STRIKE ON WESTERN UNION HURTS BUSINESS
 Crippled Condition of the Western Union in Texas "Bulls Up" Business.
 Houston, Texas, March 7.—As a result of the strike which was inaugurated on November 13, the Western Union office here continues in a badly crippled condition. The company is hiring whoever they can get and paying the top salary, regardless of ability. It is a source of gratification to the craft generally that the men and women of the Western Union have been able to secure thus far in the majority of cases of the very poorest talent, and the men of the very worst character—literally the scum of the profession—such as Melvin Printz, "Big Ed" Lee and others, when a decent man would not care to associate with. The office here is run by working the scabs in some instances, in 18-hour shifts.
 From reports received from inside the Western Union office and from customers, it is learned that the service is the very worst that can be imagined, surpassing in general rottenness that for which the Western Union was noted in the days before the Postal entered the field.
 How They Are Delayed.
 The "reorganizing" delivery is doing its part in assisting the operating department to evade first-class service. A gentleman called at the Postal office a few days ago and severely criticized its delivery department for a delay of forty minutes to a message addressed to a place some distance from the business center. Thirty minutes later he returned and apologized profusely, stating that he had just called at the Western Union and received a telegram twenty-four hours old.
 A receiving teller in a prominent bank here told the writer a couple of days ago that the Western Union had delivered him a telegram the evening previous from his father stating that the latter was en route to New Orleans and would pass through Houston at 6 a. m., asking his son to meet the train. Accordingly, next morning at 6 o'clock the young man was at the depot awaiting the arrival of the Southern Pacific train from the West. When the train rolled in his father was nowhere to be found. This struck him as rather singular and he took the telegram out of his pocket and looked at it again, this time noting the date.
 IT WAS THREE DAYS OLD.
 JOHN D. ROCKER, JR., SHOCKED.
 John D. Rocker, Jr., received a shock recently at the meeting of his Bible class. The New York World says that Mr. Rockefeller invited a discussion on why young men do not go to church more. The last of the story is told by the World in this way: "A young man named Smythe, who has been a member of the class for several months was immediately on his feet. Addressing Mr. Rockefeller, he said: 'I want to warn you in advance, Mr. Rockefeller, that I am an outspoken man, and may say things that offend some people here. The church has not outgrown its usefulness, and the reason why young men do not go to church is because the churches of this city are too fashionable, and the young man is expected to pay a certain sum each Sunday, and if the young man is poorly dressed he feels that he is looked down upon. If the church were run on the old time idea of one person being as good as another in God's house, you would get the young men. We all have some pride, and if a man is forced to wear a seedy suit of clothes, he knows that his better-dressed brother would not sit on the bench beside him in Sunday school or church. This is one solid reason. A hard working man who has little money cannot stand being preached to on an empty stomach. If you fill his stomach before you preach to him, he'll be more likely to listen to you and will come again. It is all very well to tell about the glory of the future life, but if you help him to get comfort and happiness in this world he'll appreciate it more than your promising happiness in the world to come.'"

PHONE GIRLS GAIN BY TRADES UNION REPORTS
 Rena Stern of Chicago Guides 3,500 Women in Central Offices to Betterment.
 She Tells What Has Been Done for Hello-Girls, With Result of Better Things.
 Minneapolis, March 15.—Social betterment work among employed women results so quickly in increased efficiency and higher wages that it would be profitable to them, even though they defrayed its entire expense themselves. This is the statement made yesterday by Miss Rena B. Stern, until recently library superintendent for the 3,500 girl operators of the Chicago Telephone Company. Miss Stern has been spending a few days in Minneapolis with friends and has spent much time looking over the Associated Charities and similar organizations. Friday afternoon she spoke at the state university.
 When the movement to increase employees' comfort began among the Chicago Telephone Exchange put in rest rooms and magazines and made arrangements with the public library for a daily supply of books, the girls made their own selections from the catalog.
 "Men," said Mrs. Stern, "after a day's work still have strength to study. They want to read some technical work which will advance them in their work. But girls are so exhausted, so weary, that they seek only recreation. They did not know how to select from the catalog and the result was they chose simply peculiar titles 'to see what they would draw.'
