Daily Appeal.

A GOOD PARODY.

The city council of New Orleans having invited the Hon. Edward Everett to deliver the oration at the inauguration of the Obelisk Monument in that city, he declined, and, who would, in a speech for the True Delta got off the following, signed to the name of "John Anderson, Esq." Without subscribing to the sentiment, we can but pronounce the spirit capital:

Ned, Everett, my friend Ned,
Where you and I were young,
We used to scrimmage, Ned,
To learn our mother tongue.
You were the 8 inches hig, Ned,
The smaller called you ne;
And be the best of men, you know,
Ned Everett, my Jo!

In vain we took around, Ned,
In all our school days,
Another boy with the mental eye,
And to learn the Latin phrase;
And even more to you, Ned,
You chose it to be—
"Dear Ned, I'm sorry for your little kills,
Ned Everett, my Jo!"

We'll have a Bunker Hill,
Where you will be chief,
When greatly in our pedestal
Uprises Harry Grey;
You'll be a Hero, Ned,
Cash enter and be a will flow,
And twice will at the table stand,
Ned Everett, my Jo!

'Tis true that you otherwise, Ned,
Have manifestly your "pillow"
To the Hunker party,
When Rocky was in the right;
But now it is all over,
Ned, for you
Are our leader of war!
(Of course I mean "Hundred," none!
Ned Everett, my Jo!)

Black Matt; or, How a Slave Sold his Own Master.

From the Petersburg (Va.) Express:

Matthew Hobson (generally called "Black Matt" on account of the darkness of his complexion) was well known among the inhabitants of the counties of Virginia, some years ago, as a slave-dealer, and an accomplished "breaker-in" of bad flesh. He once purchased a bright mulatto by the name of Sam at a very low price, on account of his numerous bad qualities, such as thieving, lying, and drunkenness. Sam was intelligent, with all his faults—could read and write, and was the life of a most polished gentleman. He was so far removed, too, from the pure African, that he could scarcely be distinguished from a white man. On his becoming the property of the slave-dealer, he received several severe admonitions, in order that he might have a foretaste of the temper of his master. Secretly he swore vengeance for these striking proofs of Matt's affection, and in a short time an opportunity offered to gratify that vengeance.

Matt soon had a lot of negroes ready to ship from Norfolk. The barque arrived safely at New Orleans, and was brought to the wharf. In order that Sam might bring a good price, he was rigged out in fine clothes—wall-sides, boots, a silk hat, and kid gloves. Matt thought by this external show to realize at least $600 for the mulatto, as the body servant of some rich planter.

Sam was consequently allowed to go on shore, in order to show himself off. He proceeded to the Alhambra, and these strolled along among the best of them. Hearing a portly gentleman remark that he wished to purchase a good body servant, he went up to him, and, with an independent swagger, said:

"My dear sir, I have got just the boy that will suit you."

"Ha!" rejoined the planter, "I am glad to hear you say so, for I have been looking for one for several days. What do you ask for him?"

"Nine hundred dollars," replied Sam, "and cheap as dirt at that. He has every quality—can shave, dress hair, brush boots, and is besides polished to the extreme. I could have got fifteen hundred dollars for him, but for one fault."

"Ha!" ejaculated the planter, "and pray what kind of a fault is that?"

"Why, sir, a ridiculous one. He imagines himself a white man."

"A white man!" exclaimed the planter, laughing, "that is a funny conceit, indeed; but I can soon cure him of that—I've had considerable experience in training and managing contrabands of color."

"Oh! sir," continued Sam, "there is but little doubt that he can be cured—though you may find some trouble at first."

"Well, sir, you appear to be a gentleman," said the planter, who was rather too anxious and confiding. "I will take him on your recommendation. Where is he now?"

"On board the barque—yonder at the wharf; you can see him at any moment," replied Sam.

"Good!" exclaimed the planter, "I am much pleased with your honesty and candor, and in order to save time—here are nine hundred dollars—please to give me a bill of sale."

Sam got the clerk to draw up a bill of sale, signed the name of Samuel Hopkins, pocketed the money and told the planter to ask the captain for Black Matt; he would himself be on board as soon as he had closed a bargain with another gentleman who was desirous of purchasing one of his field hands.

