FAMOUS OLD TREE TO BE REMOVED FROM STREET

Found to Be Very Badly Decayed and in Dangerous Condition.

IS WELL-KNOWN LANDMARK

Administrative Board Signs Its Death Warrant After Hearing From City Nurseryman Hann—Tree on North Harvie Street Also to Go.

Found to be badly decayed internally and held to be a standing menace to life and limb, the Administrative Board yesterday ordered the cutting down of the famous old oak that for years unnumbered has stood in the roadway on Park Avenue, between Harrison and Morris Streets. People versed in wood-lore estimate that the tree is much more than 100 years old.

The cutting down of the old sycamore on Franklin Street, between Sixth and Seventh, brought expressions of regret from citizens who had grown up in its shadows. The same regret was apparent yesterday when the edict went forth from the City Hall that the giant oak of Park Avenue must fall.

The order for its execution was signed by the board only after a personal investigation to assure itself that to allow it to stand longer would be to subject citizens and traffic to serious danger. A large hole cut into its side revealed a hollow large enough to accommodate Commissioner Henry P. Beck, and Mr. Beck is not known as a bantam-weight.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR REMOVAL OF OLD TREE.

Much the same condition was found to obtain when the board examined the old cottonwood tree in front of 222 North Harvie Street. A contract was awarded to E. T. Pace for the cutting down and removal of both trees. He will receive $95 for cutting down the oak and $7.50 for laying low the cottonwood.

In an effort to minimize the danger growing out of the oak's position almost in the middle of the roadway, the board had recently hung electric lights from a cross arm nailed to the tree. Its present condition of decay and disintegration, the board found, makes its removal "absolutely essential for the safety of the public."

To Mr. Beck's suggestion earlier this year that the hollow be filled with cement in order that the cutting down of the tree might be averted, City Nurseryman George D. Hann replied under date of October 27, in a letter to City Engineer Bolling, as follows:

"In complying with the Administrative Board and your instructions to clean out and fill with cement the decayed cavity in the large white oak tree in Park Avenue near its intersection with Boyd Street, I find in cleaning out this decay that the cavity is very much larger than what I had reported; in fact, it extends entirely into and through its heart wood, leaving its bage a complete hull, or shell, with decay extending into its roots.

"To leave this tree stand even if its lower base be filled with cement is exceedingly dangerous. The tree has a spread overhead of over fifty feet, and standing on a base of five feet, with the uncertainty of the extent of the decay into its roots, it can easily be seen that in the least variation from its upright position by high winds it will be brought down on the roofs of the residences near-by.

"In view of these facts I would advise its removal as soon as possible."

Bradstreet's.

NEW YORK, October 29.—Bradstreet's trade review for the week to-morrow will say:

The trade and industrial stream is running fuller, and in some cases is out of its banks. Warm weather is a drawback temporarily to retail trade the country over, but helps the drying of corn and the threshing of wheat, now much delayed.

Jobbing trade is more active, and industry shows a still speedier pace, with some hitherto lagging lines, such as lumber, especially at the South, naval stores, coal, jewelry and shoe manufacturing reported making better progress.

Features of the week are increasingly cheerful reports from the South, despite a decline in cotton; enlarged shipments of wheat at the Northwest, better collections at the South, Northwest and Southwest; increased reorder business for fall, indicating past overcautious buying; expansion of railway traffic East, West and South; growing evidence of congestion of railway cars, motive power and terminals at and near New York; increased scarcity of vessel tonnage; continued activity in the stock market, despite enormous realizing on home and foreign account; the booking of the largest single order for woolen cloth (for export), in the history of American manufacture; the largest sales of wool in many months at Boston; the expansion of demand for steel beyond the ability of mills to readily produce, and renewed weakness of foreign exchange, which feels the pressure of an export merchandise movement surpassing all previous experience.

Even at this date, it is evident that October will see set up new high record totals for bank clearings, iron and steel production, railway tonnage, export trade in a myriad of lines, excesses of exports over imports and sales of speculative securities, the end of the month seeing a shifting of activity in the latter line from war stocks to railway shares.
