FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL, SATURDAY, October 26, 1872.

There is more life and business on Mallory's wharf than since the present earth came in, and checking and depositing are proceeding with considerable activity. Improvement in the accommodation continues to be a disappointing pursuit; they are less numerous than three weeks ago, but scarcely more successful, for all the money the banks call furnish and all the currency they can import from the East are wanted to move cotton. Exchange is entirely irregular and adverse to the demand of varying financial wants. New York exchange is taken by most of the banks at ¼ discount, "outside points," such as Providence, Fall River, etc., is cleared; one or two drafts on New York are as before the recent change, but reserve to themselves to charge a "slight discount" unless they shall show a property of doing so. On New Orleans the rate is everywhere ¼ off, and everybody who selling pull to pay. Brokers were paying 1½@2½ for gold. An inquiry was made for the purpose of ascertaining how we could import gold, but we could not learn that the wanted securities were supplied, in all instances we could learn, nothing was offered, as far as we could learn, regular operators will offer nothing on the market until a more plentiful supply of money supplies the means of speculation.

The Commercial, of Frankfort, Germany, has the following quotations, October 5: Illinois Central bonds, old, 77½@77½; new, 72½. Memphis new 8 per cents, 36.

The St. Louis Times says: "There is a disposition among the banks to avoid any new complications, and to increase their reserve in anticipation of a very active demand during the latter months of the year. It is the impression of our packers to largely increase the hog slaughter of last year, and as the crop movement has not been but slight, we may confidently expect more movement in this respect, and that with both hog and crop movement demands the season will be the most active for a number of years. The large quantities of grain now in bagging, and yet in warehouse, as well as the very considerable shipments of these, iron and manufactured articles, are engaging all the attention of bankers, even for customers, while outsiders are complaining that it is impossible to get money at current rates."

The New York Bulletin translates the following from the Berlin Commercial Gazette, Hamburg Burzenhalle, dated October 1, 1872: "Death of cotton is the prominent feature of the drama now being enacted on all the European bourses, keeping them in a constant ferment and excitement. The speculators have for the most part been made to uphold prices for the settlement day at the end of the month, but these efforts have been in vain. Comparatively few there are who can stand the strain on their resources, and the consequence is a general scramble to get out of engagements. Business, as is generally the case at so very precarious a juncture, has been quite limited. The decline to-day has been 1¼ points on Amerikan, 1 on Orleans, and 1¼ on French rentes. All the Austrian railroads are in great request, the Lombard railroads being in demand for banks and industrial undertakings, Dortmund Union being the only exception. All foreign rents are lower; the only foreign stocks in demand are Russian and other Czarish and the sterling loan."

A Hamburg leading journal has the following remarks upon the speculative mania now prevalent in German bourses: "An attempt is now being made to deter the National Bank from further loans, and thus arresting the discount rate by conforming up the spectre of a commercial crisis; we should think, on the opposite course, relaxation, not be adopted. We are aware that the stock speculators are so busy in limiting their interests with issue of legitimate trade. How the Gordian knot is to be untied we can see at a loss to discern, for while there is but one value among all classes contemplating the new company market, we really hear of new creations being set afoot, of course of a less pretending nature, but still of such a sign that there can be no credulous people enough to subscribe to new schemes of almost any kind. The clouds, the same thunder and lightning in the skies, and the moment necessary case returns the speculative fever will revive."

COTTON.

There was a tolerable free inquiry in the morning, but holders, inspired by the News yesterday, were not disposed to meet the views in their views and the buyers generally held off waiting for better terms, or for opportunities under any circumstances. As the day advanced the factors softened, but sales at the prices noted were made only in small lots, and further, but firmer. The telegrams reported New York market firmer and cotton dearer (Liverpool firm at Liverpool firm at 9½ @ 10 pence) and at 18c. The sales aggregated 600 bales, including 100 to arrive, there is a good demand for middling and above, but the offerings are very small and continues to be limited. We quote as before:

