RESOLUTIONS

Passed at the Great Mass Meeting at Washington City, called to endorse the President's Policy, February 22d, 1866.

Resolved, That on this anniversary of the birthday of him who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen," it becomes an appropriate act of gratitude to hold communion with the spirit by which he was ever animated, to show fresh respect for the Illustrious dead by attempting to carry out the principles and to guidance by his advice and counsels; and to place in strong relief, including the challenging the attention of a short-sighted and misguided generation, the wholesome lessons of American patriotism through all coming time.

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States was the outgrowth and crowning glory of that great struggle for human liberty, which culminated in the Revolution, and to be guided by its wise provisions and to be guided by its wise counsels; and that any and every departure from it, including the challenging the attention of a short-sighted and misguided generation, the wholesome lessons of American patriotism through all coming time.

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States was the outgrowth and crowning glory of that great struggle for human liberty,