The planter took his way to the barque, and demanded of the captain to see the boy Black Matt. The officer pointed to Matthew Hobson, who sat on the quarter deck, smoking cigar, and enjoying the confusion of his slaves.

"Are you Black Matt, my fine fellow?" asked the planter addressing the slave merchant.

"Folks call me so at hum," was the reply, "but here my name is Matthew Hobson. What do you want?"

"I'll tell you, Matt, what I want. I want you. You're a likely looking fellow, and will just suit me."

"Look ye here, stranger," said Matt, firing up, "may be you don't know who you are speaking to?"

"Yes I do, though—you're my property; I bought you of your master, Samuel Hopkins, just now, sir!"

"You bought me?" exclaimed Matt, standing as if struck before the planter. "Hell and the devil, sir—I'm a white man!"

"Come, come, now," calmly said the man, "it won't do—I know you—you won't humbug me with your cursed impudence! I'll whip it out of you, sir—I'll teach you!"

Here Matt drew back and aimed a blow at the middle master of the planter, who seized him by the throat, and bellowed for the police. An officer happened to be on the levee—he at the instance of the planter seized the refractory slave and bore him to the calaboose, where he remained until evidence could be procured identifying him as a free born white citizen of the United States.

Sam, in the mean time, got on board a ship that was just weighing anchor for an European port, and never has been heard of since. Thus has the rascal had his revenge—Matt lost his slave, and the "green" fat gentleman his money.

A Free Lover Rode on a Rail in Utica.

From the Utica Telegraph, March 19:

Utica, on Saturday night, was offenseed an occurrence the like of which has not been since the occasion of our "order loving people" mobbing the Abolitionists some few years ago, when the "peaceable institution" was looked upon with greater laxity in this section of the country than it is now. A party, numbering (we are informed) about five hundred persons, proceeded to the residence of Mr. F. Skinner, on Cornelia street, near Fayette, for the purpose of punishing that individual for entertaining and practicing Free love doctrines. It appears Mr. Skinner, who is a married man with four children, became convinced a short time ago that he had a "passional attraction" for a young lady named Kate Beardsley, and she at the same time was impressed with the belief that Skinner was her affinity. There being, then, such a unity of sentiment, these natural companions were that they came together, and concluded to carry on the partnership of husband and wife practically, but without the sanction of either priest or parson. Mrs. Skinner was nothing loth, for she had suddenly conceived a passion for one Dr. Bentley, a chiropodist physician which he reciprocated ardently. They all lived together in one house, having also, as one of the happy family, an Hibernian lecturer and a brother in the faith, named Wooster. We suppose he was a sort of allied partner in the free c—nerage.

As we said, the mob proceeded to Skinner's residence, and with the horse, tin pans, and with a large tenor drum beaten lustrically on a horse fiddle, played several airs more audible than musical. As Mr. Skinner did not appear to acknowledge the compliment of the serenade, the crowd became angry and began to throw the missiles fly at the house. This accomplished what the music couldn't. Skinner opened the door, and presented himself to the visitors. He spoke to them and attempted to justify his proclivities, and said he slipped from the "ile a matter in the cause." His audience didn't appreciate exactly with him, though they were of the opinion and determined that he should suffer something for it. They accordingly procured a long rail and slipped it to Mr. Skinner that it would please them if he should bestride it.

As he did not move with alacrity, he was seized by several young, but Kate his affinity, had followed him to the door, and when he was being drag-ed away she clung to him with all the tenacity of "undying love"—she was determined that her affinity should not be wrested from her close embrace. But strong men were too powerful for her, and, as gently as possible, her hold was released, and she conducted into the house. Skinner was then brought into the street, and the rail was passed between his legs and elevated on the shoulders of several very willing parties. The procession then commenced to move, taking the course down Fayette street, to the music of the multifarious instruments with which the crowd was plentifully supplied, and amid the shouts and laughter and jeers of the participants.

