Trials of a Conductor.

From The Auburn Rainbow Director.]

Ma. Editor: Conductors have to shoulder the troubles of many, but few have such as mine was a few days ago.

At a certain station on the South Carolina Railroad, a few days ago, we stopped to "wood up" and water the "Iron Horse," and as bad luck would have it—for me—there was an old woman there with grapes for sale. She picked up a few bunches, walked up to the mail car where the Mayor was, and said, "You don't want to buy no grapes, Mister, do you." The Mejor smiled, and would have said, "how do you know?" but it was a lady; he said, "No, and any to-day."

By this time several of the passengers were out and at the basket, which was some ten or fifteen steps from the old lady. One asked, "What's the name of your grapes, Madame?" A second replied, "Isabella." A third said, "I think they are the White Scuppernong." A fourth remarked, "They look like some of Col. Brown's stock."

It will be useless to mention here that Col. Brown, of Charleston, S. C., has a great many and different varieties of grapes, and very fine, too, they are. The old lady, not being well versed in the different names of grapes, took it into her head that we wished to have a little fun at her expense.

She turned that wrinkled face towards us, and such a look—well, there is no use of trying to describe an angry woman's countenance. It can't be done on paper. She looked round, she said with a trembling voice:

"Look-a-here! Ef you is got on better clothes than I is, you can't poke your fun at me that-a-way. I'm not named "Lizabeth," nor I ain't any ov Col. Brown's stock, nather. And see here, Mr. Conductor White, of that's your name, of you go to any ov your Scrubs-on my grapes, I'll soon show you who I is; I'm worse 'on any Col. Brown's stock."

Passenger No. 1.—"O come, Madame, we want some grapes."

"Well, ef you do, why don't you buy um them—they is for sale. But ef I is a poor old woman, I ain't a going to 'low Mister Conductor White Scrubbs—my grapes. No, that I ain't. Ef my old man was here, he'd show you how it is to talk to me that-a-way."

Here passenger No. 5 put his head out of the car window, and said, "See here, what's that you have there, old lady?"

"It is grapes, sir."

"Who sells they for?"

"For sale," she quickly replied.

"Well, bring them on—that's my name."

I guess by what followed she didn't understand him; for the good old soul picked up her basket, and was handing it up to him, when he asked:

"My good madam who shall I thank for these fine grapes? Who sent them to me?"

She dropped the basket as quick as a little negro would a hot potato, and gave him one of her wicked looks, and displayed such an open, frank countenance, that he opened his eyes rather longer than should have been at that particular degree of her temper.

She yelled out almost equal to the "iron horse," who was just about ready to leave—"What, sir? Who send anybody sent you these grapes? You jest want to get my grapes for nothin', but you can't quite come it."

Mr. Sale was stunned for a while, but as soon as he could speak he said, "Madame, didn't you say the grapes were for me?" "No, I didn't, and you know it." "Didn't you say, 'they are for Sale?'" Yes, I did, but you wasn't a going to buy 'em." "Well, Madame, my name is Sale, and I thought some friend had sent them to me." Here a general laugh broke out, in which Mr. Sale and I took an active part.

The whole difficulty was, the old lady didn't understand the different names of grapes, and she and Mr. Sale either didn't understand each other, or couldn't agree, or didn't stop to settle the fact. I thought I had done well to get out of my own difficulties. The Major enjoyed it well. He was eating off the bunch she handed him to sample; as he got the grapes, or more than any of us, while we did the misunderstanding part. But this is only one of the many difficulties we poor Conductors get into that the quiet world knows nothing about.

THE CONDUCTOR.

What a Lady thinks of Hairy Faces.

A distinguished lady in Xenia, Ohio, is waging a terrible crusade against bearded men. Well, as the old lady once said on a certain occasion, "There's no accounting for tastes." The place of divinity in question has never forgived a soft moustache, or she wouldn't grow quite so furious. Hear her:

The passionate and affections have their poles in the faces, firmness in the upper lip, mirthfulness near the outer corners of the mouth, and the affections in the edges of the lips, etc., hence the philosophy and delight of kissing; the more intense the passion, the more soul-thrilling and enrapturing the kiss. Behold that lovely woman with a face shaped by the hand of harmony, regular features under clustering ringlets, bright eyes beaming with intelligence, well arranged pearly teeth, a soft and delicate skin, a mouth like Cupid's bow, a neck like ivory, a breast like alabaster, and the swelling undulations of love like snow, her lips like two rose-buds, moist with morning dew, and her cheeks

"Where the love kisses through the blushes creeping,
Working all the form diffuse beauty,
Dimpling and glowing with the light within it."

