ST. PATRICK.

Sermon Delivered by Rev. J. A. Rotchford, at St Peter's Church, on the 17th of March, 1866, Before the Hibernian Mutual Relief Society.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MEMPHIS, March 17th, 1866.

Rev J. A. Rotchford—Rev. and Dear Sir:

At a meeting of the Hibernian Mutual Relief Society, held this day, it was

Resolved, That the thanks of the H. M. R. Society, are respectfully due, and are hereby tendered, to the Rev. Father Rotchford, for the able, lucid, and patriotic address delivered by him this day; and that a committee of five be appointed to wait upon him and request a copy of said address for publication.

In pursuance of the above action, the undersigned on behalf of the H. M. R. Society, and of themselves, would state that all were delighted and edified; the glorious memories of the martyred dead were resuscitate; the eloquence entranced, whilst the illustrious deeds of Ireland's saintly heroes edified all who had the pleasure of hearing you. But, Reverend Sir, as many of the congregation and others who desired to hear you, had not an opportunity, and as such a gem is deserving of examination and ought to be preserved; we therefore, pray that you would be pleased to furnish a copy of your panegyric for publication.

Hoping a favorable response, we are, Reverend Sir, with sentiments of respect and esteem, yours most respectfully,

SAMUEL BOLTON,
M. MAGEVENEY, Sr.,
THOS. CONWAY,
J. FEALY,
JOHN THIRE,
} Committee.

Messrs. Samuel Tighe, M. Mageveny, Sr., and others:

Gentlemen: Your note, asking a copy of the panegyric delivered on the 17th inst., in St. Peter's Church, has been received.

Though I do not perceive any good its publication may effect, and though it was not intended for the perusal of the public, yet I will not refuse your flattering request.

Herewith I send you a copy, and thanking you for your kind appreciation,

I remain, gentlemen, respectfully yours,

J. A. ROTCHFORD, C. M.

St. Peter's Church, Memphis, March 21, 1866.

SERMON.

The memory of him shall not pass away, and his name shall be in request from generation to generation.

Nations shall declare his wisdom and the church shall show forth his praise.—Ecclesiasticus xxxix, 13, 14.

This is a day of exultation throughout the entire world. This is the anniversary of a renowned apostle of God. This is an occasion when it is meet to assemble before the altar and pour forth the prayer of gratitude to the Infinite Being for His beneficence to man.

To-day the pulse of the Celtic hearts throbs with peculiar feelings of religious delight, and the enthusiastic commotion is experienced in every clime from the rising to the setting sun.

Here in our own native land a million tongues proclaim the grandeur of the feast, and the names of Ireland and Ireland's apostle resound from bluff to bluff, from city to city, along that immense valley drained by the Mississippi, bringing joy and consolation to the Catholic heart; there in those vast metropolises of the East the green flag of Erin waves in harmonious unison with the head of procession vociferous with demonstrations of delight, whilst religion adds her golden inspiration; there, too, in patriotic France is seen the same almost martyred million of a nation's glory thundering beside the banner of the Empire, whilst the martial troops of Napoleon, headed by McMahon, march firmly and gladly to some Celtic air; there, too, on the classic shores of the Tiber, in that beautiful land of the poet and painter, where worth and genius and virture are yet encouraged, this day is not forgotten, and Italian love and Irish wit continue to give zest to the occasion; there, too, in that nation of historic humiliation, where sorrow has lent its bitterness, and tyranny its sting—here where liberty and ignorance have been encouraged by base legislation, but where virtue is practiced and the God of the universe adored—yes, in Ireland, still sorrowing, still hoping, five millions of his noble hearts as ever coursed with the purple flow of life, offer on this anniversary their prayers to their God for His generous and His afflicting dispensations.

But what is greater than the acclamations of men and the pomp of the world is, that on each altar erected for the continual commemoration of the sacrifice on the cross, is honored, adored, and invocated, its mysteries enacted, the name of the glorious apostle of Ireland.

Similar feelings have assembled us here on this glorious occasion, and similar considerations prompt us to add our mite to the homage due this chosen servant of God.

The Church is divinely marked by her selecting the ennobling emotions of the hearts and attaching them to those who were above the sordid interests or ambition of life, thus fulfilling the injunction of St. Paul, of "rendering honor to whom honor is due," and calling upon her children to imitate the examples of those whose riches were their virtues, and whose actions are recorded on the pillars of Heaven.

