

Mary.
In the sweetest of jackets
She sat in her chair,
And told of the "rackets"
She'd had everywhere;
Of the parties and balls
To which she had been,
And how at them all
She reigned supreme;
She told of the chances
She had to wed,
But to all such advances
She just shook her head;
For she knew very well
(Tho' it seemed kind of wrong.)
The same story she'd tell
Till himself came along.
Then she paused for a space
And drew a deep sigh,
And I looked in her face
To know if it were I?
But she spoke not a word,
Tho' my thoughts she had read
And I felt quite absurd
And she still shook her head.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Household Hints
Hot water will take peach stains out of a table-cloth.

A little salt rubbed on a discolored egg-spoon will restore its silver tint.
The easiest method of removing rust from iron is rubbing it with a rag dipped in oil of tartar. The rust will disappear immediately.

Half a tablespoonful of vinegar is added to the dark portion of a marble cake it improves it.

When cutting fruit, fill the covers before putting them on and the air will be pressed out completely.

An old whitewash brush, well worn and cleaned, makes a good stove polishing brush.

To clean out a stove-pipe, place a piece of zinc on the live coals in the stove; the vapor produced by the zinc will carry off the soot by chemical decomposition.

If raw potatoes or the peelings are cut fine and sprinkled on the carpet before sweeping, they will be found more effective than salt or corn-meal.

To utilize old rubber the pieces are heated in contact with steam, when the sulphur is volatilized and the caoutchouc melts, and is collected as a liquid, used in preparing waterproof covers, etc.

Health of Cows.

E. W. Stuart, of New York, has this to say, that the health of the cows may be promoted by studying the effect of different foods. A fruitful cause of disease in cattle is the steady feeding of dry, woody, fibrous food. This produces impaction of the manfolds and a general derangement of the system. Oil meal seems to have a similar effect upon the system to turnips or other roots. It produces a general relaxation of the bowels and counteracts the effect of dry, fibrous food. In many dairy districts flaxseed is purchased at a moderate price, say from $1.13 to $1.50 per bushel, and it will pay the dairyman or feeder of cattle or horses, to buy a few bushels of flaxseed and grind it with his other grain. One bushel of flaxseed mixed with twenty bushels of corn and oats, and all ground fine together, will, by reason of its oil, render slightly laxative and assist materially in giving a proper action to the digestive organs. This will answer instead of oil meal. It will show its effect by giving a soft, mellow skin and a glossy coat. By studying the effects of foods the feeder may prevent most of those diseases that render the services of the farrier necessary. Food is all the medicine that is needed.

Mixed Feeds.

One of the strong points in favor of the much praised ensilage, is that animals eat it with a relish. No food, however rich it may be in food elements, will prove profitable if the farm stock cannot be made to take to it kindly. It is on this account that a mixing of feed has been so successful. Sameness palliates upon the appetite—a change of diet encourages and sharpens it. A few roots cut, or better, pulped, and given to the animals, will make them eat the corn-fodder or cut straw with all the greater relish. Try and make a little change in diet of the animals, even though it be only once a week, with some roots, potatoes, apples, etc., it will pay. The more an animal eats, and healthfully digests, the more profitable it is.

The inventor of the screw propeller was the celebrated artist Leonardo di Vinci, and he first applied it to aerial navigation.

The electric light has been successfully introduced in the Mathilde Colliery, in Upper Silesia. The work was done by Siemens & Halske, of Berlin.
Prof. James Law, in the Bulletin of the National Board of Health, states that in Europe and Hindoostan variola is so common in pigeons and poultry as to constitute a veritable plague.

The Japanese telegraph system, established 10 years ago, has now 3,929 miles of line and 9,345 miles of wire. Twenty words are sent 60 miles for less than two cents. Last year the number of messages transmitted was 1,272,756. There are 348 Morse instruments in use, 26 single needle-blocks, and 29 Bell Telephones.

Looking-Glass Superstitions.

Most readers are no doubt acquainted with Bonaparte's superstitions regarding the breaking of a looking-glass. During one of his campaigns in Italy he broke the glass over Josephine's portrait. So disturbed was he at this, as he thought, ominous occurrence, that he never rested until the return of the courier whom he had forthwith despatched to convince himself of her safety, so strong was the impression of her death upon his mind.

