Fremont's Exodus from Missouri.

The Springfield (Mo.) correspondent of the New York Times gives an amusing account of the state of affairs at Springfield immediately preceding and following the removal of Fremont. We extract the following:

THE REMOVAL.

Late on Saturday night, one of three messengers sent forward by Col. Leonard Sweet, from St. Louis, succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the guards stationed to prevent access to Fremont's headquarters, and served on the general personally the order from Washington.

Upon this there was, of course, unutterable consternation and commotion in and around headquarters, and it appeared doubtful for several hours what course General Fremont would pursue. Many of his leading personal adherents, chiefly of the Pentonic stripe, were in favor of disregarding the removal, and refusing to recognize Gen. Hunter's appointment—a course which, if they had persisted in, (and it was not abandoned till late last evening,) would have caused a very considerable row, for Gen. Hunter is not the sort of man it would be safe to trifle with.

In the end, however, wiser counsels prevailed. Gens. Sigel and Asboth both refusing to countenance or be concerned in the mutiny; and Gen. Evemann, it must be said, either not knowing anything of the contemplated movements, or opposing them, as in duty bound, with all his force. On this point, however, we are in the dark. Certain only it is that a counsel, now known as "Counsel of Insubordination," was held last evening only a few hours before Gen. Hunter's arrival; that regular invitations to it had been issued, and that the affair looked very threatening until suppressed by the emphatic course of Gen. Sigel.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. HUNTER.

At or about 9 o'clock last evening, General Hunter arrived in town, and soon after called at Gen. Fremont's late headquarters, where a council of the more prominent generals had been assembled to meet him. The interview lasted about an hour, and the only thing known concerning its results may be summed up in the fact that Gen. H. returned to his quarters, accompanied by Gen. Pope—both laughing very heartily at something which your correspondent does not even venture to surmise. Certain it is only, that the excited and feverish sentiment of Springfield instantly subsided.

THE BODY GUARD—THE RUNNING-OFF PAYMASTER.

Meantime, at an early hour this morning, General Fremont took his leave, his Indian "body guard" riding first, followed by his white "body guard," and the rear being brought up by another Indian "body guard," with a train of uncounted wagons and teams—all being necessary, I suppose, to transport our late commander's baggage, and that of his little son, who rode with a special train of aids-de-camp just behind his father. The trouble is, however, that Gen. Fremont carried away with him deputy paymaster Phinney, with the military chest, containing $300,000, so far as known, thus leaving the army absolutely destitute of pay, with the exception of those favored "body guard people," and the uncommissioned and illegally appointed staff officers, who were all paid off in full immediately after Fremont had received notification of his removal.

THE EXIT OF "BOOKS."

It is said that he carried off with him all his order and special order books, report books, adjutant's returns, and papers of every kind, carrying all his staff away with him, and not leaving a solitary scrap of paper to state what stores could or should be found in the Substistence or quartermaster's department, the strength of the command, the position of the forces, or the date upon which the recent causeless panic was started. But despite all this chaos into which Gen. Hunter was pitched headforemost, the place is a changed town and a charged post to-day.

Georgia Arms.

Wright's Legion, commanded by Hon. A. R. Wright, the Representative from the 10th Georgia congressional district, arrived here a few evening's since, and is encamped in the vicinity. It numbers about a thousand men all from the upper portion of the State. It is a fine body of men, and their arms, in some respects, different from those of any other command in the service. Some three companies, or perhaps more, are armed with pikes, a most formidable weapon for close quarters, and of Georgia invention. Long blades of steel are inserted in a handle of wood some six feet in length, and are suddenly thrown out by pressure on a trigger or spring at the opposite end. The blades or pikes are about two inches in width and fifteen inches long.

The field pieces of the Legion are also worthy of note. They consist of four beautiful rifled six pounders, three rifled twelve pounders, breech loading with double chambers, and a rifled gun, mounted on wheels, with percussion attachments and capable of throwing a ball with accuracy some four miles. These pieces are, all of Atlanta manufacture, and, except the first mentioned, the invention of Mr. W. Rushton, of the Georgia railroad workshops. The design and workmanship are both admirable, and we expect great exention from them when brought into action under the control of the gallant men of the Legion.—Savannah Republican, 20.

THE KENTUCKY AND VIRGINIA BORDER.—Information has reached us, under circumstances apparently entitling it to credit, although without any official confirmation of it having yet been received, that the Federals in Kentucky had taken possession of Pound Gap and were proceeding in the direction of Abingdon, Virginia. The force of the enemy on this portion of the Kentucky border is estimated at 5,000 men. It is reported that Col. Williams' command, not being provided with artillery, has not attempted the defense of Pound Gap. We also learn that the government has ordered several regiments up to Abingdon, and that the amplest provisions are ready for the reception of the enemy, should they advance any considerable distance this side of the mountains.—Richmond Examiner.

MAKING POTASH.—The Franklin (La.) Planter's Banner says:

A very practicable and successful planter informed us a few days since, that he intends to try his bagasse ashes and those from his furnace, to see if he can make potash to some extent as a new source of profit in these war times. Planters have abundant facilities for leaching their ashes, boiling the ley, and there are ashes enough around the sugar houses in this State to make sufficient potash to supply the whole South. At the sugar houses in this State there are yearly consumed more than a million cords of wood, and incredible qualities of bagasse.

☞ Miss Joey Gotzenheim, who is a regular church-goer, has had a quarrel with the manager of the Metropolitan theater, San Francisco, in consequence of her refusal to play Sunday nights.

☞ The editor of the Sugar Planter declines to drill in the militia owing to a doubt about his age. He says he doesn't know whether he is under eighteen or over forty-five.

Call for the Militia—Governor Harris' Proclamation.

EXECUTIVE HEADQUARTERS,
NASHVILLE, TENN., November 19, 1861.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 12.

To the Officers in command of the Militia of the State of Tennessee in the 1d, 3d and 4th Divisions:

The danger of invasion upon the part of the Federal forces is imminent. This invasion threatens the quiet and security of your homes, and involves the destruction of your sacred rights of person and property. The warning example of Maryland, Missouri and Kentucky, bids you, if you would preserve your firesides, your homes and the sanctity of your wives and daughters, to meet the despotic invader and his minions at the threshold of your State, and drive him back. Let the soil of Tennessee be preserved from his unhallowed touch, and let him know that in defense of our liberties and our altars every Tennesseean is ready to yield up his life. Gen. A. S. Johnston, commanding the forces of the Confederate States in this department, in view of this threatened danger has called upon me to send to the field, such force as can be armed by the State.

In obedience to which requisition, and to repel the invader, thirty thousand of the militia of this State are hereby called to the field.

Officers in command of the militia of the 2d, 3d and 4th divisions will hold their commands in readiness to receive marching orders by the 25th inst., unless in the meantime a sufficient number of volunteers shall have tendered their services to fill this requisition.

Special orders to the commanders of the militia apportioning the quota of each will immediately follow.—Georgia Telegraph.

AN INCIDENT.—At Milledgeville, such was the instant, just after that thrilling scene, in which the whole assembly knelt while the speaker led in prayer and thanking God for the victories we have achieved over our enemies, and for a section of divine favor to the end of the struggle in which we are now engaged, the House adjourned. As the members passed out, one of the many negroes who crowded the doors, peddling "goobers" remarked with a knowing expression on his sable face, "Dis land gwine to sure enough war, for dem politicians dey won't buy no more goobers dis day. Dey prays like camp-meeting folks! It was bigger."—Southern Confederacy.
