Local Matters.

Tuesday Morning, August 23, 1859.

Arrivals and Departures of Trains.

MEMPHIS AND CHARLESTON.—Trains arrive at 8:50 A. M. and 8:55 P. M. Depart at 1:45 A. M. and 2:00 P. M.

MEMPHIS AND OHIO.—Trains arrive at 7:30 A. M. and 4:00 P. M. Depart at 8:30 A. M. and 4:00 P. M.

MISSISSIPPI AND TENNESSEE.—Trains arrive at 10:30 A. M. Depart at 2:00 P. M.

☞ We are indebted to Major Manning, for papers in advance of the mails.

RETAILING WITHOUT LICENSE.—Mary Armstrong was fined ten dollars by the Recorder yesterday for retailing liquor without license.

WIFE-WHIPPER.—A fine of $25 was assessed against Edward Sweeny by the Recorder yesterday. The charge against Sweeny was that of whipping his wife.

THE CHAIN-GANG.—There are more than twenty persons attached to the chain-gang at present, and no less than twelve additions were made by the Recorder yesterday.

FUGITIVES ARRESTED.—Two fugitive slaves were arrested and placed in jail in this city yesterday—one belonging to Mrs. B. Mitchell, of Tippah county, Miss, and the other to David Laudure, of Marshall county, Miss.

TAKEN UPON A REQUISITION.—Jas. Wright, alias Tooey Wright, left this city Sunday evening in charge of Officer Bloom, of Cincinnati, upon a requisition from the Governor of Ohio. Wright is charged with the murder of Woodward, in Cincinnati, some years ago.

☞ Messrs. Ben. O'Haire and W. S. Tucker have been detailed by Sheriff Smith as a special police, to preserve the peace on Thursday, the 25th inst. There seems to be a suspicion that the occasion will be unusually disorderly, as the Opposition have appointed that day for a jollification.

STABBING AFFRAY IN ARKANSAS.—A difficulty occurred a few weeks ago in Dallas county, Arkansas, between two citizens named Bass and Hicks, during which Hicks was stabbed, receiving a wound which caused his death a short time afterward.

GUN BELTING.—Mr. W. F. Lewis, at the corner of Main and Monroe streets, has the agency for the sale of the celebrated gun belting, which sets he sells on the lowest cash terms.

☞ We owe our neighbor of the Avalanche an apology, inasmuch as all our paragraphs of local news on Sunday did not come up to his standard of unexceptionable literature. It is a source of gratification, however, that he deemed the majority of our items worthy of reproduction in his columns.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A negro man, whose identity was unknown, fell from the Bluff, a distance of fifty or sixty feet, last evening, and, strange to say, escaped without material injury.

JUMPED FROM A WINDOW.—While laboring under a fit of delirium, caused by fever, Mr. T. C. Gorham leaped from a window in the second story of his boarding-house, on Washington street, last evening, and was seriously, though not fatally injured.

STABBING AFFRAY.—John Lowder was stabbed in an affray, on Mississippi row, Sunday afternoon, receiving such serious injuries that his life is endangered. The perpetrator of the crime is unknown.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that M. E. Cochran, the well known lumber merchant of this city, met with an accident at Trenton on Sunday last. The horses attached to a carriage in which he and his family were riding, took fright and ran away with the vehicle. By the accident Mr. Cochran's little son's arm was broken, and others of the family were badly bruised. The collar-bone of an aged nurse was also broken.

THE FIRST BALE FROM ARKANSAS.—The first bale of new cotton from Arkansas was received yesterday by Messrs. W. Howard & Co. It was grown on the plantation of Maj. D. D. Berry, in Walnut Bend, under the supervision of his overseer, Mr. J. J. Hodges. It was sold on arrival at 14 cents per pound. The transaction speaks well for the quality of the cotton in the Bend and for the enterprise of the Messrs. Howard as cotton factors.

SALE OF RACE HORSES.—A friend has shown us a private letter from a gentleman in Nashville, by which we learn that Messrs Guild & Blythe have sold Hiawatha to Thomas G. Sanders, Esq., of Nashville, formerly a well-known turfman, but for some years past engaged in other pursuits. Mr. S. has also purchased Mr. Eli Odom's Mary Wiley. The price paid for the two was $7,000, but how divided we did not learn. Both the animals included in this purchase are the get of imported Albion and have been ranked among the best of the many good ones that have by their exploits, during the past year, rendered famous the name of their sire. Mr. Sanders, we learn, will visit Memphis with his stable the coming fall.