The heroes of this world are adulated and admired; why not eulogize the heroes of the Church?

That one builds his reputation on the mangled bones of his many victims—the other wins his renown by Christian charity. That one erects his monuments on the smoking debris of a nation's shattered liberty—the other is enthroned in the virtuous hearts of the children of God.

No worldly mausoleum heralds the latter's name to future generations, but the archives of the Church preserve his undying deeds, and his monument of precious gems is erected on the "eternal hills of Heaven."

Such was the character of him whom I eulogize on this occasion, and whose rare virtues are engrafted on a nation's gratitude and a world's admiring gaze.

It would be impossible for me to enumerate all the virtues of this illustrious saint without an unnecessarily prolonged detention, and hence, we will not discourse on the prominent features of his life, and portray the great deeds of his apostolate, and the immortal consequences thereof.

The most authentic records announce his early life in France, of which, however, but little is known, except that at the age of sixteen he was carried away by pirates, then lufesting the seas, to that island which subsequently became the scene of his extraordinary zeal. He who was afterwards to disenthrall the inhabitants of this country from the shackles of Paganism was, by a wonderful dispensation, reduced to slavery himself. Here for six long years, he guarded the flocks on the hills of Antrim—studied the language of the natives—and disseminated the first seeds of the Christian faith. Separated from his native land and the associations of friends, he schooled himself to the practice of humility and prayer; and now it was, we fancy, that the first aspirations for the conversion of Ireland were established in his heart, and the solid fabric of his zeal received its foundation.

But God, whose interposition seems ever influencing the career of our Saints, afforded him an occasion of escaping to his native home, thus adding another link to the golden chain of charity, which was ever afterwards to bind him to the dearest interests of the Emerald Isle. Not unwillingly he obeyed this impulse of Grace, which gave him the opportunity of preparing himself for a sublime, though arduous vocation. His was not the mind that thought of the vanity and applause of the world—his was not the soul that longed for the ambition of life, but one which coveted the salvation of the souls of his fellow men and the recompense of the just.

His vocation was not unregarded. The natural ties that bind the society were shattered. His patrimony and friendship were sacrificed in order that he might become the instrument in the hands of God for the election of the Irish people to the faith of Christ. Finally, about the year 432, he received from Pope Celestine the apostolic commission. He was consecrated Bishop, and then commenced with unprecedented zeal, and the conversion of that people who had slumbered for unknown ages in Pagan darkness. Nonwonted display attended the church, by the hope of your martyred ancestors, to dash into pieces that intoxicating cup which heretofore has brought ruin on your families and disgrace on your native land. In a word, let me conjure you by your aspirations for Heaven, to enrol yourselves once more under the banner of the Cross, by a good confession, and follow it without straggling, through the pilgrimage in life, and thus reflecting honor on the place of your nativity, and giving proper praise to him whom we commemorate on this auspicious day. Every spot of your country is hallowed by religious reminiscences, and her patron Saint holds a conspicuous position in her canonized history. His was the imperishable honor of winning that nation to God; and its faith and education are under Heaven, undoubtedly attributable to him. His virtues shone as stars amidst the corruptions of the times, and his heroic example have emblazoned him forever in the memory of his children. He was an apostolate elected by God to produce happiness to the human race, and, hundreds of years hence, when we sleep with the ashes of our fathers, and when human glory crumbles to dust, his name will yet be revered and his faith will enlighten generations yet unborn.

His life was one of utility to his fellow man, and fragrant with the flowers of virtue. The approaching consummation of his earthly career was to him an object of composure and resignation; and he might have well exclaimed with holy Simeon: "Now, O Lord, dismiss Thy servant according to Thy words in peace." Celestial angels hovered around his dying couch at Armagh, beckoning him with golden wands through the dark portals of death into the splendors of the mansion of God—and he, having cast the expiring glance on the land flourishing in harmony and peace, and having imparted to his spiritual children his benediction—bows his gray head to the storms of a hundred and twenty years, and sleeps placidly in the Lord.

Thus lived and died St. Patrick, the pride of Ireland, the glory of the church and the admiration of the human race.

SOCIAL LIFE OF THE CHINESE.

MANNER OF BETROTHAL.

