, or more than has ever been picked.——Fort Smith Times, July 7: A correspondent writing from Scott county says we continue to have good rains, which is very agreeable to us who till the soil, and I we should be thus favored a few weeks longer, we will have more corn and potatoes than we can use. We can supply your county with all she may need in that line.——Helena Southron, July 7: It is gratifying to hear such cheering reports from every section of the country. We hear that the cotton and corn crops of Monroe county were never more promising. If the season will continue for three more weeks the yield this fall will be unmistakably good peace and plenty will fill the hearts and barns of everybody.——Magnolia Clarion, July 9: In our peregrinations over the county, during the last week, we took particular notice of the crops, and we must say, with one or two exceptions, that we found them excellent. Cotton, the great king of kings, will not be materially affected this fall with a short crop.——Monticello Sage: The crops of this county, and so far as we learn, of the adjoining counties, are generally conceded to be better than they have been for a corresponding period for several years past. There was a drouth of some five weeks duration in Ashley, which damaged corn to a considerable extent, and to a less degree affected cotton; but shortest rains coming in the very nick of time, have filled the fields again with glorious promises of plenty. In our county we can safely say, and we have suffered a single day; although rain a week earlier would have been quite acceptable. At present we are having showers to almost daily occasion, perhaps in excess for cotton, but corn is fairly rioting under their reviving influence, and if the present prophecy is fulfilled, Drew county will raise enough to shame the most populous for two years at least.——Ouachita Herald: Our exchanges come to us rejoicing over the favorable prospect for good crops. Wheat has all ready been garnered, and the yield is superior to anything before known. Corn, if the season continue favorable, will prove to be more plentiful than ever before in the history of our inhabitant, while cotton prospects are remarkably good.

LOUISIANA.——Atakapas Reporter, July 9th: The refreshing rains of the last month have brought rejoicings from every quarter of the Attakapas at the improved condition of the crops. These rains have imported a freshness and vigor to the growth of the crops, and inspire the hopes and demand the gratitude of the planters. From every quarter we hear expressions of satisfaction at the general thriving condition of the crops. The corn was, in many places, beginning to suffer from the drouth, but the rains was unimpaired, though not so far advanced as is usual at this time of year. The long, dry weather gave our planters a good opportunity to prepare the fields for the rain, and when the well come visitor made its appearance, the crops were as clear and free from grass as a parlor floor; consequently many of our planters had already "laid by," and probably all will do so by the 20th of the month.

The crop of corn will, we understand, be large and of good quality, and yield well to the planter during the year. The crop of sugar does not present the same flattering promise, but we may say that it may reach, certainly not exceed, a average one. But the cane is subject to so many contingencies of weather and conditions in its cultivation and final yield, that it is altogether a matter of speculation to estimate the probable crop, and the best estimates made of the private yield are vague and uncertain, and can be but a very imperfect approximation to the reality. The Carrollton Patriot, July 13: We are now in the midst of quite a severe drouth in this region of country; we have had no rain for so long that the ground has become parched and dry; crops are suffering very much, and unless relief comes soon in the shape of good soaking rain they must be very materially affected.

ALABAMA.——The Huntsville Mercurio July 14, says: The distressing drouth still continues. Slight showers have fallen in places, but no copious rains have yet fallen. The corn crop is in great peril, and if rain does fall in a day or so more it will be not very short.

TEXAS.——Indianola Courier July 9: Since the late rains the papers from every part of Western Texas have brought most encouraging accounts of the crops. The yield will be above last year everywhere, except of corn in some of the upper counties.

EFFECTS.——Long continued drouth is damaging the grain crops of Southern Russia. Southern Russia is a great competitor of the United States in the British market; and in proof of the extent of the exports from Russian Black Sea ports amount to millions of bushels, nineteenths of which are wheat. It was the stoppage of this supply by the Crimean war that caused flour to advance at once to twelve dollars per barrel in this country.

Alabama; a plantation on the shore, 400 acres in cultivation and on hand, the remainder of the section plantation in that part of Alabama. In reference to this land mentioned plantation, call on J. W. Hopkins, Memphis, Alabama, or to the undersigned.

Having the foregoing list, as well as many other tracts, we can offer them at the general thriving prices of most of our affiliation, and as it is about as easy to represent a good tract of land, as a bad one, we offer our services to the public generally as agents to buy or sell, or lease, if required, any and all property intrusted to our care, either in the city or country. We could give a satisfactory number of references, but deem references of little importance, as anybody can give names enough. We foster our patrons should call and see us, and then inquire after our mode of business.