IMMENSE TRAVEL THROUGH MEMPHIS.—As an evidence of the immense travel of which Memphis is now reaping the benefit, we may mention that the number of arrivals at the Gayoso during a period of fifteen days—from the 1st to the 15th of August—was seventeen hundred and twenty-seven! On the 24 day of August, there were of lady arrivals alone at the same Hotel, seventy-four. At the same time, the other two principal Hotels were, we take it, doing a fine business. This state of affairs plainly indicate that our rapidly growing city is becoming one of the greatest thoroughfares in all the Union. It may be proper here to remark that the Gayoso is still kept by its worthy proprietor to the most splendid and approved style, where the weary traveler or the fashionable visitor can find every comfort and accommodation.

DEATH OF IMPORTED ALBION.—We regret to learn by a letter from Gallatin, that the celebrated race horse imported Albion, died suddenly on Thursday morning last, the 18th inst., at the residence of his owner, Col. Gov. Elliott, of Sumner county. His disease was inflammation of the bowels. His groom buried him in full dress, beneath the shade of a giant oak which stands near his stable, in the center of a green and flowery meadow. Peaceful be his rest! Albion has been, all things considered, one of the most successful breeders in the American stud. The performances of his get during the past winter and spring were such as to place them in the very front rank of race horses. No horse, we believe, ever turned out so many winners from so few approved mares. We may say this now without prejudice to owners of other horses. His colts combined great speed with remarkable beauty and symmetry of form, and many eminent turfmen and breeders regarded him as the very best cross upon hard-bottomed mares. His death is a severe loss to his owner, who recently refused $10,000 for him.

Grand Jubilee

The Opposition advertise a Grand Jubilee to come off in this city on the 30th day of the present month. They don't tell what they are going to rejoice at. We suppose it is because, having lost all the branches of the State Government, and been defeated in a contest on the State ticket by more than eight thousand, matters are no worse with them.

"You may be right," said a fellow who had been disputing with a scholar; "thank God, I know very little about such things." "What! You thank God for your ignorance, do you?" "I do." "What then?" "Only that you have much to be thankful for."

On the supposition that our opponents are going to celebrate their defeat, we admit that they have a great case to celebrate.

Perhaps, however, and this is probable, that the Opposition regard their defeat as the poor fellow we have heard of did his wife's death. "You have got a cold," said a humane gentleman to a poor fellow almost splitting himself coughing. "Have I?" Well, I am very glad to hear it." "Why so?" "Why, sir, the fact is, I'm so dreadful poor that it is a comfort to know I have got anything."

That must be the idea of the getters-up of the jubilee in question. They have got a magnificent defeat; but the "great American party" cannot possibly get anything else, and as it must have a jubilee, there is nothing else for them to celebrate.

We advise one thing, as proper: By all means have Netherland and Henry here. They were the authors of the appointment which saved the "Opposition" from extinction, and should be the honored guests at the "jubilee" which would be more appropriately styled "the funeral" of Opposition.—Nashville Union.

THE MEMPHIS, LOUISVILLE AND CLARKSVILLE RAILROAD.—Col. Wm. A. Quarles is pushing on the work upon this road with characteristic energy. The Chronicle says:

The tracklaying on the Railroad (Harrison & Breed) is at our present writing, between eight and nine miles from town, and pushing forward as fast as they are able. The difficulty of having to send not only the iron, but the cross-ties, all from one end of the road, retards the progress of the road slow. The masonry on the Cumberland river bridge is progressing finely, and will probably be finished by the 1st of January. The superstructure cannot of course be put up till next summer, when the Trestle work of nearly half mile in length adjoining it will also be finished. The contractors (on the line beyond the 20 miles already graded) are, we believe, all at work, and the engineering corps, formerly located here, and now tramping the hills of "Old Stewart." Two locomotives are already doing service on the road, and the passenger cars are expected shortly. What has become of the projected barbecue at the Trenton road for the purpose of procuring stock for the turnpike? Surely it cannot be because the railroad is not finished there and beyond

NASHVILLE NEWSPAPERS FIFTY YEARS AGO.

From the Nashville Union.]