Radiant in beauty, she is surrounded by an atmosphere of love, as a rose exhales its fragrance. Just think of the fate of these hairy-faced fellows who attempt to kiss her—and then picking up his chewing-fit-for-three of bristles to reveal his wide-mouthed, cavernous slit of a mouth. Bah! it is abominable—the idea is disgusting, and I wish it was not so.

[illegible] cut, and contrary, to overturn my statement.

Whom do moustaches and beards become? Surgeons, physicians, lawyers, and especial professional executioners, Jack Ketch, the hangman, would effectually conceal all expressions of human sympathy and compassion causing him to look as grim and unrelenting as death, in whose service he officiates.

Low Life in the Quaker City.

The Philadelphia Gazette, in sketching the peculiarities of a noted quarter of that city, thus describes a rag and bone gatherer's "hotel:"

The house is a hotel, on a small scale. It contains ten rooms, cellar included, whose average dimensions are eight by ten feet. The cellar is reached by an organ grinder, who, with his family, eat, sleep, and live in this subterranean apartment. The floor is simply the earth dug into solidity, while the furniture comprised a three-legged table, two chairs and a bunch of straw in one corner, upon which the man, his wife, two children, and an old woman all slept. Above the cellar is a restaurant. We arrived just in time to see the purveyors returning from market. The purveyors aforesaid were four little girls, who deposited tolerable well filled baskets upon the boards that constituted the counter. The viands are begged from door to door, and given by the housekeepers to the servant girls, who supposed them to be intended for the suffering parents of the children.

Bless the innocence of some good people. The contents of these baskets are devoted to a very different purpose. The bones having meat upon them are sorted out, pieces of bread alone, upon different plates, and sold to customers at from three to six cents each, while the bones and inseparable masses of "cold victuals" are jumbled together in a tin boiler and converted into soup, which is sold at three cents a bowl. Rooms overhead are rented to families and transient guests, eight cents per night being the price per room, or three cents for a single person. The sleeping accommodations in the latter instance consist of a piece of carpet laid over some straw; in the former case, persons are expected to furnish for themselves. The passport to these accommodations is the three or eight cents. No references are required, nor a candle held to the faces of applicants to ascertain their color or character. The inmates of the house are about evenly divided into black and white, and nearly all of them are in the "rag and bone business."

A Monstrous Lusus Naturæ.—From an authentic source, which forbids to doubt the truth of the story, the following facts have been received:

One day, week before last, the passengers on board a ferryboat near Quebec were attracted by the singular appearance of a woman who occupied a rather secluded position, and who seemed to be under the care of some persons who acted as if anxious to shield her from observation. Her arms were bridged, but not so closely as to prevent a constant and very unusual motion, and her head, which was completely covered and hidden from sight, was observed to vary incessantly backward and forward, beneath the folds of cloth. As soon as the ferryboat reached the shore the figure was removed to the interior of one in waiting, and seated therein; but this moment a sort of tumult and trouble attracted the notice of the bystanders, the car was filled with eager inquirers. Those who entered, however, hastily returned, their faces pallid with horror.

Among them was the conductor of the train, with begged that no one would approach, for the bandages had been thrown off, and it had been discovered that the creature was a monster, possessing the form of a woman, except the hands and arms, which were those of a pig! No more human resemblance, but the absolute fact. This would seem incredible, were it the only case of the kind. It is known, however, that there lived in Albany, New York, a few years ago, a similar creature, having a woman's bosom and a pig's head; in this instance the arms were human. This being was always kept in close confinement, and never suffered to leave a certain room in the house where those who had charge of her resided, excepting when no visitors were about. She could talk imperfectly, and was capable of some degree of mechanical labor, for her sewing was said to be very beautiful. Her head was in every respect that of a pig—no particular was wanting—ears, bristles, even tusks, all were there. This creature died at the age of about thirty-five years, after having been for some time destitute of the little reason she once possessed.

Boston Courier, 10th.

TERRITORY ADMITTED UNDER DEMOCRATIC ADMINISTRATIONS.—Under Jefferson, Ohio was admitted and Louisiana purchased; Madison's administration was remarkable for the admission of Louisiana and Indiana into the Union—Madison was a Democrat. A Democratic Congress, during the Presidency of Monroe, a Democrat, opened the doors of the Union for the admission of Mississippi, Alabama, Illinois, Maine and Missouri. During his administration, Florida was purchased, Arkansas and Michigan were admitted under Gen. Jackson's regime; and under the lamented Polk, Texas was acquired, and the States of Iowa, Florida and Wisconsin were admitted, to say nothing of the purchase of California, Utah and New Mexico. A Democratic Congress did the work of admission in the case of California. Under Pierce, the territory of Arizona was purchased; and under the administration of President Buchanan Minnesota and Oregon were admitted.

How great and glorious has our country become under Democratic rule!

TO COTTON PLANTERS GENERALLY.

