Daily Appeal.

A POLITICAL ANECDOTE.

From Harper's Magazine.

Old New Jersey turns up again with the following very entertaining incidents which will be relished by the parties as well as the reader:

They tell a capital story here about the present Governor of the State, Dr. Newell, and Col. Jas. W. Wall, who ran for Congress in 1858 in the Second District. In order to initiate your readers into the humor of the story, they must be reminded that Governor Newell, who was then before the people as the American and Republican candidate, was a very industrious operator in his own behalf, attending to all places where opportunities of meeting the people were afforded, and making himself agreeable to the sovereigns. On one occasion Col. Wall addressed a field meeting of the Democracy in the county of Monmouth, where he claimed exclusive domain, having there his staunchest supporters. After explaining his own position and his views upon the political questions of the day, and why he ought to be sent to Congress for the good of the country, the Col. turned his attention to the Opposition, and especially pitched into Dr. Newell, "the hermaphrodite candidate for Governor," as he called him—spoke of his attempt to ride two horses, and that the time would not be long before he would come to the forks of the political road where public opinion branched off into two distinct paths and then he thought it each horse would separate from him, the Doctor would find himself in trouble; and, in a word, gave the Doctor a most severe trolling. After he had taken his seat, one of the Colonel's friends approached him and inquired, "Who do you think, Colonel, has been listening to the last part of your speech."

"Really, sir, I do not know of any one in particular, nor being able to recognize faces in so vast a crowd."

"I thought you hadn't," said the friend. "Allow me to say that the man sitting in a buggy yonder is Dr. Newell, the Opposition candidate for Governor."

The Colonel, looking up quietly, and recognizing the Doctor, exclaimed, "Why really! so it is. Well, he only illustrates the old adage, that listeners never hear any good of themselves. Well, I am in for it, and must face it out, so I will give the Doctor a call." According the Colonel left the stand, and pushing his tall athletic person through the crowd, approached the Doctor's carriage. The Doctor saw him coming, and smiled. When they met the most astonishing courtesy marked the interview.

"Why, Doctor," said the Colonel, "it seems to me you are far beyond the line of your professional visiting this morning, or else your practice has enlarged greatly."

"No!" replied the Doctor, "I heard there were many sick and afflicted here in this neighborhood, and I have come down to see what I can do for them; but, Colonel, I have been listening to your speech, and I was delighted to find that you handled me so gentlemanly—no attack upon my private character, simply arraigning me for my political proclivities, which belong to the public."

The Doctor bowed as he said this; and the Colonel, not to be outdone in politeness, bowed in return, and said:

"Certainly, Doctor, I never indulge in personalities against the private reputation of any gentleman."

"Just at this moment one of the fishermen along shore, who had been listening to the interview, stepped up, and to the great amusement of the crowd and the parties most interested, said, with great humor:

"Well, gentlemen, you both are so polite that it reminds me of a story I once heard of an Irishman, who was going along the road, when an angry bull rushed down upon him, and with his horns tossed him over a fence. The Irishman, recovering from his fall, upon looking up saw the bull pawing and tearing up the ground (as is the custom of the animal when irritated) whereupon Pat, smiling at him, said, "If it was not for your bowing and scraping, and your humble apologies, you brute, I'd think I should think that you had thrown me over this fence on purpose!"

Thereupon there was a great roar, and the crowd quietly dispersed.
