TOO MUCH MUST NOT BE EXPECTED

HEN a man who has devoted his life exclusively to labor matters is elected to a position of public trust, it is strange what effect it will have upon him. His eagerness to see labor receive due recognition should by no means be forgotten. There ought not be very much difference between serving the people and serving labor. The interest of labor is best promoted by serving all of the people. The man does not serve labor best who thinks only of labor's side of a matter. When each interest is duly considered, giving justice to both, then and only then can we expect a happy state of affairs. Labor stands for equal rights to all, and special privileges to none. If a legislator stands upon this principle he will serve not only labor, but all the people. We have reached an advanced state in municipal government. The giving away of franchises, and other rights to private individuals is, and of right out to be, a thing of the past. We do not desire to take anything but a practical position on any question. It is one thing to lecture on a question yet visionary, but it is decidedly another to put it into actual practice. We believe in the evolutionary educational process; a radical change in affairs often does more harm than good. The gradual change has proved to be the most satisfactory to all. In the election of the editor of this paper to the city council too much should not be expected. He shall endeavor to be fair and honest. On account of his position as an advocate of labor the eyes of all the people will be turned upon him. Any mistake will re-act upon the cause he has championed; hence it is our duty to be careful, and he asks that his friends be the dining room each man presented patient, assuring them that he shall be as diligent and industrious his ticket. One had a red ticket, and hence it is our duty to be careful, and he asks that his friends be as he has been in the past.

RETROSPECT ON THE ELECTION.

\ UESDAY'S election was not without its surprises. The Republicans were completely disappointed and the Democrats were just as much surprised. The Republicans fully expected to elect Mayor Hugo by from 200 to 500 majority, and at least six aldermen. The Democrats figured Henry Truelsen's majority at 200, and expected to elect but three aldermen. The returns show that both were poor estimators. The Democrats were entirely too conservative. Everything, even to the atmosphere, indicated that Truelsen would be elected; the methods of the Republicans themselves showed to any observer that they were badly spoke. frightened. Their wild wagers had the effect of discouraging even the most enthusiastic Democratic supporter.

Whenever the Republican machine goes about wagering odds on majorities, it should then be known that their cause is doubtful. and that their wild bets are made for the purpose of inducing many voters to get on the band wagon. If there is anything that the Democrats need more than united work in a campaign it is con- an inmate of an asylum, but he was fidence. If it were not for Truelsen's remarkable optimism they given his freedom when it was thought would have been badly beaten. We have seen many discouraged workers leave his presence with a stronger determination to win. snap "Griffo's" feet and hands were frozen, and although it was not found Duluth is neither a Democratic nor a Republican city. The independent vote holds the balance of power, and this vote usually goes his mind to the party that makes the hardest effort. These observations may be taken for what they are worth. We give them without cost, as they are gained from several years' experience in local political

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

7 E DESIRE to take this opportunity to thank our friends for their magnificent support at the polls on Tuesday last. We never expected to be elected by such a large majority. Some of our opponents endeavored to discourage our candidacy on the grounds that we were a "labor agitator." but it seems that the people did not have very much fear of that. Our majority was the largest ever given to an aldermanic candidate in the history of Duluth politics. This in itself is a distinguished honor that we shall always be proud of. The work done by our friends, without one penny compensation, is another matter accountable for our victory. Party workers, who heretofore received pay for their time in the field, contributed their valuable services without fee, showing that they were truly sincere in our success. To all of them we again extend our sincere thanks, and we hope that they shall never regret what they have done. The confidence reposed in us by the voters of the Fifth ward will ever be appreciated, and it shall be our aim to hold it for all time.

Richard Croker, in retiring as leader of Tammany and boss of the New York Democratic machine, made a little farewell address, in which he said that it was the duty of the organization to "stand on principles, and not on patronage." That is the duty of any truly Democratic body, but Tammany has always looked out for the patronage and never cared a straw for principles. On the contrary, it has repeatedly fought Democratic candidates whom it feared it could not control, bartering away even the presidency to secure or retain a firm grip upon the local offices having "spoils" to dispense to the faithful. The fewer Crokers the Democratic party has the less frequently will it "croak."

When the working poor are paid in return for their labor, only as much as will buy them the necessities of life, their condition is identical with that of the slave who receives those necessities at first hand. The former we call the "free men," and the latter "slaves," but the difference is imaginary only.—John Adams.

The business and laboring interests are working in harmony at St. Paul in the interest of Duluth.—It's a sign that a good feeling exists between them.

The man who never forgives or forgets is to be pitied. As he grows old his bosom is a bosom of old grudges and they are ill company.

Arbitration is an American idea; strikes and boycotts emanate from old-world monarchies; the union label is the modern weapon.

Of all sad things of tongue and pen, the sadest of all is might have been"-If we had worked just a trifle harder.

One bad thing in our politics is that we have had too many water elections. They have made too many grafters.

SERMONS Without PREACHERS

In an upper room of an old-fashion house, in Twelfth street, above Race there gathered yesterday morning curious company of men, says Philadelphia North American of January 2. They sat in rows, as at church with their eyes fixed on a man who addressed them from the platform, or led them in singing. At the proper signals they rose and sang with him, with seemed to be a patient impulse of obedience. When the hymn was finished they sat again, and followed the service in silence and without motion. They seemed to be waiting.

Their years ranged from youth to old age; their faces were smooth and bearded, their features dissimilar, their clothing alike only in its general appearance of being too long worn. Yet, in every face, in every steady eye and submissive mouth there was some unnamed terrible familiarity. In this old man, with shaggy beard and gray matted hair, it was the unmistakable record of a useless life, years of struggle against poverty, the gradual fading away of hope, the yielding at last to the hardness of defeat. In his youth with thin,unshaven cheeks, it was the beginning of the same story, but the struggle would not last for years; it was already over.

And so in all the faces. Everywhere of defeat, the dull conviction of failure They were the New Year's guests of the Sunday Breakfast association. which not only in holiday time, but fortunate.

The service was over at last and the crowd was permitted to descend to the dining room. They moved down the narrow stairway, slowly and steadily, but with a repressed eagerness. There was no talking. Each man clutched a white ticket in his hand. Four abreast the throng rolled out of the gloom at the head of the stairs and down the steps, with shuffling feet.
One of the officials stood at the landing, and as the line crushed a little he flung up his hand. The silent men looked at him submissively, and moved more slowly. As they reached
