PRESIDENT DAVIS AND SOUTH CAROLINA—A REMINISCENCE.

In reviewing "Claiborne Life and Times of Quitman," in DeBow's Review, the writer says:

An episode may be here tolerated, in regard to the conduct of the celebrated Mississippi rifles, under charge of Colonel, now President Jefferson Davis, on the field of Buena Vista. The great movement the made by Davis, is said to have been without previous parallel in the art of war, and was regarded by the Duke of Wellington as rare and masterly. It was subsequently made, we learn, on the authority of Gen. Cushing, on the fields of the Crimea.

But to the extract from Claiborne, p 280:

"The battle had been raging sometime with fluctuating fortunes, and was setting against us, when Gen. Taylor, with Col. Davis and others, arrived on the field. Several regiments (which were subsequently rallied and fought bravely) were in full retreat; O'Brien, after having his men and horses completely cut up, had been compelled to draw off his guns, and Bragg, with almost superhuman energy, was sustaining the brunt of the fight. Many officers of distinction had fallen. Col. Davis rode forward to examine the position of the enemy, and concluding that the best way to arrest our fugitives would be to make a bold demonstration, he resolved at once to attack the enemy, there posted in force, immediately in front, supported by cavalry, and two divisions in reserve in his rear. It was a resolute bold almost to rashness, but the emergency was pressing. With a handful of Indiana volunteers, who still stood by their brave old colonel (Bowles) and his own regiment, he advanced in double quick time, firing as he advanced. His own brave fellows fell fast under the rolling musketry of the enemy, but their rapid and fatal volleys carried dismay and death into the adverse ranks. A deep ravine separated the combatants. Leaping into it the Mississippians soon appeared on the other side, and with a shout that was heard over the battle field, they poured in a well directed fire, and rushed upon the enemy. Their deadly aim and wild enthusiasm was irresistible. The Mexicans fled in confusion to their reserves, and Davis seized the commanding position they had occupied. He next fell upon a party of cavalry and compelled it to fly with the loss of their leader and other officers. Immediately afterward a brigade of lancers, 1,000 strong, were seen approaching at a gallop, in beautiful array, with sounding bugles and fluttering pennons. It was an appaling spectacle, but not a man flinched from his position. Too time he ween our devoted band and steady seemed brief indeed. But conscious that the eye of the army was upon them, that the honor of Mississippi was at stake, and knowing that, if they gave way, or were ridden down, our unprotected batteries in the rear, upon which the fortunes of the day depended, would be captured, each man resolved to die in his place sooner than retreat.

"Not the Spartan martyrs at Thermopylæ—not the sacred battalion of Epaminondas—not the the tenth legion of Julius Caesar—not the old guard of Napoleon—ever evinced more fortitude than these young volunteers in a crisis when death seemed inevitable. They stood like statues, as frigid and motionless as the marble itself. Impressed with this extraordinary firmness, when they had anticipated panic and flight, the lancers advanced as to deliberately, as though they saw for the first time the dark shadows of the fate that was impending over them. Col. Davis had thrown his men into the form of a re-entering angle (familiarly known as the famous V movement,) both flanks resting on ravines, the lancers coming down on the intervening ridge. This exposed them to a converging fire, and the moment they came within rifle range each man singled out his object, and the whole head of the column fell. A more deadly fire never was delivered, and the brilliant array recoiled and retreated, paralyzed and dismayed.

"Shortly afterward, the Mexicans having concentrated a large force on the right for their final attack, Col. Davis was ordered in that direction. His regiment had been in action all day, exhausted by thirst and fatigue, much reduced by the carnage of the morning engagement, and many in the ranks suffering from wounds, yet the noble fellows moved at double quick time. Bowles' little band of Indiana volunteers still acted with them. After marching several hundred yards they perceived the Mexican infantry advancing, in three lines, on Bragg's battery, which, though entirely unprotected, held his position with a resolution worthy of his fame. The pressure upon him stimulated the Mississippians. They increased their speed, and when the enemy were within one hundred yards of the battery, and confident of its capture, they took him in flank and reverse, and poured in a rolling and destructive fire. This broke his right line, and the rest soon gave way and fled back precipitately. Here Col. Davis was severely wounded."

After this lengthy extract in regard to the heroic conduct of Davis, we shall soon pass to the siege of Quitman at the gates of Mexico, but before doing so will be permitted a momentary notice of the behavior of the South Carolina regiment under the fire of a Mexican ere. Those who sneer at Carolina courage and virtue are, in general, too ignorant of history to be affected by the record. Butler left his sick bed, against medical advice, to lead the Palmettos. His horse was shot under him. He took another and was severely wounded. Dickinson now commanded, and taking the flag from Boggs, was himself shot down, also Boggs. Butler, resuming the command, was killed by the side of Dickinson, under the flag. Dickinson fell again, but now mortally wounded, and Glaiden, placing the flag in the hands of Lo-hard, led the charge. There was no wavering as death swept through the ranks. Shot and shell hailed upon them. The storm raged:

"In the whole history," says Claiborne, "there has never been a more striking example of indifference to death, the result of stern resolve. Such men lived for the honor of Carolina. Several companies were almost annihilated. Some had not men enough left to bury their dead, or bear their wounded to the ambulances. The uniforms of some of their officers were literally torn from their persons; the color-bearers were shot down, but the flag, bathed in their blood, was always raised as they fell, and borne to the front. Proudly it floated through the tempest of death until the victory had been won, and then, all torn and bloody-red, it drooped over the scene glorious dead! The regiment entered the battle with 273, rank and file, and when it was over it mustered 109! It had no mockery; its dead and wounded made up the deficiency. Cadmus of a noble State, sons of a sunny clime, branded by their country as traitors for defending the Constitution and their rights from usurpation and outrage, yet spite powerfully for that country in a foreign land—the world may learn that such a race, in defense of their own homesteads and institutions, can never be subdued."