In Cornwall, breaking a looking-glass is believed to insure seven years of sorrow, and a Yorkshire proverb informs us that such an unfortunate occurrence entails "seven years' trouble but no want." In Scotland, to smash a looking-glass hanging against a wall is regarded as an infallible sign that a member of the family will shortly die.

Grose, alluding to this superstition, says it foretells the speedy decease of the master of the house. It has been suggested that this popular fancy dates very many years back, and probably originated in the destruction of the reflected human image—an interesting illustration of how the association of ideas in the formation of superstition is often determined by mere analogy.

In the south of England it is regarded as highly unlucky for a bride on her wedding day to look in the glass, when she is completely dressed, before starting for the church. Hence very great care is usually taken to put on a glove or some slight article of adornment, after the last lingering and reluctant look has been taken in the mirror.

The idea, we are informed, is that any young lady who is too fond of the looking-glass will be unfortunate when married. This is not, however, the only way in which superstition interferes with the grown-up maiden's peep in the looking-glass. Thus, Swedish damsels are afraid of looking in the glass after dark, or by candlelight, lest by so doing they forfeit the good will of the other sex. On the other hand, in England the looking-glass occasionally holds a prominent position in love divinations.

Belgian girls who desire to see their husbands in a dream lay their garters crosswise at the foot of the bed and a looking-glass under their pillow; in the glass they believe the desired image will appear. The practice of covering or removing the looking-glass from the chamber of death still prevails in some places.

Whom Not To Marry.

Women who love their husbands are happy and at rest. Those who do not are disturbed and restless. They are always seeking for some means of killing time. They are ready to flirt at any moment. Their children are, according to their means, either hidden in nurseries under the care of French bonnes, or handed over to Sally, the slatternly nurse, to skake, and slap, and stuff with sugar, as her wisdom dictates, while society and amusements of all sorts occupy their mother's time. Home is not happy to the poor woman, because she has chosen her mate foolishly—because she trusted to that "love after marriage" which mercenary old people promise those who make what they call a sensible match.

Sad as a neglected wife, who loves her husband well, must be, I believe she is happier than this poor restless creature, though she be worshipped. The love of one we do not love becomes simply a bore, especially in the close intercourse of home life; and she who does not give her heart to her husband is not likely to care much for his children. So, girls, if you do not love your lover, don't marry him. Remember that marriage is a serious step, and that when you give him your hand that he may encircle it with a wedding ring, you seal the happiness or misery of your natural life. Don't marry unless you are sure of your love for him, and his for you.

A train of fifteen oil tanks belonging to the Union Tank Company, on the Erie Railroad three miles west of Port Jervis, and near the bridge crossing the Delaware river. There were fifty cars in the train originally, but when the fire commenced the oil tanks were cut loose a few rods from the bridge and an engine in the rear drew the other cars across the bridge and out of danger. As the cars exploded one by one the volumes of flames shot up hundreds of feet into the air, and fragments of the tanks were thrown fully one thousand yards. Rescue was had to two cannon, and slugs were fired into the tanks not reached by the fire, so as to allow the oil to escape, thus preventing explosion and permitting the fire to exhaust itself. By this means six of the tanks were perforated, and no explosion occurred.

The Captains of the Missouri Train Robbers Divide the Plunder.

The case of the men who robbed the passenger train on the Iron Mountain Railroad on the night of September 2nd, and who were captured September 28th—one in Texas and two in the Indian nation—and brought to Washington, assumed a new and sensational phase in the special term court held on Friday, when each of the robbers pleaded guilty to fourteen indictments, asking the term of punishment seventy years to each man. The pursuing party that captured two of the robbers—Stephens and Delaney—consisted of four men named Huddleston, Belvines, Moore and Dollahade. When arrested the robbers had about $9,000 in their possession. Belvines objected, saying the money ought to be returned to the railway company, but he finally agreed to its being equally divided among the four officers in the presence of Stephens and Delaney. In consideration of the latter two keeping the matter secret, each of the four officers took an oath that he would annually pay to the family of the train robbers $100, and leave no means untried to secure their release from the penitentiary after conviction. The party reached Hope, turned over the prisoners to the authorities and came to this city, where they received $1,000, the reward offered by the state for their capture. All the captors appeared at the trial, when Belvines divulged the whole matter to Superintendent Buchanan, of the Iron Mountain Road. Huddleston, Moore and Dollahade were examined separately. Each made affidavit that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of any of the money. Subsequently Moore approached Mr. Buchanan and stated that the money could be procured.
