MEMPHIS APPEAL.

THE TWO BRIDES.

I saw two maids at the kirk,
And both were fair and fair;
One was in her bridal robe,
One in her winding sheet.

The choisters sang the hymn,
The sacred rites were read;
And one for life to life,
And one to death was wed!

They went to their bridal beds
In lovelness and bloom;
One in a merry castle,
One in a silent tomb.

One to the world of sleep,
One in the arms of love;
And one in the arms of Death,
Passed to the Heaven above.

One to the morrow woke
In a world of sin and pain;
But the other was happier far,
And never woke again!

LEONARD F. SUMMERS.

The Mobile Advertiser, in a notice of deaths in battle among citizens of this place, speaks thus eloquently and truly of a gentleman who was an honor to Kentucky, his native State:

Leonard F. Summers comes next in the record of honor. He was a striking contrast to Armistead, both in mind and person. A Kentuckian by birth, he had the fine figure, the imposing presence, the careless freedom of manner, the ease and boldness of bearing, with something of the forest roughness, traditionally attributed to the land of his birth. His manner of viewing a subject was superficial to a popular. He was not profound, although he was practical, energetic and ambitious.

He was frank, honest, brave, generous, kind hearted, forgiving and sincere. He had his faults, but no one was more ready to acknowledge them, and if he ever did a wrong he was always prompt in acknowledging and atoning for it. There was no sham or hypocrisy about him. He was impulsive and often in error, but he was a true man—true to his friends, true to his word, true to his country, true to his convictions.

He was one of the most earnest and devoted members of the Franklin Society. He entered the service early in the war, became a Captain in the Eighth Alabama Regiment, and was killed at the battle of Seven Pines. His age was probably thirty-five or forty. No more gallant spirit than that of Summers was ever offered on the altar of his country.

THE VAULTS OF THE BANK OF FRANCE.—The walls of these vaults are of stupendous thickness. On descending the steps leading to their entrance, the first obstacle we find is an iron door, locked with three keys, one of which is in the hands of the governor of the bank; the second is kept by the cashier, and the third by the censor; so that this door cannot be opened without the simultaneous consent of these three functionaries. We thus gain access to a first compartment, containing the funds for current use. The safe kept here is so curiously constructed, that if you do not know the secret of its construction, the slightest touch anywhere will set a noisy alarm agoing, loud enough to startle all the inmates of the establishment. The next compartment is circular, and called the serre; it cannot be entered without the same ceremonial, and is fitted up with fireproof shelves. It contains all the important deeds, notes and papers belonging to the bank, also deposits of private persons. Here the Duke of Brunswick used to leave his jewels, previous to going on a journey. Mademoiselle Mars used to send her diamonds there; the lingot d'or was deposited in the same place, etc. After the serre come the vaults properly so called, the entrance to which is closed by an iron door, secured by several combination locks; it turns on central pivots, like Italian doors. It gives access to a well hole, containing a winding staiwase, admitting but one person at a time, and leading to subterranean galleries four hundred and twenty metres in length. These are filled with iron casks containing ingots and coin, all labeled according to their contents.

By way of additional security, the well hole might be filled up with clay, and the vaults with water, at a minute's notice, if the safety of the treasure were menaced in the slightest degree.

SHARP PRACTICE—TRICKS OF SWINDLERS.—That class of people, unfortunately for the safety of all portable property a very large one, whose avocation is to appropriate the worldly wealth of others, and subsist on the fears, the credulity, the benevolence or the ignorance of their less sophisticated fellow citizens, often display a skill and fineness in the execution of their schemes which, if expended upon some useful and honorable pursuit, may be justly regarded as the certain forerunners of success. Strange developments of "deeplaid plots," all conceit for the purpose of obtaining money in some form or other, are from time to time brought to light, but the following is the latest which has come to our knowledge: On Wednesday an apparently very respectable individual entered the store of a jeweler in Maiden lane, stating that he wished to purchase some watches, depositing at the same time a bill for one thousand dollars on the desk. The watches were purchased, the money pronounced "good" by the storekeeper, who turned round to the safe for the purpose of procuring the change. At this moment an irate individual rushes into the store, presents a loaded pistol to the head of the purchaser of the watches exclaiming, "You scoundrel, you have stolen my money!" Turning to the shopman, "That money is mine," at the same time reaching out his hand and taking the thousand dollars. The storekeeper remarked, "I should not be at all surprised, he has been stealing some of my watches too." The gentleman who pretended that he had been robbed hurries the alledged thief to a carriage door, starting, as he stated, for the Tombs, with the "money" safe in the possession of the other. Of course it is needless to say that the two gentlemen have not yet been heard of at the Tombs, much to the chagrin of the Maidenlane jeweler.—New York Tribune.

A TOUCHING APPEAL.—A number of freedmen in Selma have published an appeal to their former masters, concluding in the following earnest and respectful terms:

Dear Friends and Former Masters: We know there is a large number of widows and crippled men, who are well educated, and have no employment by which to make a living. These persons we would be pleased to see taking an interest in teaching our children and training them up in the way they should go. We are greatly in want of schools, and to persons who will establish them we will guaranty our undivided support. Our own people are the proper ones to teach us, and we are sincerely wish them to do it. And why should they refuse? They raised and taught us all we know, as carpenters, blacksmiths, stone and brick masons, etc., including working on the farm, driving, etc., and were not ashamed or backward in performing this service. And why should it be considered a disgrace to make a living at this business in the South? We make our living out of the people, and, therefore, we think it our duty to spend our money with those who sustained and took care of us.

The United States Government and your State Convention gave us our freedom, and we prefer you to any other to have the money derived from our daily labor for teaching our children. If you all stand back, strangers will come and take the money from under your hands and use it away to build up their own country. They are not ashamed to make money from any class of men.

☞ The following is related on Senator Wilson's authority:

"A gentleman of New York, in the true spirit of philanthropy, established a soldiers' claim agency in that city for the collection of arrears of bounty and pay, free of charge, to either the soldier or the Government, but at a cost to himself of many thousand dollars. He soon found, however, that it was absolutely impossible to get a single claim through the Departments, and on further investigation discovered the cause of this to be that lawyers and claim agents who had contributed fifty per cent or more of the claims for collection, had, out of their large fees, been able to subsidize clerks in the Departments, so as to delay action upon all papers coming from the gratuitous collection office in New York, and to thrust aside everything for the prompt disposition of which they were not specially paid."

CHINESE TESTIMONY.—It is said that the Chinese, when brought into court as witnesses in California, are sworn in the manner peculiar to their country. An oath, written in Chinese characters upon tissue paper, is subscribed with their names and burned to ashes. The purport of the oath is, that if the witness does not tell the truth, he hopes that his soul may be burned and destroyed as is the paper which he holds in his hands. Notwithstanding the severity of this oath, the evidence of the Chinese taken in court is not generally of a very reliable character, and the Recorder is often obliged to discharge prisoners against whom there is nothing but Chinese evidence, on account of the contradictions and discrepancies which are always discovered in their testimony.

CONSCIENTIOUS.—In a town in Connecticut resides a man who made a fortune in the milk business, by not giving the full measure; as he grew rich he thought he would change his occupation to something more respectable, and accordingly bought a grist mill. In conversation with his wife he said he did not feel right about the charging he had practiced in the milk business, and wished a way could be devised whereby he could repay in the grist mill what he had cheated in the other. At last they settled on the following plan, which was to have the measures with which they took toll as much too large as the milk measures were too small.