We have come into possession of what we esteem a precious treasure, a copy of The Clarion and Tennessee Gazette, printed at Nashville, Tenn., by Thomas A. Bradford, and dated August 10, 1813. It is designated as No. 297—Vol. V—, from which we infer that the paper was founded between four and five years antecedent to that date, say at the opening of 1808. Nashville itself could not be very old at that time. For this unique antiquity we are indebted to the kindness of a venerable lady who at the time we are writing of was well employed stitching butterflies on the Cedar knob where now stands our majestic Capitol, or may be (for we are not critical in chronology where ladies are concerned) she was aspiring to the more hazardous enterprise of catching beaux there—however this may be, she is now the mother and grandmother of some of the choicest citizens of modern Nashville. Long may she live respected as she will always be by those who know the sterling material which went to make the maids and matrons, as well as the woodland heroes of the pioneer generation in central Tennessee.

Evidently the matters in which the Tennessean of that day felt the most interest, were the movements of certain Creek Indians upon the Mobile and Tombigbee: the first column being occupied by a letter from Gen. Gaines to his Excellency, William Blount (Governor of Tennessee) urgently calling for reinforcements, as said Indians were arming themselves in Pensacola for a general attack upon the settlements south of the river mentioned, among which our infant Nashville was of course threatened.

The trouble was that we were at war with England and that the Pensacola at which these Indians were arming was a Spanish town, in those days apparently under the influence of England, for accompanying letters from Don Vicente, Governor of Fort Stoddard, relate that Little Warrior, an Indian just put to death in an attack upon the house of James Connell, had on his person "a letter from a British general in Canada to the [Spanish] Governor of Pensacola to furnish the Indians with arms and ammunition." Gen. Gaines does not doubt that the Tennessee reinforcements will be sent, nor upon the whole do we, the editors of the Nashville Clarion, we think it will be better to deal with the Anglo-Spanish Indians on the Mobile and Tombigbee than to wait till they come in quest of our scalps to the banks of the Cumberland. Yes, we had better send our Andrew Jackson, a fast young lawyer among us, with our Tennessee volunteers to try their rifles on the Creeks there.

We, of the Nashville Union and American, happen to know that Andrew Jackson, as aforesaid, did bring his action of ejectment upon said Spanish Governor of Pensacola nuisance in a manner quite satisfactory to the Nashvillians that day than to the Dons and grandees who were tampering with our Creeks in Pensacola.

Another letter accompanying this Gaines correspondence is from Mesahlatabe, our agent among the Choctaws, who, it appears, are likely to side with us in the fighting that is evidently to take place.

Stirring times those in Tennessee—editors do not need State elections and European wars in such days to eke out their columns. 2,000 hostile Indians under British or Spanish direction are a good deal more interesting to us than all the armies and all Napoleon guns in Italy, and instead of considering who is to have settling of the State Banking system we have to consider who is to have command of our volunteers against the Creeks—scalps may depend upon our selecting with judgment—perhaps, Andrew Jackson is the right man.

Nearly half of the first page is taken up with advertisements of estrays from Bedford, Rutherford and Lincoln counties, the owners of which think they are as likely to be heard of in the shanties about Nashville as any where else.

Then we have advertisements of Peter Bers and Henry Hogan, who have set up a tannery in the town of Pulaski, Giles county; of dry goods at auction, by E. S. Hall; of Merino rams for sale or hire by George Poyzer. So that the Nashville county was not behind hand as regards blooded stock—fourteen fortes aute Agamemnon. Men raised good sheep in Tennessee before the times of M. R. Cockrill.

But we had almost forgotten to write about war; all America was listening for tidings of the marches and battles of Bonaparte in Germany, even as we were for those of his nephew in Italy a few weeks ago; with the one difference, that whereas our intelligence from Italy arrived in about three weeks, we have the first news of the battle of Lutzen in August, the battle having been fought on May 2d. So the steamships and telegraphs have exactly reduced months to weeks.

In another part of the paper we have a spicy editorial about this battle, in which it is anticipated that John Bull would moderate his pretensions in consequence of the whipping which his ally received at the hands of Napoleon Bonaparte. Alas, for editorial provisions; before the ink of those lines could be induced to carry their heads low enough to utter so many things had to be done, the Emperors of France and Russian had to become friends again and enemies again, the victorious Napoleon had to be conquered, first by the armies of Russia, and afterward by the Grenadiers of Waterloo, and then those pestilent British had to come over here holding their heads higher than ever, flushed with victories in Spain and Belgium, and then had to be finally reduced to their proper dimensions by no European Emperor or warrior, but by that same fast young lawyer whose our predecessors of 1813 were sending out to fight the Creeks on the Tombigbee.