Two or three individuals immediately behind Mr. Skinner's velocipede were encouraging him with stentorian voice to an "argo the ordeal bravely, in such exclamations as, "He rides!" "He shall ride!" "Hold your quite!" "He hath not departed!" etc. Notwithstanding this, by the time the procession reached Genesee street, it was evident that Skinner's strength, from the jolting on a narrow and pointed rail, was giving out, and he could not maintain his elevated position without assistance, so a couple of humane persons standing ready, he was lowered, and, still the cry hail was reached, when the rail was lowered and Skinner allowed to stand on terra firma. He the police interfered, and rescued the pitiful objects of their victim, who was taken to the watch-house for protection. Mrs. Skinner and Kate followed him shortly after, and the trio passed several hours in a cell together. They were released early the following morning.

After the crowd went to Skinner's they repaired to Bell Place, where Skinner and Dr. Bentley, but these worthies, fortunately for themselves, happened to be out.

SUICIDE AT THREE SCORE AND TEN.—A man named Jacob Gillian, aged about seventy years, committed suicide by drowning at Cincinnati on the 25th. The deceased was formerly a steamboat clerk, and in comfortable circumstances, but for some years past had been financially embarrassed.

POPULATION OF THE WORLD.—The population of the globe has been generally estimated at seven hundred millions of human beings. Recently the estimate has been increased to one thousand millions. The latest survey, and, probably the most accurate, is that made by Herr Diedrici, director of the statistical bureau of of Berlin. He computes the entire population of the globe at twelve hundred and sixty-eight millions. He assigns to Australia two millions, to America fifty-nine millions, to Africa two hundred millions, to Europe two hundred and seventy-two millions, and to Asia seven hundred and fifty millions.

☞ THE EMPEROR OF FRANCE has never been "talked about," but letters enough have been written of her appearance, etc., that one tells how at the Tuileries "her swan-like neck rose out of a bed of diamonds, and her soft auburn hair lay back upon a diadem of the most exquisite gems. She wore diamond bracelets; but as well does she know what to do with her hands, that one scarcely notices them. She would be a beautiful picture, encircled in a soft ethereal atmosphere—an atmosphere of beauty and soul, of delicacy and refinement.

☞ The house of Michael Angelo, at Florence, which was filled with works of art, has been the property of that city by the bequest of Signor Buonarotti, one of the great sculptor's descendants. As some opposition was made by Signor Buonarotti's heirs, the Tuscan Government settled the matter by paying them 4,000 scudi. It is stated that among the treasures thus become public property are several unpublished works by Angelo in pros and verse, and a number of letters from his illustrious cotemporaries.

Notice.

Here is that We May Never Want Bread.

CITIZENS OF MEMPHIS:—On the 30th of last November, our extensive Cracker Bakery was totally destroyed by fire. Some that then said we would have been defeated to disappoint a great many of our Memphis friends in not having Crackers to fill their orders, which, but I swore to do that their orders from this time, that he promptly attended to, as I have built a much larger factory than I had before. I have a strong substantial brick building, three stories high, fifty feet wide and sixty-five deep, and have, with never-ceasing and two-straight machines making crackers constantly. My price will be ten percent lower than any baker in the west. Please send in your orders.

Yours respectfully,

St. Louis, March 19, 1860. JOSEPH GARNER.

TRUST SALE.

BY virtue of a deed of trust, dated February 1, 1856, executed by A. D. Witherspoon to W. A. Goodwyn to secure a certain debt therein specified, in favor of the Memphis Building and Loan Association, and of another deed of trust, dated 31st May, 1856, executed by said Witherspoon to J. C. Grider, for the benefit of the said Association, we will proceed to sell on the premises, on MONDAY, the 30th day of April, 1860, at 10 o'clock, A. M., in front of the office of J. Harris, Esq., in the city of Memphis, the following property, viz:

A certain lot of ground in the city of Memphis, described as follows: Beginning at a point on the east side of Causey street, 75 feet south of Butler's north boundary line, thence east 150 feet, thence parallel with the north side of Butler's north boundary line, thence south 25 feet to a stake, thence westwardly 150 feet to the beginning, being part of block No. 8 of Butler's division. The sale is believed to be good, but we will only act as trustee. Should the above not sell for sufficient to satisfy the above debts, we will, at the same time and place, sell 15 shares of the stock of the Memphis Building and Loan Association, the property of Witherspoon, conveyed as collateral security for the above debts.
