PEER IS A SUICIDE IN ILLINOIS RETREAT

Journal Special Service.

Winchester, Ill., March 23.—George Sykes Barton, an English nobleman who came to this county in the '90's, and who has since led the life of a recluse, was found dead in a feed loft with a bullet hole in his head and a rifle clasped in his fingers. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

A letter gives instructions to his attorney here for the disposition of his property, valued at $50,000 to $100,000.

Stories often repeated that Barton was an English lord and had come here because of an unfortunate love affair, were reiterated last night and it is believed that sorrow, long borne in silence, finally induced the man to take his own life. Several years ago it was established that he was heir to a large estate in England and a peer of that realm.

WASHINGTON NOTES

Representative Fletcher this afternoon introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $25,000 for an armory and arsenal at Fort Snelling, power to come from the river under the terms of the bill introduced yesterday by Representative Stevens of St. Paul.

Appointments of rural carriers commencing May 1: Fred J. Oelrich, route 2, Springfield, S. D.; Edward Knodell, route 3, Tyler, S. D.

Rural delivery routes established to commence May 1: Minnesota—Montevideo, Chippewa county, route 8, length 36 miles, population served 430, number of houses 86.

Montana will not have the Turtle Mountain Indians. Owing to the protests of Representative Dixon and Senator Carter, orders have been issued to the agent at the Turtle Mountain reservation to keep the 500 Indians it was proposed to transfer to Montana in North Dakota and to give them allotments on public lands in the latter state.

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

M'CALL'S SECRET DEAL DISCLOSED

Letter Says Hamilton Was Engaged to Lobby for Insurance Companies.

New York, March 23.—A letter which former President John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance company wrote on the day before his death, in which he stated the conditions under which he employed Andrew Hamilton as legislative agent of that company, has been made public. It was directed to Alexander E. Orr, president of the New York Life, and dated Feb. 16. It was written at a moment when Mr. McCall evidently realized that he could not live and defend himself from the charge of making an improper arrangement with Hamilton. The letter is as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Orr: I am conscious that I have but a slight chance to recover, and I am desirous that you and the company officials thru you shall have no doubt as to the nature and character of the employment of Andrew Hamilton, if I am not here to be heard when the time arrives to have it made known.

"He was employed by me in 1895 on behalf of the company to attend especially to matters of taxation and legislation in the United States and other countries affecting the company's interests.

"He refused to accept the duty unless it was made confidential and secret, and that no accounting of moneys advanced to him should be asked of him, or rendered by him, and I assented to the proposition.

"He told me that this condition he would impose as an absolute one, and unless it was accepted he would not undertake the work.

"Whether my action was legal or not, it will be left for others to say. I believe it was, and that I was clothed with full power so to act, and that the interests of the company and the policyholders demanded steps of this nature be taken; but, aside from the main reason for my present writing, is that there may remain no doubt as to what my statement would be if I were here as to the nature and character of Judge Hamilton's retainer and contract. Sincerely yours,

—"John A. McCall."

"Calling" Hamilton.

The special investigating committee of the New York Life Insurance company has sent a long letter to Andrew Hamilton, ostensibly in reply to the sarcastic communication in which he likened the committee to the spider and himself to the fly, and charged it with ignoring obtainable data, thereby giving a false color to the report so damaging to himself and the late John A. McCall.

The letter to Hamilton was in reality a defense of the auditing committee, the members of which, for more than ten years, Hamilton charged, knew of every payment to him, accepted and passed upon his vouchers and were just as much responsible, financially and morally, as was John A. McCal.

The letter quotes messages and cablegrams passing between Mr. Hamilton and the committee, these indicating, the committee members declare, their desire to secure an accounting of the company's money placed in the hands of the legislative agent. The letter to Hamilton declares that at the meeting of the first committee after his return, a registered letter was sent to him stating that an action in court for an accounting of the company's funds had been authorized, and that under the circumstances the committee would not ask him to appear before it. But, if he desired to be heard, the committee would be glad to fix a time to suit his convenience.

BANKER-BIGAMIST IS HIDING IN DISGRACE

New York, March 23.—Altho fears were entertained for a time that Thomas W. Kiley, a wealthy banker and merchant of Brooklyn, had committed suicide because of the publication of a story that he is the husband of two wives, Mrs. Flora A. Colt, to whom Kiley was married three years ago in Hammond, Ind., has received information of his whereabouts.