In the year 1900 we can imagine our successors in the editorial office, chuckling with a compassionate smile some of our own sage predictions of the results of Solferino and Villafranca. Thus does every age in its superior wisdom laugh over the comparative simplicity of the days of old.

We find so much food for reflection in this dingy looking little sheet (twenty-two inches by twenty) that we must leave our readers to other budget from it in our next.

A Sketch by De Quincey.

The "Opium Eater," in one of his inimitable chapters, speaks of the reason why death, other conditions remaining the same, is more profoundly affecting in summer than in other parts of the year—as follows: "The sense it is liable to any modification at all from accidents of scenery or season; the reason lying, as we have seen, in the antagonist principle and the tropical redundancy of life in summer, and the frozen sterilities of the grave. In a digression of surpassing pathos and solemn beauty, Mr. De Quincey then shows how instinctively, in early childhood, his own feelings and images of death were entangled with those of summer, as connected with Palestine and Jerusalem, about which he read with his three sisters in the nursery, from a pictured Bible, and learned to associate the cloudless sunlights of Syria, and the roses of the Jordan Valley, with the cross and death of the Lord of life. And then he returns to describe his visit to the room in which his dead sister lay. Let the reader read and assent:

Turning round, I sought my sister's face. But the bed had been moved, and the back was now turned to myself. Nothing met my eyes but one large window, wide open, through which the sun of midsummer at midday was showering down torrents of splendor. The weather was fine, the sky was cloudless, the blue depths seemed the expressed types of infinity; and it was not possible for eye to behold, or for heart to conceive, any symbols more pathetic of life and the glory of life.

From the gorgeous sunlight I turned round to the corpse. There lay the sweet childish figure; there the angel face.....I shall never, I shall never, forget it; awe, and fear, fell upon me; and whilst I stood a solemn wind began to blow—the saddest I ever heard. It was a wind that might have swept the fields of immortality, or of mortality, or of both. Many times since, upon summer days, when the sun is about the hottest, I have remarked the same wind arising, and uttering the same hollow, solemn, Memnonian, but saintly swell; it is in this world the one great audible symbol of eternal rest. Such, I say, was the wind that prepared to hear the same sound in the same circumstances—namely, when standing between an open window and a dead body on a summer day.

Instantly, when my ear caught this vast Aeolian intonation, when my eyes filled with the golden lights of July, the pomps of the heavens above, or the glory of the flowers below, and turning when it settled upon the front which overspread my sister's face, instantly a trance fell upon me. A vault seemed to open in the zenith of the far blue sky, a shaft which ran upforever. I, in spirit rose as if on billows that also ran up and the shaft forever; and the billows seemed to pursue the throne of God; but that also ran before us and fled away continually. The flight and the pursuit seemed to go on forever and ever. Front gathering front, mane Saxear wing of death seemed to repel me; some mighty relation between God and death dimly struggled to evolve itself from the dreadful antagonism between these two agencies; and even yet continued to exercise the torment, in dreams, the deciphering oracle within me. I slept—for how long I cannot say; slowly I recovered my self-possession; and when I woke, found myself standing, as before, close to my sister's bed.

A Baltimorean in Trouble—Tried and Sentenced to be Ducked in the Sea.

There has been a good deal of excitement at Rye Beach during the past few days, growing out of a report that a Baltimore gentleman, who was one of a party of swimmers at the Beach, had attempted to duck two young ladies. The "outrage soon became widespread," and on Friday night, the gentleman, "who has "hitherto borne a most exalted character," was arrested and put on the steps of the Ocean House, at Rye, and conveyed to the parlor, where a court had been convened to try him for his alleged offense. The defendant being a stranger, he was assigned two counsel, and the case was, with all the solemn forms of law, presented to a jury—of twelve good men and true; with the exception of the foreman, who was a lady—composed of the guests of the hotel. The testimony was overwhelming, although the parties alleged to have been assaulted were not called to the stand. The counsel for the prisoner spoke an hour, and his speech besides being a very able defense, embraced sketches of the sea coast, the White Mountains, woman, and the American eagle. The chief feature of the defense was "insanity." The prosecuting attorney for the occasion did wonders, and when he closed upon the minds of the jury, the dangers of the deep, domestic circles made desolate, daughters drowned in the very bud of beauty, there was not a dry eye in the parlor, which was crowded during the trial by the ladies from far and near, now sojourning at the Beach of Rye. The plea of insanity was, for the first time disposed of. "There was no evidence, said the first scintilla," exclaimed the counsel, "that the defendant has assumed any of those water, leaping-place which betoken weakness of intellect. On the contrary he used his own eyes, articulated naturally, and did not display a ponderous fob chain. If the absence of these fopperies, may it please your honor, of course be put up till next summer, when the Trestle work of nearly half mile in length adjoining it will also be finished. The contractors (on the line beyond the 20 miles already graded) are, we believe, all at work, and the engineering corps, formerly located here, and now tramping the hills of "Old Stewart." Two locomotives are already doing service on the road, and the passenger cars are expected shortly. What has become of the projected barbecue at the Trenton road for the purpose of procuring stock for the turnpike? Surely it cannot be because the railroad is not finished there and beyond