 This was the field into which Miss Stern was called, primarily to aid the girls in the selection of books, but also to give them help in any way possible. Miss Stern is a librarian and has done much work in organizing libraries and this, with her long interest and personal work in social settlements, qualified her for the position.
 What the Girls Read.
 "I found a disposition among the girls," she said, "to distrust my opinion and advice, while they were glad to use the printed lists which I wrote. They would often come to me asking for a historical novel and sometimes I would say, 'Is it a historical novel you really want, or a good love story?' They really require something intensely stimulating after their day's work. Their recreation, whatever it is, must make them forget their work."
 Owing to the fact that there are sixteen exchanges in Chicago, it is impossible to arrange any classes. This has led them, Miss Stern said, to making a list of the industrial and gymnastic classes in the settlements and similar plans of each neighborhood, thus urging the girls to patronize established institutions.
 For the pleasure of the girls, gardens are made in the summer where they may plant their own seeds and raise their own flowers. In the stations away from the heart of the city, permanent libraries are being established. Whatever sum the employees raise to help the company duplicate. "When girls read books," said Miss Stern tersely, "they'll stuff them but they buy only the best will do." Miss Stern is now trying to have tables like billiard tables put in so that the girls may get some exercise at recess or lunch hours.
 Love for the Beautiful.
 To inculcate a love for the beautiful, the girls were urged to go to the Art Institute. Interest flagged, but as soon as printed tickets were put into their hands matters were changed.
 To teach the girls neatness only dollies are used on the luncheon tables so that after each set of girls the tables may be entirely cleaned. "When the girls begin to wear the clothes they earned to make," Miss Stern went on, "long mirrors were bought for each station and the improvement in their appearance was almost immediate. They're talking about getting them for the men, too," she added. The hello-girl, Miss Stern says is a most attractive type and she rarely averages more than three years at the business; 18 and 23 are the extreme ages.
 Miss Stern believes that the effect of these improvements tends to increase rather than diminish wages. In her experience she has seen wages raised three times in two years. Even if the price were to come from the wage and not from the profit, she would not be a cent per cent difference, she asserts. The laborer is made more competent, the labor market is more closely watched and the employees have an opportunity to get the highest pay.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORKINGMAN
 A good deal is said from time to time about the apparent failure of the church to meet the problems of modern life. Seldom, however, does a church champion come out with a criticism so strong as that made recently by the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Fagnani of the Union Theological Seminary. To a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, he said:
 The man who works because he likes to will not form a union to help him cut down the hours of his labor. Men of the other class will form such unions. The majority of men who work are those who have to work. What is the message of the Church to these men?
 The Church believes in confession. So she tells the laborer to confess his sins to her. It is a poor rule which does not work both ways. The Church might go to confession herself and confess her sins to the laboring man. The Church has been too prone to place emphasis on the interests of the other world and to neglect the interests of this world.
 The laborer is necessarily engrossed with the affairs of this world. Now the Church is realizing she has neglected too much the worldly side. It is learning to leave heaven and hell to take care of themselves and to look after the things in this life that are sending men to hell.
 God is the God of progress, and the Church has told labor to be content with wages when she should have urged labor to demand higher wages. In that she misinterpreted God, she has not been Christian enough in her insistence upon brotherliness—that the welfare of each is the concern of all. The earth is rich enough to gratify the desires of all. It is nothing but the lack of brotherliness that heaps up the wealth of a few while the many are impoverished. When the Church and labor join hands the kingdom of God will come.
 Dr. Fagnani's argument might be extended to include the necessity of a more idealistic ethical principle in the mind of labor. The idea of the labor advocate does find high expression in the voices of some leaders. For example, F. A. Foster, who spoke after Dr. Fagnani had finished, said:
 Labor realizes that it must satisfy the public conscience that its cause is that of equity and justice. With the co-operation of the laborer, the farmer and the citizen the Republic is safe, no matter what danger threatens. Labor unions are as important an ethical factor in the community as the Church, and the unions and the Church should work together. In the labor union is the opportunity for the working out of the ideas of fraternity—the teachings of God.