SOUTHERN STAR Cotton Gin.

Manufactured by
MESSRS. TRUEHEART & NEELY,
GERMANTOWN, TENN.

WE have the honor to inform our friends, and the public generally, that since our destruction by fire we have rebuilt and are now at work with our old facilities, and are now ready to receive orders for our Gins, which we guarantee to be the best in use. Our Gins combine, in a compact form, all the requisite qualities of a first class Cotton Gin, and are in use in the surrounding counties years, and from their increased demand we have had to keep our hands from the anvil to work well. Orders solicited and promptly filled.

N. NEELY are our agents for the City of Memphis, and to them we refer, by permission, as to our business.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS.

The river was stationary yesterday or perhaps falling.....Business was very dull.....The weather was cloudy and cool for the season.....The arrivals and departures were from St. Louis for New Orleans, Morrison from New Orleans for St. Louis, Mississippi; New Orleans for Louisville, Fairchild. From Louisville the Commercial.....It has been stated that the Fairchild would not bring up the remaining portion of Baton Rouge intended for this city; her officers state that when they landed there the pieces were not ready for shipment, nor could they have been got ready in less than from 10 to 20 hours. The Fairchild had 143 statersoon, and nearly 300 deck passengers. The Kentucky left with 25 bales of cotton and four hogsheads of tobacco for Vicksburg.....The Golden State left for Louisville. She took up some horses that had been here for our interrupted races.....

The Commercial came in with the largest trip that has arrived here this season from Louisville. She has been presented by a lady in this city with a very neat Confederate States flag. She leaves for Louisville to-day, at 2 o'clock, (mind the hour,) with the popular Archer in command.....The Rose Douglas leaves for Arkansas river to-day, and the Admiral for White river.....The Cincinnati Commercial says there is no freight moving for points below Lagrolle, and up-river packets are not doing a paying business.....The St. Louis Republican complains of a very dull landing and says that nearly all the Illinois river packets have laid up, that a large number of St. Louis and New Orleans packets are doing nothing, and half the northern lines are lying quiet at the levee.

Medical.

THE TRUE AND GENUINE!

PREPARED IN QUALITY AND EFFECTS.

BAKER & Co's MEDICINAL TRANSPARENT COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED ACCORDING TO ART OF CHEMISTRY.

BEING THE SWEETEST AND BEST PREPARED.

THE use of fairly tried, will soon restore the tone of the digestive organs, invigorate the blood, give renewed rotundity to the figure, and add energy to the mind and nervous system. Its value has been remarkably evidenced by its wonderful restorative powers, when ordinary tonics had been entirely exhausted. It affords nourishment to the body when no other can be borne, and furnishes the frame with fat in a truly remarkable manner.

For CONSUMPTION and BRONCHITIS, for SCROFULA in all its developments, and for MALNUTRITION and WASTING, and every form of DEBILITY, it certainly possesses properties unknown.

It may be taken without distaste by the most delicate patient, and retained without effort in the most sensitive stomach. Its superiority in this and other important characteristics of excellence, has guaranteed for it the commendation of the most eminent physicians throughout the States; the written testimony of the faculty of the best medical schools; the professors of the University of Pennsylvania,

Jefferson College of Philadelphia,
Philadelphia College of Medicine, and others.

Invalids should be careful to purchase Oil of undoubted reputation if they desire the most active and immediate attainment of the remedy. That which we prepare has decided evidences of superiority over other brands. Manufactured only by

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

AT a meeting of the Stockholders of the Southern Pacific Railroad company, held in the city of Memphis on the 21st of March, 1861, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That each stockholder of the company is advised to subscribe for and purchase one share of the unsold capital of the company, for each five shares now held by such stockholders, at the price of five dollars per share, and pay one-fifth the purchase money in cash, and the remainder in two, four and six months from this date, and that R. V. Richardson, agent, appointed by the Stockholders at Louisville, Ky., receive such subscriptions on behalf of the company.

R. V. RICHARDSON, Chairman.

In pursuance of the above resolution, I shall be at the office of Messrs. J. Fowlkes & Co., Memphis, or stockholders can call at I. B. Kittlard's Banking House and pay as per the above resolution. Necessity has dictated the policy of protecting all who pay, and calling of all who fail, refuse or neglect to bear his due proportion of what is essential to a common interest. The money is strictly limit, and will be certainly enforced. All who do so promptly, do so promptly.
