A REMARKABLE STORY.

HOW LIFE OF A CELEBRATED SCHOLAR SAVED BY AN APPARITION.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly for November narrates the following strange story, which "superstitionists" will, of course, greedily swallow:

Dr. DeWette, the famous German biblical critic, returning home one evening, between 9 and 10 o'clock, was surprised, upon arriving opposite the house in which he resided, to see a bright light burning in his study. In fact, he was rather more than surprised, for he distinctly remembered to have extinguished the candles when he went out, an hour or two previously, locked the door, and put the key in his pocket, which, upon feeling for it, was still there. Put into a moment to wonder by what means and for what purpose any one could have entered the room, he perceived the shadow of a person, apparently occupied about something in a remote corner. Supposing it to be a burglar employed in rifling his trunk, he was upon the point of alarming the house, when the man, attracted to the window, into full view, as if for the purpose of looking out into the street. It was De Wette himself! The scholar, author, professor—his bright eye, fine, sharp—his head, his face, his features, eyes, mouth, nose, chin, every one—skull-cap, study-gown, neck tie—all, everything. There was no mistaking him, no deception whatever; there stood Dr. DeWette in his own library, and he out in the street! Why, he must be somebody else! The doctor, instinctively, grasped his body with his hands, and tried thus if with the psychological tests of self-consciousness and identity, doubtful, if he could believe his senses, that black were not white, that he no longer existed his former self, and stood perplexed, bewildered and confounded, gazing at his other likeness, looking out of the window. Upon the person's returning from the window, which occurred in a few moments, Dr. DeWette resolved not to dispute the possession of his study with the other doctor before morning, and ringing at the door of a house opposite, where an acquaintance resided, he asked permission to remain over night.

The chamber occupied by him commanded a full view of the interior of the library, and from the window he could see his other self engaged in study and meditation; now walking up and down the room, immersed in thought; now sitting down at the desk to write; now rising to search for a volume among the bookshelves, and insinuating in all respects the peculiar habits of the great doctor, engaged at work and book with celestials. At length, when the cathedral clock had finished striking through first four and then eleven strokes, as German clocks are wont to do an hour before twelve, De Wette, somewhat tired, made signs of re-tiring to rest—took out his watch, the identical large gold one the other doctor in the other chamber felt sure was at that moment safe in his waistcoat pocket, laid it down, it up; removed a portion of his clothing, came to the window, closed the curtains, and in a few moments the light disappeared. De Wette, another one, waiting a little time till convinced that number two had disposed himself to sleep, retired also himself to bed, wondering very much what all this could mean.

Rising the next morning, he crossed the street and passed up stairs to his library. The door was fastened; he applied the key, opened it, and entered. No one was there; everything appeared in precisely the same condition in which he had left it the evening before—his pen lying on the paper as he had dropped it on point out, the candles on the table and mantlepiece evidently not having been lighted, the window-curtains drawn aside as he had left them; in fact, there was not a single trace of any person having been in the room. "Had he been insane the night before? He must have been. He was growing old; something was the matter with his eyes or brain. Anyhow, he had been deceived, and it was very foolish of him to have remained away all night."

Endeavoring to satisfy his mind with some such reflections as these, he remembered he had not yet examined his bed room. Almost ashamed to make the search, now convinced it was all an hallucination of the senses, he crossed the narrow passage-way and opened the door. He was thunderstruck. The ceiling, a massive brick arch, had fallen during the night, filling the room with rubbish and crushing his bed into atoms. De Wette, the apparition, had saved the life of the great German scholar.

Trebuck, who was walking with me in the fields near Halle when relating the anecdote, added, upon concluding: "I do not pretend to account for the phenomenon; no knowledge, scientific or metaphysical, in my possession, is adequate to explain it; he I have no more doubt it actually positively, literally did occur, than I have of the existence of the sun yon Himmel da."

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Coal, Coal.