Low middling	17½@18
Middling	18 3-4

The New Orleans Times expresses the sentiment prevalent in that city that the market is as anxious for, if not more so than, the sale and work them on a large scale; it adds: "There is one feature of the cotton trade that is gradually becoming more prominent. We refer to the increasing proportions of the raw material obtained by the United spinners from the Atlantic ports, as compared with the Gulf States. This is the natural result of railroad extensions, which have opened up a direct outlet for cottons from the interior towns of Georgia and Carolina, either by rail, and so on, to Savannah, Charleston, Wilmington and New York, to greater advantage than from Mobile or New Orleans. The larger staple Gulf cottons they must still purchase here, but the tendency is to increase the proportion of the former, and decrease that of the latter. The natural result of this movement is to make Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston more dependent on trans-Atlantic markets, and consequently more dependent for foreign supply. Hence the number of new steamship lines established between the Gulf ports and European ports. Under these circumstances the direct foreign trade of the Gulf ports must increase, and the coastwise trade of the New ones gradually subside into a mart for the supply of the North, and operated on by the railroads. The logical sequence of railroad extension will be to afford New Orleans as many lines of steamships as may of produce as any of the Western cities; and in this event, the cotton will merely seek those ports which afford the largest demand and the most adequate facilities for shipment. If this be realized, the cotton trade of the unusual extent of our receipts this season from the interior of the country, brought by rail, and not Mobile. The time is probably not far distant when the cotton exports will be divided between Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston."

GENERAL MARKET.

There was again this morning a cheerful tone and activity about business, adding to the large attendance of country clothes. The grocery stores on Front row were crowded with customers, while the retail stores on Main street were crowded. The weather cleared off cool and bracing, and the rain has caused the river from midnight to an advanced four-foot rise. The Cumberland River is also rising and the produce and feed markets were lifeless on account of her nonarrival. The provision market remains in an unsettled state, and the prices for most of that class of articles. Stocks here are very low, and the demand is increasing, and consequently are variations and fluctuations in the railroads. For instance, a merchant that usually receives a score of consignments the first barrel of the season is hard a week ago and yesterday a fresh, fine apple arrived in Memphis, and the decline that had taken place was entirely upon them. The arrival of the first barrel of pork, and it is not blockade on the roads that caused a delay and loss, has been neglected, and it is a fine article, being positive show a considerable amount of regularity, but without any effect on the market making, we find circulars at 19@20c, shoulders 12c, keg lard 20@22c. The first of bulk meat of the season was received and day, circulars sold at 10½@10c, clear rib 12@c, clear sides 12@12½c, and the market quoted at 12 bid. Flour is quiet, and we have no change to make of the quotations below, which show very little change in the various qualities. Eggs were weak, a sale of 10 boxes in one at 20c, and a consignment of 40 boxes of Indiana at 18c. Onions are in fair former quotations with less inquiry, the demand not keeping up with the supply. Potatoes are increasing in favor, and the sales of which are increasing in favor. There is a good demand for Peaches—peaches are in demand and selling at 50@60c in good demand, especially the fancy qualities, and rates are steady. Apples are in good and perfectly stagnant, we did not hear of a sale, nots were quiet, a small noted at 50c. Pears are in fair demand at 50@60c. Grapes are in good demand, and the supply is small to supply, and lots to arrive "were offered at $3@4 per barrel. Butter appears not to be strong, if we may depend upon the offerings that could be had in lots below 25c; a dray load was sold at 20c. Cheese are plentiful, and only fairly offering, but inferior white would meet with a sale at fair prices. Cabbage was this morning offered confined to old lots of Kentucky fresh High. The inside quotation of sales advanced from 5c to 7½c. Apples are coming in very fine, and $2@3 barrels were received thinly packed, to stalks in a bundle, and sold at $3@4 per barrel, in good condition, and quarters, sold at a pound. Lemons were lower, 50@60c. Oranges are in good supply at $6 @7 per box. New Orleans telegraphs a good market for cotton at 18c for whites. New York active but lower; Charleston dull; St. Louis dull, unsettled, and lower; Chicago dull, unsettled, and lower. In New York sales were very dull and declining; in Chicago dull and declined. In St. Louis sales were 1,000 bales, closing at 18c; and dull at 18½c for low; in Chicago provisions were weak and dull, and the supply of estimated in this district is not so abundant as manufacturers desire, and the following from the New Orleans Picayune shows that there also there is scarcity. The Picayune says: "Receipts of cotton at the ports of Texas have been 12,000 bags, or 2,000 less compared with some days, or two days since, and yesterday an increase of over 100 per cent. It is to be hoped that the mills here will be able to obtain larger supplies than last season, when they closed up after operating six months, our wants are now about 1,000 bales per week to give full employment to the four large mills working, or 50,000 tons per annum. The cotton crop, however, is being picked and marketed much earlier than last year, and it is to be feared that there will be much more difficult to procure than last year, for if not properly stored or sold soon after being ginned, it becomes worthless."

Quotations for feed are for round lots on the landing unless otherwise expressed.