Betrothal, in China, is a matter with which the parties most deeply concerned have generally little to do. Their parents or guardians manage their betrothal much in the following manner:

A person is employed as a go-between, or match-maker between the families. The proverb says: "Without a go-between, a betrothal cannot be effected." This person may be either a man or a woman. Usually the go-between engaged by the family which first makes the proposal, is employed by both families in subsequent negotiations.

The negotiation is generally commenced by the family to which the boy or young man belongs. The go-between is furnished with a card, stating the ancestral name, and the eight characters which denote the hour, day, month and year of birth of the candidate for matrimony. This card he takes to the family indicated, and tenders a proposal of marriage in regard to a daughter in behalf of a son at the party employing him. If the parents or guardians of the girl, after instituting inquiries about the family making it, are willing to entertain the proposal, they consult a fortune-teller, who decides, after considering the eight characters which indicate the time of the birth of the parties, whether the betrothal would be fitting and auspicious. If a favorable decision is made, the go-between is furnished with a card indicating the hour, day, month and year when the girl they are willing to betroth was born, which he delivers to the family who employed him. The parents of the lad then consult a fortune-teller in regard to the proposed betrothment, furnishing him with the characters which indicate the time of the boy and the girl. If this fortune-teller pronounces favorably, and the two families agree in regard to the details of the marriage, a formal assent is made to the betrothment.

BRIDAL OUTFIT.

Some two or three days before the time fixed for the wedding, a red card is sent by the family of the bride to the other party, stating what furniture will be furnished as the bride's dowry, and the number of chairs. The person who takes this card—usually the go between—informs the family of the groom what time these things may be expected.

At the time indicated on the card, the dowry of the bride is carried in procession through the streets, with as much parade and show as the amount of the furniture will possibly admit. Not unfrequently, much the pains are near neighbors, the procession of porters or bearers, instead of taking the shortest route from the residence of the bride to the residence of the groom, will take circuitous route through the principal streets for the purpose of exhibiting the furniture. In the case of the rich, often a large amount of superior household furniture, as wardrobes, chairs, tables, and every article of quite, the exterior of which is silk or satin, and various less showy, yet expensive, articles, is thus carried in procession through the streets. The number of persons employed in transporting these things sometimes amounts to one hundred, or even more. Those who can afford the expense have some one allowed to dress in a red or gaudy skirt, as though they were married and their husbands living. Hence the expression, "marrying the wearer of a red silk skirt," applied to a man who marries a widow. Poor families sometimes arrange to marry one of their sons to a widow, when they feel themselves unable to procure a girl of good character, on account of the necessary expenses incurred in such a case. The expense attendant on marrying a widow is comparatively small. It is considered a disgrace to a family for one of its sons to marry a widow, and only some intelligent, interesting and handsome she may be, as well as a disgraceful or shameful step on the part of the widow to consent to marry again. No rich and fashionable family ever marries such a widow. A widow is not allowed to ride in a red bridal chair en route from her residence to the residence of her intended husband. She must employ a common black covered chair, borne by two men. Many families, which have a widow connected with them, are exceedingly unwilling that she should marry again, on account of the dishonor which such a procedure would bring upon them, and, especially upon the memory of her deceased husband. Generally his relatives, if in good circumstances, prefer to assist in her support, or support her entirely, than that she should marry a second time.

☞ Milledgeville (Ga.) papers say more than 1000 negroes have within two weeks passed over their railroads, from Putnam and adjacent counties, for the West. They have been induced to leave their employers on the promise of higher wages, although contracts had been ratified by the Freedmen's Bureau. The most able bodied and likely fellows are thus taken with only a change of clothing. Their particular destination is unknown. They may or may not see the planters thus deprived of their employees. They will be disappointed in making their crops. This complaint comes up from many counties. Several parties have been arrested who are thus tampering with em ployees.

Kentucky Soldiers' Convention—Attempted Suicide.

LOUISVILLE, March 24.

The Kentucky Soldiers' Convention met here on the 6th and 7th of April. Arrangements have been made to bring soldiers at half fare over the principal railroads. All officers and soldiers who served in Kentucky regiments are cordially invited. A large attendance is expected.

Sterling King, who confessed himself guilty of attempting the assassination of Secretary Seward, endeavored to commit suicide this morning by severing the blood vessels of his arm. His recovery is doubtful.

Tornado Near Cairo.

