

NEW CANAL PROJECT EXCITES EVERY ONE

Uncle Sam Getting Data for Canal From Lake Superior to Mississippi.

The Lake Superior-Mississippi river canal project is getting every farmer, business man and ordinary citizen in the valley of the Father of Running Waters very much excited.

W. E. Cowles, St. Paul, who is getting statistics on the proposition for the Citizens' association of Stillwater, is now in Duluth making a report to Lieut. Col. Graham D. Fitch. What he has to say about the sentiment of the people between Duluth and Davenport, Ia., would almost make a load big enough for a dray.

Mr. Cowles says everybody is wildly enthusiastic about it. The preliminary surveys for the canal have already been made. The government engineers say that a canal from the lake to the big river by way of the Brule and St. Croix rivers is perfectly sane, feasible and practical.

Canal is a Practical Project.

Now that Uncle Sam knows that the canal can be built and be practical, he wants to know whether there is enough business along its proposed route to warrant the expense of the vast sums of money that will be required to build it.

Mr. Cowles' report says the people would benefit directly by the canal say it would open up a vast amount of territory much sooner than it otherwise would. It would bring lower freight rates and increase the volume of commerce, cause towns on its banks to prosper and new ones to grow, develop water power industries.

Commercial clubs, councils and civic organizations all through the valley are coming to the support of the project, says Mr. Cowles. And he has petitions, documents and letters by the bushel to show it.

DEBTS OF FOREIGN NATIONS AND OURS

Public Debt of the United States Is Decreasing Year by Year.

While That of Foreign Nations Is Piling Up at Portentous Speed.

The social philosophers who are saying that all the great nations are increasing their debts so rapidly that they are headed for bankruptcy, are mistaken when they include the United States in this roll. The debt here is decreasing and not increasing. In proportion to population the decrease is, of course, much more marked.

Comparison With Japan.

Comparison with Japan will furnish a fair illustration of the difference between the United States and the principal nations in the old world in this particular. Japan's interest-bearing debt in 1878 was $33,000,000. In 1909 it is, in round figures, $1,120,000,000. The interest-bearing debt of the United States was $1,800,000,000 in 1878. It is $913,000,000 today. While our debt is only about half as great as it was thirty-one years ago, Japan's is thirty-four times as large as it was at that time. And while we were reducing our indebtedness our population was growing rapidly. The annual interest charge on our debt amounted to $2 for each man, woman and child in the country in 1878. It is 22 cents in 1909. In the thirty-one years in which our debt was cut in half, our aggregate wealth was tripled, increasing from $40,000,000,000 in 1878 to $120,000,000,000 in 1909.

It is only just to ourselves that this difference in tendencies between the United States and the rest of the great nations should be pointed out. Japan is not alone in this vast expansion in debt burdens. Every great country in Europe and Asia is piling up its liabilities at a portentous speed. Our governmental current expenditures are rapidly improving, but the bonded obligations are practically unchanged in recent years, while they are far below the figures of two or three decades ago. In telling the truth about the tax burdens of the United States, and these are not light, the whole truth ought to be told. There is much wastefulness and extravagance in the United States' government outlays. But, in one degree or another, the budgets of the rest of the countries tell a similar story. So far as practicable, this drain here ought to be stopped. The senate's new retrenchment committee says it will endeavor to check the rate. But when this waste is mentioned the conditions in the rest of the countries ought to be pointed out. The fact also should be adverted to that wealth is greater here than elsewhere, and is increasing faster. Thus our burdens are comparatively light.

BAKERS ARE SURE OF FINAL VICTORY

Deny Reports of Bosses That Strike Is Broken—Good Work by Committee.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Despite the reports being circulated today by the Boss Bakers' association that the bakers' strike has been broken and practically all shops are now in full operation, the union men are today standing resolutely to compel the acceptance of the demands that brought about the strike—higher wages and better working conditions. In view of the activity of the committee of fifty, which is doing its work in a very effective manner, the men are supremely hopeful of final victory.

At a meeting of the conference, which took place yesterday at Clinton Hall, 151 Clinton street, the committee presented a worked out plan how to carry on the strike until the bosses will accept the demands of the union and consent to a ten hour workday, the principal demand of the strikers.

The meeting yesterday was an enthusiastic one, and in addition to the organization that made up the conference, forty-six more societies were represented, raising the number of organizations that have enlisted in the fight for better conditions and shorter hours for the baker to nearly three hundred.

ENGINEERS ARE TO PUT THEIR LICENSES IN SAFE

The members of the Cleveland branch of the Marine Engineers' Benefit association have voted to deposit their licenses in the safe at the headquarters of the local in that city. This action was taken as an answer to the claim made by the Lake Carriers' association that the engineers were deserting their union and signing contracts with the vessel owners belonging to the association.

The depositing of our members' licenses in the safe at headquarters is merely to show the Lake Carriers' association that there is no foundation for their report that our men are anxious to break away from the union," said William Yates, national president of the Marine Engineers' Benefit association. "Some of the boys came to me and said they wanted to do something that would effectually clear them of any suspicion of disloyalty to the union. The resolution to surrender their licenses was the result.

"Any time one of the boys wants his license back he can have it. Never since I came to Cleveland to take charge of the strike have I been so satisfied with results as I am now."

LOUI NEW D. A. R. MEMBERS.
WASHINGTON, June 2.—At a meeting today of the national board of organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the announcement was made that 1,651 new members have been admitted to the organization since the recent election of Mrs. Matthew H. Scott as president-general of the order.