I HAVE been engaged in the coal trade for the past twelve years. I have boated coal to this market for the retail city and steamboat trade, and have learned from experience the kind of coal that suits Memphis than the hereabouts been furnished to her people. The coal I now offer for sale is of the cheap proposal, as little I do not pretend to disguise the fact that I intend to make some money, it is not the one time deal. I mean a good, honorable one—to have on hand a large supply of Green river coal, which I will warrant to give satisfaction, and which cannot be paid on Pittsburg coal. The pieces are not so large, but as the coal is free from Pyrites, but clean gray coal as the mine is penetrated, and with such a quartz in one, by spring the lumps will be as large as the same taken from the Pittsburg and Green river coal mines. Let me then that from the breakers at the office, and I therefore put it low, and not believe it is not as valuable for all purposes. I have determined to endeavor to obtain all patron certificates as to the grades as made, and who sent it to Bowling Green, and I will show the certificates I want. I have large or a larger coal than Green river, and I will show, whom soever, or those who do, from no pay no coal to an old citizen of Memphis. All that I desire is a fair trial. I make no claim from the city where our credit is good, and I have no doubt of the success of my venture in a real bed. Keep your money at home and buy your coal, you will find it cheaper in the end. Office at Mine Office, on Jefferson, or at the foot of Poplar street.

THE TRUE AND GENUINE!

BAKER & Co's RESIDUAL TRANSPARENT COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED IN QUALITY AND EFFECTS EQUAL TO THE LONDON PRODUCT OF PERSEIRA.

BEING THE SWEETEST AND BEST PREPARED.

IT has, if fairly tried, well earned its fame as one of the digestive agents, invigorates the blood, gives great stability to the frame, and acts strongly in the material nervous system. Its value has been remarkably evidenced by its wonderful restorative powers, especially in cases of wasting away of the system. It affords nourishment to the body when no other can be borne, and furnishes the frame with fat in a fairly remarkable manner.

For CONSUMPTION and BRONCHITIS.

For SCROFULA in all its developments.

For WEAKNESS, WASTING, and every form of DEBILITY, its curative properties are conspicuous.

It may be taken without disrelish by the most delicate patient, and retained when other oils are rejected by the stomach. Its superiority in this and other essential characteristics of excellence, has gained for it the recommendation of the most eminent physicians throughout the States; the written testimony of the faculty of the best medical schools; the professors of the University of Pennsylvania,

Jefferson College of Philadelphia,
Philadelphia College of Medicine, and others.

Invalids should be careful to purchase Oil of undoubted reputation if they desire the most active and immediate advantages of the remedy. That which we prepare has decided evidences of superiority over other brands. Manufactured only by

A CURE FOR THE MILLION!

THE CELEBRATED

HIGHLAND BITTERS!

Or, SCOTCH TONIC,

Has no equal as a Stomach Medicine in the World!

THIS bitters can be sold in a very few words, but the wonderful cures made by this remedy cannot well require a volume of details. When the Crimean war was in progress, thousands of French and more especially British soldiers, fell victims to the chance of climate and miasmatic commingling. The surviving seeds of the disease, fastened on the system, and the miserable and dejected state of the troops. The press and the public were ringing with the praises of their fellows, whose friends at their countryseats were sleeping the long sleep of death, and their bones were bleaching on a distant shore. Among the surviving sufferers, were the six sergeants, and Sir George Ballingall, Professor of Military Surgery in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, was appointed by command request of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, to institute inquiries and report upon the cause of the fatality. He certain, of course, he (as principally confined to the Highland regiments, subject to the influence of this disease) Dr. Ballingall knew that the natives of the Scotch highlands had been, from time immemorial, in the habit of using certain herbs and roots, which grew in their hills and glens, which had the extraordinary effect of preventing as well as curing at a time the disease and contagion, which the medical men more or less liable to under certain circumstances, to be exposed to. Dr. Ballingall, very proud of Sir George's scientific composition in ward to the diseases consequent on a change of climate, and the miasmatic influence, which appears an inveterated section of society, which invariably leads to fevers of a malignant type, and a fatal or sufficiently most intensely annoyed with the great functions of the human system, such as the liver, the stomach, the bowels, etc. The medicine of this had time first tried in the Crimea, and its astonishing success alone, have placed it upon an enviable pinnacle, in defying the disease and inducing health, it has no parallel in the world. Thousands of testimonials, from all parts of the country, the composite it has been tried to millions of suffering Christian souls, and found to be the most efficacious specific: Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Heartburn, Acidity, Jaundice, Costiveness, Loss of appetite, Headache, Giddiness, Nervous Affections, Debility, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Tremor, Hypochondriasis, Fever and Ague, and other type of fevers.

In all sections of the country the finest testimonials can be obtained, and we do not hesitate to challenge any other medicine of the kind to produce such testimonials as we have in our possession, and we feel confident that we can satisfy any reasonable person that we have all the advantages of the medicine.

Scotch Bitters is a compound of the choicest herbs, roots, and barks, and is a most pleasant and agreeable tonic, and is recommended by all who have used it, and is recommended by all who have used it, and is recommended by all who have used it
