THE MEMPHIS DAILY APPEAL.

BY M'CLANAHAN & DILL. • MEMPHIS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1860. VOLUME XI.—NUMBER 216.

Daily Appeal.

SPEECH OF ALEX. H. STEPHENS,

Delivered in the City Hall Park, at Augusta, Georgia, on Saturday Evening, September 1, 1860.

[CONCLUDED FROM YESTERDAY.]

I have been asked informally two questions, which I will here answer.

The first is: How, differing from Mr. Douglas on this point, as I do, I can give him my support?

I answer, because I look upon the matter as involving no principle of any vital importance.

Practically, it amounts to nothing. With his views, carrying a power will go whenever the people need it, and no law of Congress, or a territorial legislature will ever carry it where they do not want it. Under the operation of the enterprise, whether right or wrong, we will of expansion in the slave-holding capacity, and population in comparison on the northern side, the right or power of the people of an organized Territory through their agents (a legislature, either directly or indirectly twenty-slave states while in a territorial state) will be found to be sufficient to fix a State Constitution, I stand where Sydney, the great statesman that Earl Russell, may at his country, ever contained, stood upon the question of the right of the British Parliament to tax the colonies. The was a question much greater and learned man than myself, who had preceded me in this place, to say to you in eloquent and learned language, which I can say to you, that, and behalf of the people of the House of Commons:

"Gentlemen, you may perceive that I am speaking this day in favor of nothing to do with the question of the right of taxation. Some gentlemen, perhaps, not in this room, I pot it really out of the question. It is one than nothing to my consideration. I do not wonder, nor will you, that gentlemen of profound learning are fond of displaying it on this point—for it is a fine field for oratory, and it is a subject, too, on which, and solely limited in the policy of the question. I do not examine whether the giving away a man's money by a power acquired and retained out of the reach and control of the person, and how far eliminating a small form of policy, are carried to an exercise of that right by the charter of colony or whether, on the contrary, a right of taxation is necessarily involved in the great principle of legislation, and inseparable from the ordinary express power. These are deep questions, where great names will rise against each other, where reason is employed, and an appeal to authorities only is the conclusion. For high and reverend authorities there are on both sides, and there is no sure footing in the middle. This point is the good Sebastian for Internal Dominion and Great Canon and where awaiting which have not been.

Whether the people of a Territory have this right or not, or under the Constitution, and whether and how far the decision of the Supreme Court on it, I am perfectly willing for those who like to do so to argue it. I for one, acquiesce in it. I therefore, I would, if I could, give it to them in grains. If they have not got it as matter of right, being one of the sovereignties, I would, if I could, give it to them, as many high authorities believe they have. Literally, if I could, grant it to them as matter of favor. This is my position in a nutshell of how I stand on the question. It is for the people of the United States, that he was not intended to be embraced in the Declaration of Independence—that subordination to the white race is his natural and normal condition, that he status in society is a question, not of moral right, but one of political and social economy, and that every State and organized community have the right to fix this status for themselves. These are the great principles and tru ies upon which our system rests, and upon which it must depend on the fate of our battles with the public opinion of the world. On this arena we have got to meet our opponents sooner or later. We live in an age of discussion—all questions are being discussed, and the institutions, must pass this ordeal. The institution of African slavery, among us, cannot escape it. If it does not stand upon the ground of right, it can not stand. If it does not do, it must go down. And in the vindication of these great fundamental truths, relative to the rights of the People of Sovereignty, it will be done by an effort of patriotism, rising superior to and stronger than the power of that movement. This is my judgment I give it to you for what it is worth; consider of it as you think best. I do not give it to you as a partisan—I have no personal or partizan feelings on the subject. In all that I have said, I have been governed solely by consideration of the public good.

Here Mr. Stephens, after returning thanks to the ladies, who had honored the occasion with their presence, and addressing a few remarks to them pertinent to the subject, and the influence of woman in public affairs, though they took no active part in politics, and appealing to all classes, young and old, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, sons, and all, to exert whatever influence they possessed in the cause of their country in this hour of her great need; and expressing hopes that under Providence the bright prospect of a great future, and high career for our young Republic, not yet half run, and whose manhood, youth and strength, might not be cut off and blasted, but that it should continue for ages to come, t-less untold millions, again look his seat amidst loud and prolonged applause.

Non-Resident Notice.

A. Kennedy, Attachment, 1861—8295.

Sam'l Enright, Mary Enright.

IS this cause it appearing to the law side of the Circuit Court of Shelby County, that the defendants Mary Enright, aged 18 years, and S. Enright, aged 16 years, are non-residents of the State of Tennessee.
