TRAIN HITS FATHER AND BOY ON BICYCLE

Child Killed and Man Probably Fatally Hurt in Gloucester Accident

MOTHER SEES TRAGEDY

Before the eyes of his wife and mother-in-law, Walter Bowman, thirty years old, of Washington, D. C., was probably fatally injured and his son was killed when an electric train hit them at a crossing at Gloucester, N. J., yesterday.

Bowman, his wife and three children had been visiting at the home of Mrs. John Rieder, Mrs. Bowman's mother, since Saturday. The father and son attended a baseball game near the Rieder home and were returning there at the time of the accident.

Bowman rode a bicycle and carried the child on the handlebars. As he approached the grade crossing at Morris street, he failed to notice an oncoming northbound electric, and failed to slacken speed. The train struck the bicycle, hurling both victims high in the air.

The train was stopped at once, and passengers placed the injured pair in nearby automobiles. The boy was taken to the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital, Camden, where he died soon after being admitted. His right leg was nearly severed and his head and shoulders were crushed. Bowman was carried to Cooper Hospital, Camden, where it was found he had sustained a compound fracture of the left leg, severe lacerations of the head and body, and a probable fracture of the skull. His condition is critical, physicians say.

The accident was witnessed by Mrs. Bowman, who was watching for her husband and son from a window of the Rieder home, scarcely fifty feet from the scene of the accident. Her cries brought her mother, Mrs. Rieder, to the scene. Both women became hysterical and were placed under the care of a physician.

The Morris street crossing is guarded by an electric bell, which witnesses of the accident assert did not sound a warning as the train approached. Coroner Holl, of Camden, is investigating the accident.