Mrs. Colt's son said Mr. Kiley is alive, but that he was not at liberty to say where the banker is.

RICH MILWAUKEE MAN A SUICIDE

Mystery Surrounds Tragic Death of William Mariner at His Home.

Special to The Journal.

Milwaukee, March 23.—The finding of the body of William Mariner, son of Ephraim Mariner, one of the best known and wealthiest men in this city, shocked Milwaukee's business and social world late last evening. Mr. Mariner had apparently gone to his room Wednesday night, after bowling with friends at the Town club, and put a bullet thru his head, after having undressed. He took part in a match game at the club, but seemed to be rather despondent during the evening. Nothing was thought of his actions at the time, but his strange behavior was remembered later when his suicide became known.

Coachman Finds Body.

Mariner was in the habit of sleeping late and when he did not wish to be disturbed until a late hour he would lock the door of his room. As his door was locked yesterday, the servants did not think anything was amiss when he failed to respond to their knocks at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. At 2 o'clock he was called again and failed to answer, and then at 3 o'clock when he had not been aroused, his father's coachman went into his room thru a window on the lawn and found the body of Mariner clad only in a night robe, under a spread on the bed, with the bed covering stained with blood. Mariner had shot himself thru the mouth with a 32-caliber revolver and apparently had died instantly.

No Cause Is Known.

After leaving the Town club on Wednesday night, Mariner escorted his wife home. Mrs. Mariner fainted when she was told that her husband had taken his own life.

Mariner was about 45 years of age, and managed the real estate branch of his father's business. His brother, John Mariner, issued a statement for the family last night, saying that it could give no explanation.

The Mariner estate is one of the most extensive in Wisconsin. The family owned enormous tracts of land in the northwest and big blocks of city real estate. Dozens of Milwaukee's downtown buildings are erected on Mariner property.

WATCHMAN SLAIN BY ROBBERS AT BANK

Rochester, N. Y., March 23.—Edward Pullman, constable and watchman at Sodus, was murdered early today by burglars whom he discovered in the act of rifling the Knapp bank, of that village. They were drilling a hole in the safe when discovered by Pullman. Altho five men were engaged in the job, Constable Pullman fearlessly entered the bank and gave battle. The fusilade of shots followed, during which the constable was instantly killed by a bullet. After the shooting the robbers fled.

PROFESSOR DOREMUS DEAD

Noted Chemist, Best Known as Poison Expert, Passes Away.

New York, March 23.—Professor R. Ogden Doremus, the noted chemist, is dead at his home here, aged 82 years. It was as an expert on the effects of poison, perhaps, that Professor Doremus was best known. As a result of his knowledge in this direction he was called upon to participate as an expert witness in many of the famous murder trials entending over a period of more than thirty years. Professor Doremus had been connected with the New York college and the College of the City of New York as instructor in chemistry for nearly sixty years and for more than forty-five years he had occupied the chair of chemistry in the Bellevue hospital medical college, of which he was one of the founders. For many years he was president of the New York Philharmonic society and of the New York Medico-Legal society.

Editorial Bulletin

A "Look-in" at The Journal Office, Revealing How The Sunday Journal Is Made.

In many respects a Sunday newspaper is quite unlike its weekday fellows. Come with us into our editorial offices and let us show you how and why.

First, it should be understood that it is erroneous to suppose that the Sunday paper contains only the news that happens to be left over after the Saturday evening paper is published. Every happening in the world after 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and until Sunday morning, if it is worth chronicling, is reported in The Sunday Journal, and that paper is different from any other newspaper in the twin cities in that it contains not a line of news that has appeared in the Saturday evening papers. Minneapolis has become a great city and it makes enough news from Saturday afternoon until Sunday morning to supply a Sunday morning paper with "all new copy"—that is, if that paper knows where and how to get it. But what may interest the reading public even more than this is the story of how the whole Sunday newspaper, with its many sections, features, departments and illustrations, is made.

