MONTREAL, QUE., July 29.—Steady pitching by Leon Cadore together with some gilt-edged fielding by the locals' defense, and a brace of timely swats, enabled the Royals to make it three out of four from Richmond in the final game of the series to-day. The final score was 3 to 1, which, all things considered, is a fair enough index of the play.

Russell was in hard luck. He pitched a nice game of ball, and so far as hits go, had an edge on the local mound man, but the team did not play with much pep behind him, and Harrington's lack of experience behind the bat also damaged his chances. The locals swiped six bases on Dunn's result backstop, which gives them a grand total of seventeen successful pilfers for the series. It is evident that a reliable catcher is one of Jake's most pressing needs.

Charley Pick, whose thumb was smashed in yesterday's game, saw the contest from the stand. Pick will have with the team to-night and will probably go home to rest up. Fewster sub-bed for Pick, and played a good game. The shift necessitated a rearrangement of the batting orders of Russell and Bowley and Devlin moved up to fourth place, while Dunn's exchanging Thompson and Fewster in center gives us the center fielder we need so much.

The Climbers made it three in a row in Jake's way for the Tigers's scalps, taking the game by a good, good score, and the Jake's boys had good blood and fine pitching, and fielding and batting behind them. Jake's boys got the pitching and did a fair share of batting, and the Climbers, who looked from the start like a team of all stars, a team of champions, a team of players and chief players, got every thing back and a little more besides. Pick was a player the fans miss, and he was a player the fans miss most when he was not there.

The Climbers had a chance at the first inning when Crane drew one foot ball, Strange forced the Crane, Thompson fanned, Bates walked, Jordan fanned, Beville walked, Dunn walked, Harrington walked, Russell fanned. Bases full, two out. Dunn's chance to clear the bases with a hit was good, but he failed to connect, and the Tigers got out of it.

Crane, Strange and Thompson were the Climbers' best men at the bat, and Crane was the best man in the field. Crane made a fine catch of a fly ball, and made a good throw to first, and he made a good throw to second, and he made a good throw to third, and he made a good throw to home, and he made good in every way he could. Crane was the best man on the field, and he was the best man at the bat, and he was the best man on the bases, and he was the best man in the box score, and he was the best man in the game.

Russell was the best man on the mound, and he was the best man in the box score, and he was the best man in the game. Russell had good stuff, and he had good control, and he had good luck. He had good luck when he was in the hole, and he had good luck when he was out of the hole, and he had good luck when he was in the hole and out of the hole. He had good luck when he was in the hole and out of the hole, and he had good luck when he was in the hole and out of the hole, and he had good luck when he was in the hole and out of the hole, and he
