COOK'S ONLY RIVAL

Roosevelt, "the great man of destiny," is for and against corporations. Is for and against the wage earner. Approves of oppression and is against it. Believes in strikes and doesn't believe in them. Is the friend and foe of notorious bribers. Sanctions the receipt of trust money to aid his own political ambitions, but is indignantly opposed to corporations contributing a corruption fund to aid any one else. Regards the labor movement as all right and all wrong. Accuses Hearst of being McKinley's assassin, and then expresses a willingness to join hands with him in a sharp battle. Violently attacks political bosses and then cordially entertains the most notorious of them all at his daughter's home. Raves for a square deal for all, and then denounces untried workmen and alleged grafters as guilty. Belongs about breaking up the trusts and is the chief conspirator in permitting the steel trust to criminalize its only healthy rival. Violent in his denunciation of the tools of criminal trusts, and appoints the greatest corporation lawyer trickster to the most powerful position in his cabinet. Righteously indignant against rule by the fossilized courts, but favors rule of military against workmen's organizations. Favors a free press, but wants it curbed when he is assailed. Calls everybody who doesn't agree with him a liar, but becomes hysterical when any one proves that he is an acceptable Ananias club candidate. Makes a noise about prosecuting corporations and permits the sugar thieves to escape. "I am for law and order!" thunders the hero of San Juan hill in his speech at Columbus, Ohio, and we recall that this hero, when governor of New York, called out the troops to shoot down workmen who presumed to strike for a living wage. Denounces race suicide, but does nothing to prevent race suicide of infants in the slums of the national capital. Drinks toasts to kings and fraternizes with royal despots, and then poses as the greatest champion of Republican institutions and real Democracy. Parades himself as the greatest friend of the negro race, and proves his friendship by his autocratic conduct in the Brownsville case. Is for and against everything that is good, bad or indifferent—the actual result being that he is a big cipher. Is Roosevelt the greatest living American, as La Follette has claimed, and is he to be the "man on horseback" as predicted by George D. Herron? asks Henry T. Jones in the New York Call. Answering the first part of the

Wm. Faversham Comes to the Lyceum Monday and Tuesday in "The World and His Wife."

AT THE THEATERS.

William Faversham will appear in Charles Frederic Nirdlinger's adaptation of Echegaray's Spanish masterpiece, "El Galeoto," at the Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday Oct. 17 and 18. Mr. Faversham's season at Daly's theater, New York, proved the biggest and most important dramatic success of the season. It was generally recognized that Mr. Faversham has brought back to Daly's famous playhouse the prestige which it enjoyed during its heyday. William Winter, Mr. Daly's warmest admirer, was one of the first to recognize in Mr. Faversham a new and important power in the theater of our time. During Mr. Faversham's long engagement at Daly's theater he played to the most fashionable audiences that visited that playhouse since the days that Augustin Daly was at its head. When Mr. Faversham is seen at the Lyceum, he will be surrounded by the same company as that which supported him at Daly's theater. This fine organization includes among others Julie Opp, H. Cooper Cliffe, Harry Redding and Lionel Belmore. It is doubtful whether there has visited this city in recent years a musical comedy of the merit said to be possessed by "The Kissing Girl," which appears at the Lyceum for three nights commencing Thursday Oct. 20, with Saturday matinee. The piece is by Stanislaus Stange, Vincent Bryan and Harry von Tilzer. The cast is a superb one and is further accentuated by a chorus of 65 and its own orchestra, under the leadership of Whitney Bennington. "The Kissing Girl" is sumptuously mounted, has the personal care of Stange, Bryan and von Tilzer and the following shows the cast of principals:

- Lina, "The Kissing Girl"..... Miss Texas Guinan
- Fritz Kobus, corporal in the Austrian army..... Dick Temple
- Hippocrates Muller, a wealthy brewer..... Harry Hermon
- Karl Opp, the king's forrester..... Louis London
- Catherine Muller, the brewer's daughter..... Marion Mills
- Margaret Kobus, mother of Fritz and landlady of the "Hunter's Rest"..... Ida Fitzhugh
- Kriebel, head waiter from the

The chorus of the "Kissing Girl" company is described by Chicago critics as a "seminary of female loveliness."
Mort. H. After having played for one year in Chicago, "The Flirting Princess" is playing to capacity almost everywhere visited this season—interest largely centering upon Mr. Bulger and "The Vampire and Apache" dances in the musical success.

query the answer is "no." No, Roosevelt is not great, he is not logical, he is not consistent; he is your pretended friend one day and your outspoken enemy the next. Neither the rich corporations nor the poor workmen can trust him, and although Roosevelt has not yet betrayed the capitalist exploiters there is no feeling of security on their part that any day he might turn on the greatest of the money kings. The chiefs of the money power from J. Pierpont Morgan down to Henry Clews have reason to suspect that the rattled-brained Theodore, if he were returned to power, to further his own extreme ambitions, would not hesitate to order thrown into jail such financial pirates as Morgan, Perkins, Armour or any or all of the alleged violators of actual laws or imaginary (Rooseveltian) laws. Not even one suspected millionaire crook would be safe from the erratic orders and commands of this blatant, bull dozing and tangle-brained Don Quixote. And knowing this the powerful rich are no longer looking to Roosevelt to save them. And, therefore, the finish of Roosevelt is already complete. The Maine returns are, in a measure, a reply to his "New Nationalism" program. Roosevelt is done, completely done. And instead of the great creature of destiny, the Rough Rider fraud will go down in history as the greatest political Dr. Cook of the centuries. There are about 800 union and 1,000 nonunion glaziers in New York city,

AMONG THE UNIONS

A new union of jewelry workers, to be affiliated with the international, was recently formed at Providence, R. I. Labor unions of Brockton, Mass., are laying out the preliminaries for establishing a distributing warehouse from which to sell, slightly above cost, shoes, groceries and other necessities of life. Returns from firms employing 125,000 work people in the cotton industry of Great Britain show a decrease of 8 per cent in wages paid, as compared with a year ago. Official notice has been received that thirteen of the forty-six mills in the two plants of the American Steel and Tin Plate Co. at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, are to be opened up after being idle since July, 1909, on account of the strike. By a vote of 1,717,000 to 13,000 the trade union congress recently in session at Sheffield, England, adopted a resolution condemning the Ogborn judgment in which the court of appeals decided that trade unions cannot contribute money for political purposes.

The striking cigarmakers of Tampa, Fla., 12,000 in number, demand recognition of their union. They have been out about three months. The International Cement Masons' union has a membership of about 5,000 in the United States and Canada. They get $4.50 a day in New York city and $5 in Chicago. In order to meet the high cost of living labor unions are considering establishing co-operative stores in Chicago, Ill., for supplying members with the necessities of life at cost.