A Week's Work of a Large Staff

It takes a whole week and the work of a large staff of special writers to do it. Early Monday morning the planning for next Sunday's Journal is begun by the editor in charge. Sometimes he plans big features several weeks ahead, but on Monday he tackles the multitude of problems that must be solved before the week ends. He reads all the newspapers, as he does every day, to learn what's going on in the world and what men and women of note are doing. Then he sets in motion, by means of the mails, the telegraph and the telephone, the machinery that ultimately brings to his desk the special stories he desires of interesting phases of topics of importance. They may be accompanied by photographs or other illustrations, but if they are not, and they are desirable, they are obtained at whatever cost.

Every mail brings in letters from many of the special correspondents in various parts of the United States, Canada, Mexico, South America and the old world. It would be folly to print all of them. The readers of The Sunday Journal couldn't read them all if they were to read continuously from breakfast time Sunday until breakfast time Monday. Editing a Sunday newspaper is not so much the correcting of grammatical errors as it is the culling of the best stories from all that come in, and arranging the paper to secure typographical excellence.

The Sunday Journal's experience has proved that the people appreciate a paper in which their Sunday reading is carefully selected and handled, more than a paper that sends a mass of stories, neither new nor interesting, to the composing room and slaps them into the paper every-which-way, hoping to make the readers believe that they are "hot stuff" because they are under big, black headlines.

The correspondents of The Journal, in the past, have established a reputation for this paper by their enterprise and accuracy. Since the Sunday Journal was started this corps has been greatly enlarged, and journalists of education and experience have been established in all the principal European cities. The London correspondent, besides writing many interesting special articles each week, reads the London newspapers very carefully for us, transmitting to our office all stories that may be of interest in the northwest. Certainly, since the Sunday Journal was established the people of this section have been brought into closer touch with the interesting people and events of the old world, and have a broader view of affairs in consequence.

How the Paper Is Put Together

Saturday night sees the actual making-up of The Sunday Journal. Then, in an incredibly short time, the seventy or eighty pages of the paper are made up, stereotyped and printed. But in The Journal office the paper is not "thrown together." Readers have been kind enough to write us about the excellent order in which the many sections and departments are arranged, and the careful preparation which is manifested in the neatness of the paper. This is possible because The Sunday Journal is well organized, with every one of its hundreds of details carefully studied out, and all plans made, so that when the time comes it is put together, necessarily with rapidity, but also with precision.

Night has come. The dusky halls of the editorial floor resound with the ticking of many telegraph instruments that are telling the news from all parts of the continent and the world. In the shadow of their hooded electric lights the managing editor, the telegraph editor, the city editor, the northwest editor, the political editor, the market editor and others are writing and clipping and hurrying to accomplish what seems to be a matter of life or death with them. Into the local room rush reporters who turn on the lights over their desks and begin writing as against time.

Where the News Comes From

Let us linger over the telegraph editor's desk—we may here see how the news comes in from all the world. Office boys rush in with long slips of typewritten copy which lay the whole eventful world before the eyes of the editor. The slips are the telegraphic bulletins of happenings thruout the world. The editor orders all stories of interest, and when they come a few minutes later he decides which of them readers of The Journal may be interested in and how much space they should be given. This judgment he has to make on a thousand stories every Saturday night. He edits them carefully and writes the head-lines which on this paper are always intended to be commensurate with the importance or interest of the story.

Near the telegraph editor's desk is that of the northwest editor, who is in constant telegraphic and telephonic communication with all the cities and towns in the northwestern states. The bulletins come to him as they do to the telegraph editor, and he selects the best news of his territory for Journal readers.

The Round-up of the World's News Completed

On the top floor of the building a score of the marvelous machines that "set type" are talking, and their metal speech is being hurried into the waiting forms by a dozen men who work under the direction of the editor. A page finished, it is stereotyped and cast and the cylindrical form is locked into position in the great presses. Then another—and another.

The telegraph instruments are silent now. Connections with all the principal cities of the United States and Canada, and thru New York with the cities of the old world, are still open, but the grand round-up of the world's news has been completed. The local room is deserted—Minneapolis is asleep.

The last hot metal is taken from the machines and the last pages made up. The last form is locked in its place. Then, inkwet, the papers come rolling from the press. They are hurried into the mailing room. Wagons and carriers are in waiting to take them to the trains and homes in Minneapolis. And at breakfast you have the result of a week's work of an army of trained men,