From the Vicksburg Whig.]

THE owners and agents of the various Iron Ties for Cotton Bales, are making great exertions to introduce them to your notice, and bring them into general use—upon the ground that they afford a greater security from fire, and more less than rope.

No doubt iron ties do somewhat temper than rope with but neighbors or Water, our insurance offices are not aware of that fact.—at any rate, they make no difference in their rates of insurance on cotton. It may be well to state on this head, that iron rust, coming in contact with cotton, in a state of friction, is apt to produce fire; and many persons of intelligence do really attribute the late fire on board cotton-loaded ships to this cause. It is a well-known fact, however, that iron bound cotton is more liable to damage by exposure to weather than rope-bound cotton, and that it is much more expensive to pack and put in order.

That any one thing should be less than rope three can be no doubt: and this must be their only reason for using the iron. But that rope is both useful and valuable, no one, we can see, deny—whereas iron hoops are worth nothing to our body, and this the planters most likely overlook in view of their one-sure pecuniary personal advantage.

There is a community of interests between the planter and consumer that ought to be cared for by each, in order to insure the best results to both. They should, therefore, deal fairly with one another—both having disputes and quarrels enough, in all conscience, with the interior speculators, who make all the profit either between them.

We feel in a different in degree, to which your attention is respectfully called. It shows an actual difference in the cost of $1.50 per bale, in favor of the use of rope-bound cotton over that bound in iron.

This great difference certainly warrants the move that is now being agitated by certain buyers in this city, to cause the Chamber of Commerce to establish an uniform rate of 12lbs. per bale on all iron-hooped cotton received at this port after this date.

At Home at Noon.

State Female College,

NEAR MEMPHIS, TENN.

THE third fiscal annual session will commence on the 15th of Sept.

The success of our first year, together with the numerous patronage of our patrons, leaves the proprietors hope that a bright future is in reserve for the Institution.

Our claims to patronage are, chiefly, the following:

I. Location, healthful, beautiful, and totally exempt from sectional influence.

II. Teachers of long and successful experience.

III. Course embracing all the studies, elegant, and admirably adapted to the purpose.

IV. Special Departments, with large, well ventilated rooms, furnished in a style far superior to that of school boards of some generals, and conducted in a manner which cannot fail to give satisfaction.

V. Community noted for its refined and Christian character.

VI. Accessibility by river and by railroad.

Our design is to combine in the State Female College all the advantages of a delightful home and a school of the highest grade.

Catalogues and circulars may be obtained by applying to the undersigned.

Memphis Female College.

THIS INSTITUTION, chartered in 1854, was founded upon a plan to afford superior accommodations and the very best scholastic facilities to a limited number of young ladies. The skilled teachers are secured in all the departments. All the dormitories are in the third and fourth stories, and no one of the healthy pupils, even before the fifth birthday, has required the attention of a physician during the last four years.

In order to afford an opportunity, persons designing to patronize the College, should make application before the beginning of the present session, on the GROWING MONDAY IN SEPTEMBER.

For full particulars, apply to

REV. J. H. MACPHERSON, President.
C. G. MACPHERSON, Principal.

FRANKLIN FEMALE COLLEGE,

Holly Springs, Miss.

REV. J. E. DOUGLASS, A. M. ..... President.
MRS. J. E. DOUGLASS, A. M. ..... Governess.

THIS INSTITUTION has been purchased by the subscriber, and will be reopened on MONDAY, the 5th of September, 1859. A Board of Teachers fully qualified to give a thorough course in the Literary, Scientific and Ornamental departments, will be employed. The building is now undergoing a thorough renovation, and will be supplied with furniture of the latest and best pattern. The Alabama Conference of the Methodist Church, at the head of one of the most flourishing female schools in the country, (Marshall Female Institute,) will furnish teachers for the Literary department. Circulars, containing all information, will be sent, on application to us, at Holly Springs, Miss.

J. E. DOUGLASS.

MASONIC MALE ACADEMY,

North Mount Pleasant,

MARSHALL COUNTY, MISS.

THE Trustees of this Institution have succeeded in procuring the services of Mr. J. J. Stovall, A. M., formerly of the Marshall Female Institute, to be assisted by his son, D. W. Stovall, A. B., in the charge of this school during the ensuing scholastic year. As Professor Stovall is so generally and favorably known as a thorough and successful teacher, it is not necessary to recommend him to patronage. Suffice it to say, that they are prepared to give a thorough an English, Mathematical and Classical education as can be obtained at any institution in the country. The Principal and Trustees are determined to spare no trouble or expense in making this the academy of the highest grade.

North Mount Pleasant is a very healthy and moral village. The sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited within five miles of it. The first session will commence the FIRST MONDAY in September next. For further information address the Principal or Secretary of the Board of Trustees.
