EVENING SCHOOLS TO CLOSE TONIGHT

Exercises at Central and William Penn High at Which Dr. Broome Will Speak

20 PLUMBING GRADUATES

Evening schools of the city will end their school year tonight, when the Central High School and the William Penn High School will hold their closing exercises. The Northeast High School held similar exercises last night, when six students were granted certificates.

Addresses will be made at both schools tonight by Dr. Edwin C. Broome, the newly elected superintendent of schools, who will make his initial appearance here at school exercises.

Twenty graduate plumbers will form the main part of the graduating class at the Central High School. All the youthful masters of the art of wiping joints will not only receive certificates, but they will also have jobs. One of the requirements for graduation is an apprenticeship with a master plumber. There are five graduates in a general course.

Eleven girls will be graduated from the William Penn High School evening classes tonight. They will include students in commercial, academic and domestic science courses.

To Sing Schoolboy's Song

A feature of the exercises will be the singing of "To a Skylark," composed by Robert Gerson, a schoolboy, son of Dr. Oscar Gerson, principal of the evening classes. Miss Linda Bowers will be the soloist. The salutatory, written by Mae Schwartz, will be delivered by Sadie Ritter. Dr. Gerson will present the certificates.

The graduates are Bertha Asfal, Mae Bortz, Lottie Brown, Marie du Hamell, Hannah Lutz, Viola Rausenberger, Sadie Ritter, Mary Sellers, Jean Smuckler, Elizabeth Steinberg and Rose Young.

Dr. Edwin C. Broome, recently elected superintendent of schools, will greet the graduates. Diplomas at the Central High School exercises will be presented by Jonathan T. Rorer, the principal, and the prizes will be awarded by William C. Ash, director of practical arts and vocational education.

The Murrell Dobbins first prize goes to Joseph Adams, electrical construction, and the second to Frederick Raymond McGrath, plumbing.

The Master Plumbers' Association prize and the Richard H. Watson prize both go to Harry Weimar Sauer, plumbing, and the Roofing, Metal and Heating Engineers' prizes to Harry Sink and Albert Bissinger.

Special certificates will be given Israel Edelsohn, bookkeeping, and Barnet Glickler, architectural drafting, during the exercises.

Members of Graduating Class

The members of the class are:

Joseph Abrams, Leonard D. Dimaio, David J. Evans, Joseph Gingoff, Morris H. Giles, Edgar Gedher, Charles E. Gravatt, William Griffiths, Walter Howell, Jr., Max Kaufer, Alexander Lecias, W. Arthur Rice, J. Albert Light, John Macdonald, John P. Meaney, Jerome McGuigan, Frederick McGrath, George McKeran, Charles D. Miller, William S. Richl, Harry Sauer, George H. Scribbin, Frank Standenmayer, Henry Standenmayer, Harry Steel, David Vasper, Joseph Fred. Weitzel.

Hedge calls—Reginald Adams, Wynne Armer, James L. Ambrose, Ralph D. Andrews, Charles Apple, P. M. Augustine, Harry Becker, Harry Carr, William Davis, Stephen Horace Dyer, Frank Harris, George F. Hunter, Philip W. Hunter, William F. Bernauer, John V. Hill, Isaac Hilliard, George E. Brown, Jr., H. A. Boyce, Philip Brumgardt, Joseph Brumgardt, A. Bitter, W. Hill, Jr., Joseph Bierchen, A. Bitter, W. Hill, Jr., Joseph Bierchen, A. Bitter, W. Hill, Jr., Joseph Bierchen