CAIRO, March 21.—Mr. Tompkins, clerk of the steamer Baltic, reports witnessing where a tornado crossed the Mississippi river last night at Chain, a few miles above this city. He reports it about one hundred yards wide, and on both sides of the river every tree in the track was blown down. He heard of no damage to boats or property in the route of the tornado.

☞ One of the most notable of the arrivals in the House of Lords on the opening day was the lady who came into the House escorted by the Earl of Lovelace, and who was recognized as the Lady Anne Isabella Noel King Noel, the grandaughter of Lord Byron. As she took her seat among the peeresses' daughters there were few who did not regard with a peculiar interest the somewhat pale face, light brown hair, and bright, intelligent look of the daughter of "Ada."

MUSCATINE, IOWA, March 21.—A most terrible storm of hail, accompanied by lightning and thunder, passed over this place on Monday night. The hail fell as large as pigeon's eggs, fell, breaking windows, etc. The lightning was terrible, destroying half a mile of telegraph poles and melting the wires in the office.

CHICAGO, March 21.—A terrible hail storm visited the city and vicinity last night. At Hyde Park, six miles south of this city, hail stones measuring seven inches in circumference fell profusely. Considerable damage was done to buildings and trees.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NO EXCUSE FOR BAD BREAD.

MORGAN'S

SELF-RISING

FLOUR.

THE best, Cheapest and most economical Flour in use.

All lovers of good and wholesome bread, biscuit, etc., can, by using this Flour, save time, trouble, money and health. Trial is ALWAYS RELIABLE, and is not effected by hot or cold weather. It does not require Yeast Powders, Cream Tartar, Yeast, Saleratus, Soda or salt, and ONLY HALF the usual quantity of shortening, and where cold water is used in lieu of milk, still less shortening is needed.

ONE-THIRD less of this flour is required to produce a like amount of Bread, to that made in the following table of other brands, from some will about PAY THE PRICE charged for sending the self rising ingredients.

IT IS EXTRA GOOD FOR CAKES, and all kinds of pastry, requiring not more than TWO-THIRDS the usual amount of butter and sugar.

THIS FLOUR EXCELS ALL OTHERS for Batter Cakes, Waffles, Puddings, the dumplings for Chicken Pie, etc., etc.

And is a Saving of from $6 to $8 per Barrell to the Consumer.

This article has met with the most wonderful success. A large proportion of the citizens of Memphis and surrounding country are now using it; but I am confident there are many others who would avail themselves of the valuable qualities, if satisfied regarding its HEALTHFULNESS, SUPERIORITY, and ECONOMY.

To convince each of these facts, I have obtained a large number of certificates from well and favorably known physicians and others, a few of which I give below. One trial will convince the most incredulous that this is their advantage to use this Flour, as an ECONOMY and SATISFACTION in every respect.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

MEMPHIS, TENN., August 3, 1865.

I have used Morgan's Self Rising Flour, and find it to be a most excellent article. I have also examined the ingredients which produce its self rising property, and find them to be, not only innocent, but important to perfect nutrition. I can, therefore, recommend it as a healthful and desirable article of food, and an article of bread superior to that made in the ordinary manner.

JNO. R. PHATSER, M. D.

We fully concur in the above, having examined the ingredients.

O. L. WILSON, M. D.
R. F. BROWN, M. D.

I have examined the ingredients and pronounce them innocent, and the bread superior.

R. C. MALONE, M. D.

MEMPHIS, TENN., August 21, 1865.

I have used Morgan's Self Rising Flour, and examined its ingredients. It is all that he claims for it, and is entirely harmless to all, sick or well, and is especially adapted as a diet for dyspeptics and consumptives, its materials supplying in these cases, healthful and much needed nutriment.

L. W. GABBERT, M. D.

I will prepare any barrel of flour sent to me, or will furnish any quality or flour ordered, out of my own sales I use none but the very best, (T. Harrison, or its equal).

The bread and biscuit made from this flour can be eaten as well warm as cold; without the least inconvenience to the weak and dyspeptic stomach, and has been known to greatly benefit such cases.

Put up in 6, 12, 24, and 48 pound pa kages, Half Barrels and Barrels.

This flour will be found on sale in packages at all first class family groceries in the city, and at wholesale at the manufactory, 48 Main street, 2 doors South of Beale, Memphis, Tenn.

A liberal discount will be made to the Trade.