JUSTICE FROM THE TOILER'S VIEW POINT

Doubtful if Conventionalism Would Not Better Express Society's Law of Ethics.

The term justice is commonly used as an expression by which people may distinguish a right action from a wrong one, and the line of cleavage that divides the two is we are taught, based wholly upon the belief that the individual must suffer for all his or her unjust acts: Will such philosophy stand a critical examination?

The cities have a code of morals, as well as have the individual states, and these are governed by another code as set forth by the federation of states. The United States sets forth a code of morals in the form of laws which must be observed, that is, we in the under world are taught so, and we are taught by studying these laws we can use them as barometers to measure our actions of justice and injustice towards each other.

"Justice" Blind to Injustices.
Both justice and injustice are at the same time just and unjust; they are both right and wrong; they engage in combat daily; they fight each other in every transaction. In every walk of life we trample under foot either the one or the other. We have no choice, we cannot choose between them, we must accept the one that will reward us with the most of the material goods of the world, and in our every day life we are blinded, we have no thought of whether our actions are just or unjust, we want the money and are going to have it, if we can, the rules of the game being set by the so-called fair means if you can't get it at whatever cost, walk over the bodies or foot fellow men. "What do I care if in seeking my own gain my brothers are crushed, that my actions towards the women and children heap upon them more misery, and if it is possible for me to do so I must coin into dollars and cents the very lives of the children and women? Do I feel sorry for them? Why certainly I do; but that is not the question. I am just—I have done no more than others would do—I am to be just as I understand it in the world—I am not much concerned at the present time what effect my actions may have on the ones who are less fortunate than I, that is nothing to me, they must get into the game, if they cannot keep pace with us they must fall and be trampled under foot."

Struggle for Precedence.
Ha! Ha! At last through my struggles have I gained a name for myself, won fame, I am a self made man, and look back over the rough road that I have traveled in order to gain wealth and position. I have raised myself by my own exertions, by self denial and frugality, by forethought, and study have realized my aim in life. My life work is done. I have time to reflect and observe, I am growing old and feeble, and now that I have time to think I ask myself what have I gained. I have reaped a bountiful harvest of the world's goods, I have placed away in the vault of human sacrifice dollars that I cannot count, what need have I for them? They cannot buy life, they cannot console a burning and aching conscience, and now in my enfeebled position must I play the part of hypocrite. Upon bonded and do I plead with Thee, O Thou great and merciful God forgive me, Thou Great Spirit of love and truth, I was young and followed the ways of the world. I knew not what I was doing and I plead with thee, thou great spirit, after thou hast forgiven my sins and follies, that thou wouldst remove from the path of the young and weak the pitfalls and snare that lie in the path of their lives. If thou canst overlook my unrighteous acts committed in my ignorance I will build monuments to thy glory, I will endow colleges where thy truths can be taught, yea, I will give to the poor the alms they ask for that I, with the earthly wealth I have gained may buy my place in heaven. Is there a preacher, lawyer, or business man in the City of Duluth who will deny that this is the truth of their daily life?

Word With the Preachers.
Let us look for a moment at the average preacher, I am not going to condemn him thoughtlessly, but ask him do you measure every action of your life in the spirit of justice? Do you weigh in the balance the things you teach as against the conditions that make the wrong against which you protest? You cannot say that you do, if you have ever considered them at all you have not dared to openly protest against them, and teach the people the actual causes, and rather you have sold yourselves as well to greed by accepting the proffered hand of respectability. You and yours have reaped benefits that have been a curse to you. You have not considered our welfare, but only your own. We toil hard under the beating rays of a scorching sun, we brave all the elements in gaining our living, while you with your satin skin, your well shaped hands and form—your refined and cultured voice, do pray loud and long in the high places, but you have little time to spend in the under world, you have little time to come amongst us seeking the conditions that drag us down, no you rest in your places of ease, and exhort us to be good.

So-Called "Justice" a Farce.
What can the lawyer say other than my position in life make of me a coward whose hand is raised against the hand of every other man, taking from the one and giving to the other regardless of what constitutes justice, regardless of who is right or wrong, men who prostitute their brains in the name of greed and plead their pleas in the name of justice? What did Christ say of you?

What of the business man? Is he perfect? Let him answer, do you deal with the people as you would have the people? Do you sell your wares at a nominal price? Do you sell adulterated goods in the name of pure ones? Do you short weight the people that your gains may be more? Do you sell shoddy goods? Have your protests to the common council of our city been based upon justice, or have you bartered your sense of justice for one of gain? The echoes from the past answer plain and clear. No. Whatever justice is, it is not known today.

What I have said is not to injure any one, but at the same time I must not swerve from my belief of what justice is. If what I have said may seem cruel and harsh, it is done in the name of justice as I know it, and to expose a lying, thieving and hypocritical system that bases its beliefs upon might is right.

Earle, Jr., the Philadelphia banker, who, as receiver for the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company, discovered the alleged conspiracy by which the so-called sugar trust is said to have kept prices high, testified today before a committee of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

COLLECTIVE BARGAIN; NEW LABOR MEASURE

MILWAUKEE, June 3.—The Milwaukee Brewers' association and representatives of the building trades section of the federated trades council have come to an understanding whereby the recent strike was called off by the signing of a so-called "collective agreement."

It is said to be the first instance in the United States that the "collective agreement" has been brought about. The action precludes any possibility of a general strike of 3,000 brewery employes.

JAPANESE STRIKERS HAVE NEW DEMANDS

One has absconded, leaving behind $300 in debts, and another has become bankrupt.
