JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of the Princeton-Yale Game Today. Supper Club to Open This Evening at Bellevue-Stratford—Miss Dorothy Lee Introduced

WHEN you think of how much there is to do today you really have to hold your breath, don't you? In the first place, thousands are going by train or motor to Princeton for the struggle between the Tiger and the Bulldog. I have never known such interest as there seems to be in football this season.

Naturally, all of us who know Brad Dinsmore and have heard of his splendid playing are crazy to see him in the game. Braddock was a wonder at football while on the Germantown Academy team, and though all of his friends hoped he'd make the team at Princeton, we could not be sure, for Brad is very light, you know; in fact, eighteen pounds lighter than any other big team quarterback in the country.

But good old Princeton knew what it was doing when it put that young whirlwind in, and let us hope he'll make as good today as he has before this year. You know Braddock is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald A. Dinsmore, of Germantown, and a brother of Mrs. Duncan Douglas, of Cleveland. Another sister is Miss Elizabeth Dinsmore. Esther Dinsmore is younger, a schoolgirl. Frank and Archie Dinsmore, the latter also a student at Princeton, are brothers.

I sound rather strong for Princeton, but at the same time I am muchly interested in Yale, so I'll be glad for the side that wins and sad for the one beaten, though I would like Braddock to get in some good work. He really is a peach, and not the least bit in the world stuck on himself.

Then this evening will mark the first meeting of Mrs. Hutchison Scott's Supper Club at the Bellevue-Stratford. Mrs. Scott is coming over from New York to chaperone the club, and a great many members will entertain tonight as well as next Saturday after the Army and Navy game.

DOROTHY LEE was introduced yesterday afternoon at a tea given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Lee, at their home on Locust street above Seventeenth. Dorothy is another blonde (there are so many this season), and she is very artistic. She plays the violin well, you know, and is quite an athlete. She is a graduate of Miss Irwin's school, and has played with the Merion hockey team. Last year she was a freshman at Bryn Mawr, and she expects to return there in February to finish her course. At the tea yesterday she wore an exquisite dress of white brocaded velvet chiffon made on simple lines and belted with wide satin folds embroidered with rhinestones. Mrs. Lee wore a handsome gown of sapphire blue brocade trimmed with jet and made on long, rather straight lines. It was delightful to see Mrs. Clarence Coollens, Dorothy's older sister. You know she's been living in Cleveland for some time. She looked very well in a gown of green and gold.

THE first club night of the Plays and Players in their new clubhouse, the former Little Theatre, will be given next Tuesday. They had a wonderful housewarming there last week, you know, and are now settling down to regular business, as it were; that is, holding their meetings and teas and club nights.

Tuesday's play will be "Suzanne's Secret," an interlude in one act, with music by Ermann Wolf-Ferrari. Mrs. William Baker Whelen will be the leading and only woman in the play, taking the part of Countess Suzanne. Count Gil, her husband, will be impersonated by Mr. Lewis James Howell, while Santo, the mute servant, will be none other than Joseph Craig Fox, who is better than many actors of the professional stage.

Mr. Fox is stage manager of the performance, Joe Deering is in charge of the scenery, Mrs. Howard Reber of the properties and Mrs. Nina Prettyman Howell has the orchestra under her care. Something tells me it will be most interesting.

THE Willis Martins will give another of those delightful dances in the barn this evening for Elizabeth Morgan, the Reed A. Morgans' debutante daughter. It is too bad Miss Gwen Martin hurt both her ankles the other day. I hear, however, that she is able to be around on crutches. The guests will go this evening in farmer costumes, and it will be most attractive.

EVEN though the thoughts of most people in the matter of clothes are now turned toward woolen dresses and fur coats, a great many of us are still interested in white shirtwaists and skirts, as we will have to wear them at the many fairs and benefits.

At the Bazaar Boutique every one is to wear them, you know, and last Tuesday at the fashion show for the benefit of the Charlotte Cushman Club they were much in evidence as a costume for the program and candy venders. I noticed two especially attractive getups there, worn by Miss Isabel Frazer and Miss Evelyn Drayton, who were both siding.

The blouses were made of white crepe de chine and were made somewhat alike, with kimono sleeves and bands of hand drawn-work across the neck, back and front, and down each shoulder seam. Miss Frazer had her initials on the front in a darker color in diamond shape and her blouse fell straight and full over an accordion-pleated crepe de chine skirt. Miss Drayton's blouse was caught tight at the waist and her skirt was made plain. It was also of white crepe de chine. You have no idea how pretty the blouses and skirts were and so much more becoming than the regular shirtwaist and skirt arrangement.

ETHEL and daddy live with grandma. And grandma, by the way, is a wonderful sport. She plays while she talks and delights her small granddaughter with her spirit of "let's pretend." The other day she was dusting the living room and removing some ashes which had fallen on the floor from Daddy's pipe. "My goodness gracious," said grandma, "what am I to do with that man; he's so bad, dropping ashes and leaving papers about and bringing mud in on the floor. I declare I'll have to give him a good scolding." Ethel listened with a worried expression on her face. Was grandma in earnest, perhaps? Well, she'd better help Daddy, then, and so said she, deprecatingly:

"Don't scold him this time, grandma. You know it's awful hard to do anything with boys."