DEPARTURES SINCE SATURDAY.

Mary Patterson, White river. Champion, ...New Orleans
A. T. Lacey, ...St. Louis. Platte Valley, ...St. Louis
Rapides, ...New Orleans. Imperial, ...New Orleans

During the forty-eight hours ending at 6 o'clock last evening the river declined 5 inches at this point, or in a ratio of 2½ inches in twenty-four hours.

Business was somewhat brisk at the levee yesterday. There was a tight fall of rain during the morning.

The steamer Platte Valley arrived from St. Louis yesterday morning with a fine trip, and departed last evening with a large number of passengers.

The Kate Frisbee came up from Vicksburg yesterday with a good passenger list and considerable freight. Included in her manifest were 19 bales of cotton, one bale of which was new cotton, consigned to Messrs. Nelson & Boyce, from Delta, Miss. The remaining 18 bales were consigned to Messrs. Gates, Wood & McKnight.

For VICKSBURG.—The fleet and splendid passenger steamer Kate Frisbee, Capt. Lee, will leave for Vicksburg at the usual hour this afternoon. She has very fine accommodations and attentive and efficient officers. Messrs. Moody and Quin are the clerks.

FOR ARKANSAS RIVER.—The fine little steamer Conway, Capt. Thomas, having been detained, will leave for the head-water of the Arkansas river at 4 o'clock this afternoon. This is an excellent opportunity for persons who wish to go through without detention.

Mr. J. K. Moody, clerk of the steamer Kate Frisbee, will be absent from his boat for a short time on a visit to his friends in Chicago.

Capt. Jas. O'Neal has become the agent of the Memphis and St. Louis Mail Line, and may be found at No. 6 Howard's Row.

NEW YORK, August 22.—The following is an addition to the summary of the steamship Hungarian, received from Farther Point, C. E., on Saturday.

The Peace Conference, which assembled at Zurich on the 8th inst., is composed of the following persons: The Count Colloredo and the Baron Meysenbug and Bonsequan represent Austria; the Marquis Bourmeville represents France; and the Chevaliers Desambrois and Jocon represent Sardinia.

The civil authorities were to have given the Austrians a public reception on the 11th inst.

At the latest accounts, the Conference had two sittings, but the proceedings were made public.

ENGLAND.—In the House of Lords during a Parliamentary discussion Lord Elch said that he would not press the motion previously made for an address to the Queen declaring it to be incompatible with the honor and dignity of the British government to take part in any conference for the settling of the preliminaries for a peace.

The proposition for the increase of the national debentures has been discussed.

In the House of Commons the bill for the East India loan of £3,000,000 has passed.

The banquet given in honor of the completion of the mammoth steamship Great Eastern was celebrated on the 8th inst. A great many members of Parliament and distinguished engineers were present.

The London Times in a recent article says: Where the treaty between Minister McLane and the Juarez government of Mexico was ratified, Mexico virtually passed under the sway of the United States Government. It is advantageous to Mexico and the world, but we are apprehensive of danger to private rights, and our government is urged to protect the interests of foreign Mexican bondholders.

The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, under the private title of Admiral Romanoff has taken up his residence at Ryde in the Isle of Wight.

The master builders of London, in consequence of the strike among the carpenters, sought the intervention of the government, but the Home Secretary could not see how he could interfere.

The London money market is easier, and funds are firm. Railway and other securities have an upward tendency.

Demetrius & Sons, great merchants, dealers in grain, have suspended.

The Bank of England was expected to advance its rates of interest on the 18th inst.

Admiral Seymour, of the Liberal party, has been elected to Parliament from the Devonport District.
